DEMOCRATS, AT ANNUAL FEAST, SOUND WAR CRY

Smith, Cox, Davis Lambaste G. O. P.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—One thousand leading Democrats, including national committeemen and committeewomen from every state, whooped it up here tonight in anticipation of what they look forward to as the certain election of a Democratic President next November.

They were dining in celebration of Andy Jackson's victory at New Orleans 117 years ago today, having been drawn to Washington for the meeting tomorrow of the Democratic national committee, which will fix the time and place for holding the national convention to name the party candidates and write the platform.

The Jeffersonians heard their three living candidates for President survey a world that is out of joint and prescribe measures to set it right, incidentally suggesting the course the party should pursue to reach the White House.

Wilson's Widow Leads Cheers.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, seated between Democratic National Chairman John J. Raskob and Al Smith, titular head of the party, repeatedly led the demonstrations of approval that greeted the denunciations of the Republican record and the promises of better times under Democratic auspices.

The visiting Democrats heard Mr. Smith, the candidate of 1928, propose a vast federal bond issue for construction of public works to relieve unemployment, condemning as ineffectual Mr. Hoover's policy of leaving such relief to the states and to private charity.

They heard him demand elimination of waste in federal expenditures, and they went wild with applause and cheers when in that well known raucous voice he suddenly demanded:

"And what about prohibition?"

He Answers Himself.

Merely, he went on, that the United States is spending 100 millions of dollars a year in a futile attempt to enforce prohibition and at the same time losing one billion dollars in revenue which otherwise would go toward reduction of the national treasury deficit.

The Jeffersonians heard James M. Cox of Ohio, the candidate of 1920, assert that "Bootlegger Chasing Uncle Sam, in becoming a local constable, has ceased to be statesman." They applauded his appeal to the South to support northern Democrats in their effort to reform prohibition, urging them that in so doing they would discharge the South's debt to the northern Democrats, who intervened to free the South from the "bloody shirt" reconstructionists.

"May we not now respectfully ask," said Mr. Cox, addressing the southerners, "that you call political ecclesiastics back to their pulpits that truth may go to your people?"

A Rift in the Harmony.

Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] took umbrage at Mr. Cox's appeal to the south to come to the rescue of northern Democrats on the prohibition issue. The senator and the 1920 candidate clashed as they were leaving the dining room at the conclusion of the speeches. Senator Glass accused Mr. Cox of invoking sectionalism in his address and said he would have more to say about the matter when the national committee meets tomorrow.

The Democratic leaders heard John W. Davis, the candidate of 1924, plead for the return of the party to militant championship of local self-government whether it be in "prohibition, or education, or social services."

"Let the federal government," he said, "remain the aid, but no longer be a Jacob the supplanter, of the states."

Roosevelt Stays Away.

Nearly all of the Democratic presidential possibilities so far catalogued were on hand for the dinner with the exception of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Owen D. Young of New York and Newton D. Baker of Ohio. In addition to the three former nominees and Speaker Garner there were Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Melvin A. Traylor of Chicago, and former Gov. Harry Byrd of Virginia.

The only avowed candidate present was Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, whose boom was launched at the Concord club dinner in Baltimore last night. Both Mr. Cox and Mr. Davis disclaimed in their speeches any notion of being again the party

Takes Washington by Surprise.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Ambassador Charles G. Dawes tonight announced that he would resign his position at London and retire to private life at Chicago. A short statement issued after he had departed by train for his Evanston home carried the cryptic information that he would retire as soon as the "general work" of the approaching disarmament conference at Geneva is completed.

Ambassador Dawes leaves for Geneva Jan. 20 as chairman of the American delegation. From his statement today it is assumed he will remain at the conference for possibly a month and then return to the British capital to wind up his affairs preparatory to reentering the banking field in Chicago in March.

Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, is expected to assume the chairmanship of the arms delegation when Dawes retires and may become ambassador to Great Britain.

Surprise to Hoover.

The retirement of Gen. Dawes came as a surprise to President Hoover as well as to official Washington. The President only learned of the general's decision two days ago, when the former vice president arrived to talk over details of American participation in the parley. Even Mr. Hoover did not know when the announcement was to come.

The suddenness of the ambassador's declaration, together with the brevity and the lack of comment from the White House, which ordinarily would have issued the announcement, aroused widespread speculation as to the exact intentions of Gen. Dawes and the reasons for his retirement.

In many quarters it was thought that the general was sending up a trial balloon to see how it would perform in the political cross currents preceding the 1932 national convention. Those taking this view asserted that he could easily have dispelled all rumors by adding a few words to his statement.

How News Was Sprung.

The first news that a resignation was imminent came when Ross Bartley, a former secretary of Mr. Dawes, called newspapermen and advised them an important announcement would be out shortly. At 7 o'clock he told reporters that Ambassador Dawes had given him the statement at noon, with the injunction it was not to be given out until his train had been out of Washington three hours. The statement reads:

"I shall be in Chicago only for a few days, as I must be in Washington to discuss with the other members of the American delegation to the disarmament conference our coming work at Geneva on Feb. 2. Our delegation will sail on Jan. 20.

Announces His Plans.

"After I have completed the general work which our government has in mind for me at Geneva as chairman of the American delegation I do not expect to remain for the technical work, which will be taken up conjointly with the disarmament experts.

"I shall then resign as ambassador to Great Britain and return to Chicago, where I will take up my old work as a banker and become chairman of the board of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. After a long absence in official positions I am looking forward to the renewal of my old associations and to life as a private citizen of Chicago."

Speculation as to who will succeed Mr. Dawes at the court of St. James developed immediately after the announcement was made. If Ambassador Gibson does not get the post, the possibility exists that the President will select Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania, former ambassador to Italy, or Senator David A. Reed, [Rep., Pa.].

Has Denied Political Ambitions.

Gen. Dawes has frequently denied any wish to campaign again for Vice President or, as has been suggested, for the presidency. But these denials were discounted by today's news. Reports were circulated that the ambassador intended to run against the President on a ticket representative of the agrarian west, anti-pacifism and anti-internationalism.

Circulated reports that the Dawes retirement had resulted from a rift with the President on international matters, especially the White House policies toward war debts and repara-

BANDITS WAIT IN HOME; SEIZE 5 AS PRISONERS

Three bandits took possession of the apartment of Harold R. Goodheart, an insurance man, 5202 Ingleside avenue, for two hours last night and, one by one, seized as prisoners his wife, himself, his daughter, his father, and a friend. They stole loot valued at $1,200.

At the same time two robbers concealed themselves in the apartment of Miss Hazel Alexander, 1250 Stone street, and seized her when she returned. They took a diamond ring, valued at $3,600, a wrist watch costing $1,200, and $8. They escaped after cutting the telephone wires.

In the Goodheart holdup two bandits appeared first. After entering the apartment and menacing Mrs. Tillie Goodheart, who was alone, they admitted their accomplice through a rear door. One of the thieves guarded Mrs. Goodheart with a butcher knife.

At 10 o'clock Harold Goodheart appeared. Five minutes later Miss Dorothy Fraser, 2524 Lewis street, Blue Island, a friend, arrived. Next came Adelaide Goodheart, a daughter, and a few minutes later Rayfield Goodheart of Los Angeles, father of Harold. All were locked in a laundry room.

LONDON REPORTS BERLIN TO INSIST ON CANCELLATION

(Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.)

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A dramatic change in the reparations situation came tonight with a report that the ambassadors of the various creditor governments had received an official intimation from the German government that it will refuse to accept anything at the coming Lausanne conference short of a final settlement which includes complete cancellation of all reparations for all time.

The German declaration, it is suggested here, was carefully prepared in consultation with certain London financiers interested in the cancellation of reparations so they might have a clear field for collection of private debts from Germany.

70% OF FINLAND'S VOTE WET, FINAL TALLY REVEALS

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Tabulation of the total vote in Finland's prohibition referendum tonight showed the following results:

Total vote, 774,487, of which 337,413 were women.

For continuing the present law, 217,208, or 28.1 per cent of the total.

For modification to permit light wines and beer, 10,947, or 1.4 per cent.

For repeal, 546,332, or 70.5 per cent.

The total number of women voting for repeal was 226,820, or 67.3 per cent of the total women's vote.

U. S. Drys Pose as Friends to Trap a Widow

Mrs. Ruth Oldridge, 36 years old, a widow, and until recently the proprietor of a floral shop in the Medinah Athletic club, took the witness stand before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday to defend herself on a charge of selling liquor in her apartment at 539 Brompton place.

U. S. COMMISSIONER EDWIN WALKER.

"It was the night of Dec. 29," she began. "Four men called at the apartment, claiming to be old friends of my roommate, Miss Elda Beck. She was out at the time, so I asked them to sit down and wait."

The visitors doffed their overcoats and settled down for a chat, Mrs. Oldridge said. She had tuned in the radio and was participating in the conversation when one of the four said he was thirsty. The others joined him.

Brings Out Gin Bottle.

"I had ordered a bottle of gin for New Year's," Mrs. Oldridge admitted. "I didn't want to seem inhospitable to Miss Beck's friends, and I brought it out. There was no ginger ale, so one of the men telephoned the corner drug store and paid the delivery boy, who brought six bottles.

"They began gulping down highballs with surprising speed. I was beginning to worry over Miss Beck's absence when one of the men began calling me 'Baby' and told me he could go for me in a big way.

"It was pretty crude and I showed my resentment, but he kept it up until I showed him a photograph of my 19 year old son, who recently died. Soon afterwards they left, saying they would return to see Miss Beck some other time. They were back next morning, showed their badges, and said I was under arrest as a bootlegger. Then I fainted."

Agent Corroborates Story.

Agent Stanley Crellin took the stand and identified himself as leader of the raid on Mrs. Oldridge's apartment. He corroborated Mrs. Oldridge's story in most essentials, even to the conduct of the member of the party who called Mrs. Oldridge "Baby," whom he identified as Agent Bernard Schaffer. He added one important detail.

"When the boy came with the ginger ale I gave him a $5 bill," Crellin said. "He handed me the change and, in his presence, I gave it to Mrs. Oldridge. It was in payment for the drinks."

The delivery boy, Charles Braasch, 16 years old, was called to testify. He was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Alfred W. Bosworth.

"I remember delivering the ginger ale," he said, "but the man didn't give the change to Mrs. Oldridge. I saw him put it back in his own pocket."

"You little ——," the agent shouted. "You've ruined my case. I'll put you on the spot for this."

Tells Story to Walker.

The bewildered boy shrank back. When the agent had released him he hurried to his father, Henry Braasch. Father and son told the story to Mrs. Oldridge's attorney, Paul R. Simon, who related it immediately to Commissioner Walker.

"If that agent did this thing he should be disciplined," the commissioner said. "I have no control over the conduct of agents outside this courtroom, but I have my own opinion of such tactics. I don't like the appearance of this case."

Over the protest of Assistant District Attorney Bosworth the commissioner continued the hearing to Jan. 16 and instructed Mr. Bosworth to produce Agent Schaffer at that time. As the principals left the courtroom Agent Crellin espied reporters talking to the delivery boy, and interposed.

"It was all a mistake," he told the boy. "I lost my temper in the heat of the case. I'm sorry for the threats. Now, don't tell these fellows anything for the paper."

AMERICAN WIFE SUES FOR SEPARATION FROM TITLED ENGLISHMAN

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Almeric Hugh Paget, wealthy British capitalist, who is Baron Queenborough, has been sued in the Supreme court here by his American wife, Edith Starr Paget, for a separation on the grounds of cruelty, inhuman treatment and abandonment.

The suit was disclosed today when Lady Paget took steps to have a receiver appointed for property in this state owned by her husband as security for any award of alimony that may be made to her.

Lady Paget is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Starr Miller of Fifth avenue, New York, with whom she now is living, and a niece of the late Mrs. Robert Goelet. She and Baron Queenborough were married in 1921.

Mikado Orders Tokio Cabinet to Stay on Job

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 9.—(Saturday.)—Emperor Hirohito declined at 10:10 a. m. today to accept the resignation of Premier Inukai. He ordered the cabinet to remain in office.

TOKIO, Jan. 9.—(Saturday.)—(AP)—Japan may propose revision of the nine-power treaty to make more clear the definition of "administrative integrity," it was stated on good authority today. The proposal for revision would be made, it was said, at a conference to be called to consider the present situation. The recent representations of Secretary of State Stimson to Japan on the Manchurian question were based partially on the nine-power treaty's provisions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 8. — Startling events crowded upon one another in rapid succession here today.

The American memorandum invoking the nine power treaty and the Kellogg anti-war pact against the war in Manchuria, which the government took calmly but which shocked the public, had scarcely been received when a report, which the police endeavored to suppress but failed, seeped out shortly after noon that an attempt had been made on the life of Emperor Hirohito. The life of the 30 year old mikado had been regarded as the most carefully guarded of any in the world.

Cabinet Submits Resignation.

Then followed an extraordinary urgent meeting of the cabinet of Premier Inukai, which lasted five hours and which resulted in the resignation of the entire government. The cabinet in Japan regards itself as responsible for the safety of the emperor.

Later this afternoon the police lifted part of the censorship, permitting publication of the name of the emperor's assailant. His name was given as Li Honsho, alias Shokiki Asayama, 32 years of age, a Corean coolie born at Seoul.

According to the official report, Li at 11:44 a. m. hurled something looking like a hand grenade at the imperial retinue, which was returning from the new year's military review at the Yogogi parade ground, outside Tokio.

Fifty Police at Scene.

Indicating that the attempted assassination had been well thought out, Li took a post directly in front of the new metropoli n police headquarters and just outside the entrance to the palace, where, apparently, the guards and police expected danger the least. At least fifty policemen were at the spot, all facing the crowds. The police were the only persons permitted to turn their ba ks towards the ruler.

As the retinue approached, led by a squadron of the mounted imperial guard, Li hurled the missile at the second carriage. The emperor's carriage was the third. Either Li made a mistake or he carefully timed the grenade to explode a few seconds after the passing of the second carriage.

The bomb exploded under the rear

YOUNG WIFE'S MOTHER SEIZED IN DEATH CAR

Honolulu Guarded; Fear New Riots.

BY CLIFFORD GESSLER.

HONOLULU, Jan. 8.—Honolulu police today formally charged Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, New York and Washington society woman, with first degree murder. The couple are accused of kidnaping and killing Joseph Kahahawai, a young Hawaiian, one of five men who had been tried for the rape of Mrs. Thalia Massie, the naval lieutenant's wife, and Mrs. Fortescue's daughter. A third person, E. J. Lord, an enlisted man of the navy, was also charged with a share in the murder.

The Hawaiian was lured this morning from a courtroom in the judiciary building into the street, seized and carried off in a sedan. Police later announced the discovery of his body in an automobile containing Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie and Lord.

Shot Through the Heart.

Kahahawai had been shot through the heart. His body had been stripped of its clothing and wrapped in a sheet.

The police said they believed the Hawaiian had been tortured before being killed. They are working on the theory that he was bound and submerged in a bathtub filled with water repeatedly in an effort to obtain a confession from him. Finally, they believe, he was shot while under the water.

Authorities said that they believed the torture of Kahahawai occurred in Mrs. Fortesque's house. Evidence of a struggle in the house was found. Blood was found on the bathroom floor and a sheet was missing from the bed. According to the police, two women neighbors of Mrs. Fortescue said that they heard a shot fired shortly after 9 a. m. today.

The police also found a coil of white rope similar to that tied around Kahahawai's body when he was found.

Woman at Wheel of Auto.

Police said Mrs. Fortescue drove the car in which the body was found. Soon after the capture of the three persons the police arrested Al Jones, another enlisted naval man, who, they said, had in his possession a fake warrant for arrest which is believed to have been used in luring Kahahawai to the death car.

In the hunt for the kidnapers the police took up the search near the eastern end of Honolulu. A radio description of the fugitive car was broadcast. George Harbottle, driver of a police car, saw the car a few minutes later speeding along the Waialai road. He gave chase and signaled another police car to follow.

Harbottle said he passed the sedan, stopped his car, and climbed to the road to order it to stop. Instead, he said, the woman drove by him.

Finds Body in Car.

"I took up the chase again, passed the other police car, and forced the sedan into an embankment," he said. "I found Kahahawai's body and made the arrests."

Strict precautions to prevent riots in Honolulu as a result of the shooting were taken at once by military authorities. The entire personnel of the navy has been restricted to the naval base at Pearl Harbor.

The home of Mrs. Massie, who was the victim of the rape, is heavily guarded by military and police forces. One hundred national guardsmen were ordered this afternoon to patrol Honolulu streets and territorial police are cooperating to prevent possible outbreaks of the prevailing bitter racial feeling.

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd increased the semi-military control of Honolulu by removing the high sheriff, John Lane, and placing two national guard officers in charge of the prison with a force of national guardsmen under their command.

Bar Enlisted Men from City.

Army authorities have prohibited enlisted men from visiting Honolulu. Officers have been instructed that they may visit the city only in case of necessity and then only in civilian clothes.

The navy apparently won the first move in the fight for custody of the murder defendants this afternoon when the Circuit court appointed Capt. Ward Wortman, U. S. N., special officer of the court and custodian of the prisoners. Lieut. Massie, Mrs. Fortescue, and Seaman Lord were taken at once to Pearl Harbor in naval automobiles. Mrs. Fortescue and a woman said to be her sister, were driven to the naval base in the automobile of Rear Admiral Yates Stirling Jr., commander of the naval base.

Arrested Sailor Attacked.

While Seaman Jones was being removed from the detective bureau, Low Perkins, said to be a friend of Kahahawai, attacked him with his fists. Perkins was arrested.

Sheriff Patrick Gleason had at first refused to turn the prisoners over to the naval authorities and the county attorney had indicated that he would seek a grand jury indictment for the purpose of keeping the case in the hands of civil authorities.

Police, upon relinquishing custody of the prisoners, announced that they had secured statements from them, but added that there had been no admission of guilt from any one of them, though they said their statements had conflicted.

Before leaving for Pearl Harbor Mrs. Fortescue told newspaper men that she had been downtown shopping and knew nothing of what happened to Kahahawai. Massie, Lord, and Jones refused to talk.

Pointed Out by Victim.

It was at the assault hearing last month that Mrs. Massie pointed out the Hawaiian who was slain today as the man who beat her and broke her jaw after he and his companions had criminally attacked her on a lonely road in the island on the night of Sept. 12.

The assault case, however, ended in a mistrial. Kahahawai, together with the four other defendants in the rape case, was then released on bail pending a new hearing. Kahahawai appeared at the judiciary building this morning to report his presence in Honolulu in compliance with court orders. According to police report, Kahahawai was seized, upon leaving the building, by two men after a woman had pointed him out. A few minutes later the police were informed of the kidnaping and the hunt for the Hawaiian and his captors began.

Last September Honolulu was thrown into a turmoil of excitement by the raping of Mrs. Massie. A tense racial situation developed, precipitating riots and near-riots in the islands.

Attacked on Lonely Road.

According to Mrs. Massie's testimony later at the trial, she was attacked shortly after leaving a tea party at the Ala Wai inn in the Waikiki district of Honolulu which she had attended with her husband and four friends. Drinks were served at the party, she said, and she walked out alone when she became tired of the affair.

She said a car drove up beside her as she was walking down a road near the inn, and she was seized by two men and forced into the car in which were three other men sitting.

"I was driven to an isolated spot and assaulted from four to six times," Mrs. Massie testified.

A jury which heard the trial deliberated 97 hours and finally failed to agree. Jurors after the trial expressed the opinion privately that evidence on both sides had been inconclusive.

Warned by Rear Admiral.

Rear Admiral George T. Pettingill, commander of the mine force, advised the Pearl Harbor naval base that he had warned Admiral Richard H. Leigh, commander of the battle fleet, that Honolulu was unsafe for wives of naval officers. The navy challenged the police system of Honolulu and declared it incapable of controlling criminal elements in the population.

At that time Rear Admiral Stirling declined to comment on the report that wives of naval officers were arming themselves, but admitted that the naval shore patrol had been increased in Honolulu. He deplored that a "certain portion" of the population did not take cases of assault on women seriously.

One of Group Kidnaped.

On Dec. 12, the Saturday night after the mistrial in the rape case, Horace Ida, one of the defendants, was kidnaped by twenty men and taken to the other side of Oahu island and beaten with leather thongs. He was threatened with death during an attempt to force him to confess the crime, but he maintained his innocence. A number of enlisted men of the navy appeared before him at police headquarters, but he was unable to identify any as his assailants.

A few nights later two sailors were attacked and beaten in the streets of Honolulu. They charged that they had been attacked by Hawaiians.

Last Saturday Honolulu was again stirred by a criminal attack on the white wife of a Honolulu merchant. She identified her assailant from a photograph as Louis Kaikapu, an escaped convict. After a two day man hunt, the Hawaiian was captured by military and police authorities. He confessed the crime and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Yesterday Rear Admiral Stirling informed Gov. Judd that he had been advised by the naval department at Washington that unless the tense racial situation was relieved before the fleet arrives for its February maneuvers no shore leave will be allowed.

Fortescue Family Prominent.

New York, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Maj. Granville Roland Fortescue, who had been living at the Army and Navy club here while his wife was living abroad, could not be reached tonight. At the club it was said he was not at home. He fought under Theodore Roosevelt as a corporal at San Juan Hill, where he was wounded, and later served in the Philippine insurrection. While Roosevelt was President, Fortescue was a military aide. He was a war correspondent until the world war broke out, when he returned to the American forces.

Mrs. Fortescue, who is a niece of Alexander Graham Bell, is well known in Long Island. Her social connections were extensive in London during the many years of her residence there While living on Long Island last summer she was active in the work of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

Wedding Social Event.

It was recalled here that the marriage of Mrs. Fortescue's daughter, Thalia, to Thomas Hedges Massie, then an ensign, was one of the outstanding events of the Washington social season in 1927.

Lieut. Massie's parents were Mr. and Mrs. William Massie of Winchester, Ky. He was graduated from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis in 1923 and served aboard the U. S. S. Lexington and the submarine S-43. He was promoted to lieutenant in June, 1930, and stationed in the Pacific.

MOONEY'S TRIAL CONDEMNED IN A FEDERAL REPORT

Wickersham Body Findings Brought to Light.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—A vigorous condemnation of the manner in which California officials prosecuted and convicted Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings for the alleged bombing of the San Francisco Preparedness day parade in 1916 was contained in the hitherto suppressed report of the Wickersham commission which came to light today in answer to a senate resolution.

The chief feature of the record which the department of justice turned over to the senate in response to a resolution introduced by Senators Cutting, insurgent Republican of New Mexico, Walsh [Dem., Mont.] and Costigan [Dem., Colo.] was a series of nine conclusions drawn up by the commission's section on "lawless enforcement of law," which was headed by Judge William S. Kenyon, former senator from Iowa.

Equally striking, and outright in its demand for Mooney's pardon, was a letter, embodied in the report and written to Judge Kenyon by Judge Franklin A. Griffin, who presided over the Mooney trial.

Summary of Report.

The section headed by Judge Kenyon, following its inquiry, reported to the full commission as follows:

That there was no scientific attempt made to discover the perpetrators of the crime; that the investigation was reduced to a hunt for evidence on which to convict Mooney and Billings

That the police and prosecution flagrantly violated the law in holding the defendants and searching their homes.

That the defendants were never properly identified.

That the prosecution did its utmost to arouse public indignation through the press and in its arguments in court.

Charge Witness Coaching.

That the prosecution knowingly vouched for perjured testimony and coached witnesses to a degree amounting to subordination of perjury.

That after the trials the disclosures casting doubt on the justice of the convictions were minimized and every attempt made to defeat the liberation of Mooney and Billings "by a campaign of misrepresentation and propaganda carried or by the officials who had prosecuted them."

In his letter to Judge Kenyon, Judge Griffin stated that he had "become convinced that the conviction of Mooney is a great miscarriage of justice."

Testimoney Termed False.

He continued: "It is now conceded by all that three of the four witnesses who testified to Mooney's participation in the crime testified falsely. They are the notorious Frank C. Oxman and the two Eadu women. Not only did they testify falsely but, in my opinion, they were willful and deliberate perjurers. The only other witness who connects Mooney with the crime is John McDonald. Having heard him testify, I think I can safely say that he convicted himself on the witness stand.

"I go farther and say that at the time of Mooney's trial nobody believed McDonald, and an analysis of his testimony clearly demonstrates, in my opinion, its falsity. Moreover, McDonald has himself admitted that he perjured himself and has been only recently condemned by the advisory pardon board of the governor of this state as a 'pathological liar.' In view of all this, it is a severe strain upon one's credulity to ask now that McDonald be given consideration.

Charges Photograph Concealed.

"Not only did these four witnesses perjure themselves, but the disclosures since the Mooney trial point almost conclusively to the fact that they were produced as witnesses with the knowledge that their testimony was false. At the time McDonald testified in the Billings case, there was in the possession of the district attorney and concealed by him a photograph showing Mooney's presence elsewhere than at the scene of the crime where McDonald placed him, and conclusively proving the falsity of McDonald's testimony. When the existence of this photograph became known to the defense McDonald's testimony was changed to meet the situation.

"The Edau women were produced with knowledge in the hands of the prosecution that they had theretofore and at the time of the bomb explosion given an entirely different account of their activities on the day of the tragedy than to which they testified in the trials of all the defendants. This was shown at the trials of Mrs. Mooney and Weinberg, who were speedily acquitted.

Witness Far Away, He Avers.

"Frank C. Oxman, who in my judgment convicted Mooney and who appeared in no other case, could not have learned the facts to which he testified except from those who were anxious for Mooney's conviction, and the later affidavit of Draper Hand, a police officer at the time, is corroborative of this conclusion. Oxman was not within 90 miles of the scene of the crime."

Mother-in-Law of Friml Files $48,000 Suit Vs. Him

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Mrs. Emily Baruch, mother-in-law of Rudolph Friml, Viennese composer, filed suit for $48,000 here today against Friml, demanding the money for care and maintenance of her granddaughter, Marie Louise Friml, over a period of years. Miss Friml is now 20 years old.

Quits State Board

C. W. HADLEY.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Gov. Emmerson tonight received the resignation of Charles W. Hadley, Wheaton, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission. It was taken under consideration, and probably will be accepted next week. While no announcement was made from the mansion, it is expected that G. Hale Gilbert, Mount Vernon, will be named chairman of the commission. Mr. Gilbert has been a member of the commission since the beginning of the Emmerson administration. In his resignation Mr. Hadley said:

"I desire to enter upon an undertaking that will make it impossible for me to give the position of chairman of the Illinois commerce commission the time that the duties of that office merit and require."

Mr. Hadley indicated some time ago that he would resign to become a candidate for attorney general.

tions, were denied in White House circles.

Officials close to the White House scoffed at reports that Mr. Dawes had political ambitions. They held that Ambassador Dawes wants to be in Chicago at a time when financial leadership is needed in the whole country, and when his services in arranging for the Chicago Century of Progress exposition next year would be of most value.

From all outward signs, Gen. Dawes was held in the highest esteem by officials of the state department and President Hoover. On many occasions, officials spoke highly of his work as a diplomat since he went to the court of St. James. Specially praised were his services during the moratorium period of last June and during the league's Manchurian discussion at Paris last fall.

In what appears to be a permanent retirement to private life, Gen. Dawes, at 66, is closing a notable public career, which began with prominent political activity in the McKinley campaign of 1896, took him to the front during the world war as director of purchase for the A. E. F., and brought him to the office of Vice President of the United States. As the first director of the budget under President Harding, he swept through the government departments and forced economy.

BANK OFFICERS SURPRISED.

The announcement of Gen. Charles G. Dawes was news to officials of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company last night. None of the senior officers had known of his plans, but they expressed satisfaction.

"You know, Gen. Dawes does things in a sudden way," Joseph E. Otis, chairman of the board, said. "We didn't know he had decided to come back to Chicago and the bank, but we will be delighted to have him back. His announcement comes as a most pleasant surprise.

"Gen. Dawes said he would resume his old position as chairman, did he? Good! That is my job now, but I'll be delighted to turn it over to him."

It was reported in the Chicago financial district that Gen. Dawes and members of his family, who are the largest stockholders in the Central Republic bank, within the last few months have increased their holdings. One estimate was that the Dawes interests have purchased an additional $1,000,000 worth of stock in the recent declining markets for the shares.

CARLSTROM ASKS STATE RIGHTS IN LIQUOR CONTROL

Gives Out Platform as He Opens Headquarters.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Attorney General Carlstrom opened his campaign for the Republican nomination for governor yesterday by establishing headquarters at the Hotel La Salle and issuing an outline of his platform.

This declaration of principles, which covered a number of subjects such as taxation, revenue reform, reapportionment, pardons and paroles and chain stores, was climaxed with a statement of his attitude on prohibition. He declared in favor of resubmission of the question to the states through state conventions and an amendment to the eighteenth amendment to permit each state, by referendum, to adopt liquor control laws safeguarded by restrictions against the saloon or similar institutions.

Custer Rumors Bring Action.

It was admitted in the Carlstrom camp that the attorney general's action at this time was prompted by developments indicating that Omer N. Custer of Galesburg may announce his candidacy for the governorship early next week. One of the reports in connection with the Custer movement has been that Carlstrom might withdraw. The attorney general acted promptly to silence those rumors. He had not intended to open headquarters until next week.

The Custer candidacy remained in status quo during the day. The former state treasurer was in Galesburg, where he declined to discuss the outlook for an announcement from him putting him either in or out of the race, but it is understood that he will hold some week-end conferences that may bring about a decision by Monday.

In a statement accompanying his platform, Carlstrom referred to the fact that in 1928 he withdrew from the governorship race in favor of Louis L. Emmerson in order to defeat Len Small. The attorney general implied that the whole story of that withdrawal had not been told and that he had been given assurance that this year he would receive the support of Emmerson, which now appears to be committed to Custer.

Claims Specific Promise.

"That was not an easy decision to make at that time," said the attorney general referring to his withdrawal, "but I then deemed it honestly for the best.

"I was given at that time definite and specific assurance that the way would be clear for me to seek the governorship in 1932. If it becomes necessary I shall give the details and facts of that conference."

In taking up the subject of prohibition Carlstrom said he felt his first attention was due to the subjects of taxation and economy, but that, although a state executive has little to do with prohibition except its enforcement, the dry laws are of such general interest that a candidate for major public office should give his views on this question.

"It is evident to every unbiased observer," his platform read, "that national prohibition has not thus far succeeded in its original objective. Notwithstanding hundreds of millions of federal funds expended in efforts toward enforcement, conditions exist in most parts of the nation through illicit sale and use of intoxicants that are condemned by unbiased, thoughtful citizens.

Declares for Resubmission.

"I favor the right of the people to a resubmission of the whole question of national prohibition to the states through state conventions which would afford opportunity for direct legal expression from the voters of each state.

"I would also favor the relaxation by amendment of the 18th amendment to allow individual states to adopt, by referendum in such state, liquor control laws adequately safeguarded by restrictions which would prevent the opening of the flood gates through the open saloon or similar institution.

"This, it would seem to me, would afford a fair and constitutional means of testing methods of control such as the Canadian or Bratt systems, or other similar plan, and, if on trial, such plan should ultimately be rejected by such state, and such state should return to the acceptance of national prohibition, it would do so with the great majority of its people at least ready to support such national law."

Urges Real Estate Relief.

Discussing taxation, the attorney general declared for the relief of real estate and said a financial crisis has arisen in the state.

"The question of taxation in this state in the past," he continued, "has been a political football. The patience, ingenuity and resourcefulness of our foremost citizens have become exhausted. Banks and other financial institutions have reached the limit to which they dare go to extend further accommodation. The time has arrived for drastic and decisive action.

"Many tax spending bodies have engaged in a riotous orgy of waste and dissipation of tax funds. If the taxes levied upon our people are not constantly to be increased a program of the greatest economy must be devised and rigidly practiced."

In addition to economy, the platform also pledged earnest support for the consolidation of local governments, for an amendment to the revenue article of the constitution, and legislative relief for the financially stricken units of government.

WINS ALIMONY

HOOVER NOMINATES JUDGE BRIGGLE FOR U. S. DISTRICT JUDGE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—President Hoover today sent to the senate for confirmation the nomination of Judge Charles G. Briggle of Springfield, Ill., for appointment as United States district judge in the southern district of Illinois. He is now serving as state Circuit court judge.

Judge Briggle's nomination was indorsed by Justice Norman L. Jones of the Supreme court of Illinois. C. J. Doyle, chairman of the Republican state central committee of Illinois; L. O. Vaught, Jacksonville, Fla., and E. J. Brundage, Chicago attorney.

The President also announced that he had sent the senate the nomination of Brig. Gen. Thomas Stevens Hammond of the Illinois National Guard for appointment as brigadier general in the reserve corps.

COURT ASSAILS WIFE'S $37,000 ALIMONY PLEA

Grants Mrs. Haskell $1,000 Monthly.

Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday characterized as "excessive" the demands of Mrs. Lila Hotz Haskell for $37,000 annual alimony and $25,000 temporary solicitors' fees in her suit for separate maintenance. Her husband, Frederick Tudor Haskell, a 77 year old banker, living at 1200 Lake Shore drive, appeared to oppose her motion. Mrs. Haskell is 52 years old. Her first husband was Robert Hotz, Chicago capitalist.

"The very fact that any man has sums as large as these to bandy in the courts is enough to cause unrest among the hundreds of men who are seeking the source of their next meals," Judge Trude said. "Certainly it does not look well for the courts or for attorneys to flaunt such amounts of money in the face of the public. Such things cause social disturbances."

Gets $1,000 Monthly Alimony.

The court then ruled that Mrs. Haskell should be paid $1,000 a month alimony from last Dec. 21, when the petition for temporary alimony pending the final hearing of the suit was filed. Mr. Haskell was directed to pay $5,000 attorney's fees on account to Arthur Bachrach, Mrs. Haskell's lawyer, and was also ordered to pay the court and stenographer's costs of $218, which have accrued to the present time.

Attorney Bachrach read at length from information gathered in depositions of more than 300 pages of testimony taken before a master in chancery in support of his motion for alimony. Mr. Haskell, he said, has an annual income of $130,580 from his total property, including stocks, bonds and real estate, of $5,621,496. For 1930, the attorney added, Mr. Haskell paid $16,000 income tax.

Tables of expenditures for travel, amusement, clothes, and household expenses during the years when Mr. and Mrs. Haskell resided together were cited to show their manner of living.

Has Income of Own.

"The minimum upon which Mrs. Haskell can live," Attorney Bachrach asserted," is $50,000 a year. From her own property at this time she receives approximately $13,000 annually. Mr. Haskell should provide $37,000 to maintain her."

Attorney David O. Dunbar, who represented Mr. Haskell, charged that Mrs. Haskell's suit was not filed in good faith. Her testimony, which he read from the depositions, tended to show that her charges of cruelty were untrue, he charged. It was significant, he added, that both in Paris in 1929 and in their home last August on the two occasions when alleged acts of cruelty occurred, Mr. and Mrs. Haskell were alone.

Her Estate $100,000.

Mrs. Haskell's personal estate he listed at more than $100,000, excluding $130,000 worth of furs, jewelry and paintings.

"Mr. Haskell's wife," he said, "has an income of $1,000 a month." Why, a princess of the royal blood could live decently, respectably and even comfortably in Chicago with this money. Certainly there would be a legion of women who would rise to refute any statements to the contrary.

"Mrs. Haskell does not need any alimony until this matter has been adjudicated. Then her rights to her husband's property can be determined by the court."

Judge Trude then announced that he could not agree with the views of either attorney. He felt, however, that Mrs. Haskell's wishes for alimony were "excessive."

After his ruling he informed the attorneys that he would be unable to hear the suit, since it was a contested matter. Because his calendar is full the case will be transferred to Judge Craig Hood.

PASTOR CONVICTED AT CHURCH HEARING ON SLANDER CHARGE

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Rev. Donald Grey Barnhouse, pastor of the Tenth Presbyterian church and nationally known radio preacher, has been found guilty of slandering fellow ministers and with violation of his ordination vows.

The penalty of admonition or censure for his offenses before the Philadelphia presbytery at its next meeting was demanded by the unanimous vote of the judicial commission of the Presbyterian synod. The verdict of the commission of nine ministers and six elders from various parts of the state was made public last night.

Seventeen Philadelphia ministers complained that Mr. Barnhouse had made remarks against them. The verdict last night concluded a three year investigation.

ST. JOSEPH BANK TO OPEN TODAY; 2 IN TWIN CITIES

Benton Harbor, Mich., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Formal opening of the People's State bank tomorrow morning, with a public reception at night, gives St. Joseph home banking facilities for the first time since September.

Therese Briggs, who was "Miss St. Joseph" in the 1931 blossom festival, will throw open the bank's doors at 9 a. m. The bank replaces the Commercial National bank which closed Sept. 25, due to large withdrawals.

A citizens' parade will mark the opening, which gives the twin cities two banks, Benton Harbor's Farmers and Merchants' National bank having survived when others closed.

The new People's bank has a $50,000 capital, $10,000 surplus, and $2,500 contingent fund. There are 125 stockholders.

BRIDGE VICTORY TO CULBERTSON, AND THAT'S THAT

Card Marathon Margin Is 8,980 Points.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—The bridge marathon of Park avenue played itself out tonight, with Mr. and Mrs. Ely (Bet You a Thousand) Culbertson 8,980 points ahead at the end of the final 150th rubber Sidney (Horatius) Lenz had failed to hold the bridge.

"Aces, all aces," complained the elderly Mr. Lenz, who also had something to say about kings and queens.

Mr. Culbertson remarked vaguely of distribution and Mrs. Culbertson just sat and beamed.

Outside the room in the Waldorf Astoria hotel, where the last half of the thirty day contest had been played, a milling throng of stiff, white shirts and ermine coats rubbed elbows with the plain or garden variety of kibitzers. The circus atmosphere clung to the bridge marathon like the scent of beer to a speakeasy. It was a great night and a great windup and one could write his testimonial in the thick cigaret smoke.

Waddling dowagers edged their way down the corridor with the vanity of subway line smashers, past the "absolute silence" placard and on into the peeping room adjoining the holy of holies.

Bearded gentlemen trailed them and there were ohs and ahs and such exclamations as "Mr. Lenz played an ace" or "Mrs. Culbertson took a drink of water." Nobody smiled, and a laugh probably would have brought police reserves. These folks take their bridge seriously, and the only hand clapping was done on the backs of the winners after it was all over.

Reminiscent of a Wake.

There was something vaguely reminiscent of a prosperous, highly successful wake about the entire proceedings. There was tiptoeing and shush shushing in the front rooms; and loud but serious talk further down the corridor. One entire wing of the fifth floor of the Waldorf had been set aside for the tournament. The reporters, a ministerial appearing lot of fellows, had a press room, a wire room, and a private card room. Across the hall the ever growing group of ghost writers had even more sumptuous quarters and the long corridor was lined with chairs and sandwich tables.

Mr. Lenz had permanent quarters there and as far away as possible on the same floor the Culbertsons had temporary rooms.

Lackeys in braided uniforms bumped telegraph messenger boys, sleek score keepers ran back and forth chalking up the results with the alacrity of a stock exchange tabulator.

Honorary Kibitzers, Too.

Great corded ropes blocked off the entrance to the Lenz wing and no one was admitted unless they asked to be admitted. There were thirty stenographers, three referees, and a lot of honorary kibitzers and about as many hotel servants as there were in the main lobby.

Every one was as tense as a new barbed wire fence when Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson sat down to play Mr. Lenz and Commander Winfield Liggett Jr., most successful of the Lenz partners. The tournament had been begun to test the values of Mr. Culbertson's system of bidding against Mr. Lenz's "official" style of play. Both teams had originated enough new bids to inaugurate a brand new sort of card game long before the last night of play. The game had become a cut-throat affair with the bridge publishing business as a stake.

Culbertson Takes Last.

Both sides played cautiously, probably for the first time, for Mr. Lenz was within striking distance, due to what some fans considered a letting down to make the game close by Mr. Culbertson. The Culbertson lead for the night fluctuated from 8,630 points to 7,400 points. The Lenz forces won the first two rubbers, then the Culbertsons picked up one. Mr. Lenz won another and Culbertson took the last, the sixth of the evening, and the 150th of the series.

A telegraph operator ran breathless from the wire room begging for the final score. "London papers are holding their last editions," he cried. The score was flashed to the British papers and possibly the editors went home. Nobody in the Lenz wing of the Waldorf went home, however.

Mr. Culbertson retired to his room to prepare a radio address. Commander Liggett announced for the second time that he considered it "silly" to term the affair a fair test of the two bidding systems. Mr. Lenz declared he had no alibis.

A Delightful Opponent.

"Sidney, you've been a delightful opponent," remarked Mrs. Culbertson in her best drawing room manner, when Mr. Lenz offered his congratulations, but it was noticeable that there was no handshaking nor exchange of congratulations between Mr. Culbertson and Mr. Lenz.

The contest has occupied twenty sessions and 879 hands were dealt. There was a fresh pack of cards for every hand. The cards were supplied gratis for "the publicity and prestige." The quarters in the Waldorf also were donated for "the publicity and the prestige."

The bridge tournament itself was staged for "the publicity and prestige." As an indication that contract bridge has won a place in the sport world along with wrestling, prize fighting and horse racing, it became apparent tonight that a "return match" was likely.

The recent whirlwind finish of the Lenz team, the fact that at the 20th session honor tricks stood Culbertson, 3,500, and Lenz, 3,501, and the further fact that the tournament had been a success, may have had something to do with Mr. Lenz's answer when asked about "doing it over again."

"It's up to Ely," said the old master.

Mr. Culbertson has said that, win, lose, or draw, he is through with tournament bridge. He did not repeat the statement.

The 879 hands will find their way into a book by Mr. Culbertson. Each hand has been carefully preserved in its original state, and the book will be rushed through to the printers. Mr. Culbertson also won eight wagers totaling $3,050, against which he had risked $9,200. The money will be given to the New York infirmary.

Culbertson, who has been making about $300,000 a year out of bridge, expects to greatly increase his revenue by his success in the present contest.

Final Night's Play.

Rubber.

145—Six hands, won by Lenz; Culbertson now plus 8,360.
146—Five hands, won by Lenz; Culbertson now plus 7,920.
147—Five hands, won by Culbertson; Culbertson now plus 8,800.
148—Eight hands, won by Lenz: Culbertson now plus 7,400.
149—Seven hands, won by Culbertson; Culbertson now plus 7,910.
150—Four hands, won by Culbertson; Culbertson now plus 8,980.

ITALIAN CONSUL SHOT IN PARIS BY STUDENT; 'BOMB PLOT' BARED

PARIS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Giuseppe Gentile, Italian consul general, was wounded today by an Italian student who fired on him as he entered the consulate. Police arrested a man named Michael Richichi, who, they said, fired on the consul. Police said he told them he had shot the consul because that official had interfered with his business as a tutor. Physicians said the consul's condition was not serious.

Police today were also holding three Italians who were found to have a quantity of explosives in their possession. An investigation was begun immediately to determine whether they may have been engaged in anti-Fascist activities.

Reports from Nice said a package was discovered there containing eight bombs and a number of detonators and an investigation was under way to determine whether this discovery had any connection with the Paris case.

Briand Quits; French Cabinet Also Is Expected to Resign

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 8 [By telephone to London to escape French censor].—The French cabinet practically fell of its own weight today, and coincidently Aristide Briand, most famous figure in French politics and one of the makers of post-war Europe, let it leak out that he is definitely through with public life.

Officially Premier Laval's government is attending to business as usual, with Foreign Minister Briand quietly "dying" at the Quai D'Orsay at only a slightly faster tempo than during the last six months.

But the decisions have been irrevocably taken, and the submission of the collective resignation of the cabinet as a formal gesture has been definitely fixed for next Wednesday, the day after the chamber of deputies convenes.

In Midst of Crisis.

The growing fears that the death of Minister of War André Maginot on Thursday and the illness of Briand would create a political muddle which might delay the reparations conference and even the Geneva disarmament conference are fully confirmed. France is in the midst of a ministerial crisis just as if Premier Laval had been overthrown by an adverse vote in the chamber instead of by the accidental collapse of the two mainstays of his cabinet.

The procedure is the same. There is the same maneuvering, the same dickering between parties, and the same laborious consultations between political leaders. And the new government will be forced to run the gantlet of the chamber to win a satisfactory vote of confidence.

See Only Two Changes.

For the moment any clear cut prediction is difficult. Following a consultation today between Premier Laval and President Doumer it was decided that Laval will be reappointed and that he will try to form a national union government, so that the French policy at the two international conferences may be assured of the support of all important parties.

It is almost a foregone conclusion that both the radicals and Socialists will refuse to collaborate. The death of Maginot deprives Laval of the support of the extreme right, which the war minister swung for him, and without Briand the left fringes of the center parties will outreach all discipline.

It is more than possible that Laval will find the task of harnessing all these wild forces too much for him. In that case President Doumer will ask some one else to form a cabinet. This would only increase the confusion and delay, and already many are calling for the dissolution of parliament and immediate elections.

So much for the political situation.

Behind the plush curtained windows of the Quai d'Osay has taken place the last act of a great historic tragedy. "Briandism" was killed at Versailles in the presidential election last May. The man Briand has been a walking ghost since, his health and prestige steadily failing. Some papers openly call him a traitor to his country.

Briand seems to have lost his fighting spirit. Two days ago, it is understood, he offered his portfolio to Laval. His subordinates at the Quai d'Orsay tried to hid the truth, but tonight it is no longer a secret. Latest reports are that Briand's condition is really becoming grave, owing to deficient heart action.

Censorship Is Revealed.

The little known fact that a censorship exists in France was discovered by THE TRIBUNE correspondent tonight when this cable was handed back by two cable companies.

While a few particularly objectionable phrases [from the French viewpoint] were pointed out by a French official at the cable companies' offices, which were then changed by the correspondent, he said that the whole text was dangerous. The only reason he could give was that the government would not like it.

First Newspaper Man to Use Typewriter Dies at 72

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Josiah D. Choate, 72, a newspaper man most of his life and for 20 years with the New York World, died today at his home after a heart attack. He laid claims to being one of the first newspaper men to use a typewriter, taking one to his desk in the World office in 1889 and learning to manipulate it in his spare time.

HUNGER MARCHERS' FARE BACK HOME PAID BY PENNSYLVANIANS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Nearly three hundred members of Father Cox's hunger march, stranded here when the trucks in which they arrived left without them yesterday, were sent home today by train on money contributed by several government officials from Pennsylvania.

The money for train fare and food on the trip was collected by Representative Clyde Kelly [Rep., Pa.]. He declined tonight to name the contributors to the fund, saying he had promised not to do so, but it is known that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon was among those who donated to the fund. Slightly more than $1,400 was collected from "three or four" Pennsylvanians to send the 278 marchers home, Representative Kelly stated tonight.

2 TRANSFUSIONS OF BLOOD SAVE HOLDUP VICTIM

Andrew F. Sender, 28 years old, 3325 South Oak Park avenue, Berwyn, a wholesale candy jobber, who was shot and seriously wounded last Saturday night when he resisted robbery by three men in front of 2893 Archer avenue, is recovering after two blood transfusions, it was said at the German Deaconess hospital last night. The second transfusion, given by his cousin, Edward Sender, 3700 South Paulina avenue, a University of Illinois medical student, has put him out of danger, according to Dr. Frank L. Sender. Sender was robbed a year ago by three men.

SHOOTS SELF; MAY DIE.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Charles Wicks, 22, of Rantoul, was near death in a hospital here tonight from a bullet wound incurred in what authorities said was an attempted suicide.

GIRL KIDNAPED IN HOME; POLICE HUNT FOR GANG

Mother Sees Abduction; Fears for Life.

Police yesterday were hunting for Anna Otis, 16 years old, an Austin High school girl, who was kidnaped from her home at 4749 Fulton street by a man known as a neighborhood simpleton. Mrs. Stella Otis, mother of the girl, was prostrated yesterday. She said she feared her daughter had been murdered. She told of the abduction, which occurred before her eyes last Wednesday night.

"Anna and I were in the kitchen talking," she said. "We have been in straitened circumstances and Anna was wishing she could find work to help the family out. Suddenly the door opened and Johnny came in."

Annoyer of Girl.

This "Johnny," Mrs. Otis said, was a hangeron about neighborhood poolrooms. He is about 30 years old, has only one eye, and is toothless. For months he has persecuted the pretty, flaxen haired Anna, the mother said, annoying the girl with his remarks and attentions.

"I screamed at the man to get out," Mrs. Otis said. "He called to Anna, 'Come along.' She started to run and he caught her by the arm. I grabbed him and he knocked me down. I was sick and could do no more. He dragged Anna out of the room and down the back steps. I heard an automobile drive away a minute later."

Neighbors told Mrs. Otis that two other men were in the car into which the girl was thrust.

Fears Girl Is Dead.

"I'm horribly afraid of what has happened to my girl," said the mother. "This neighborhood is honeycombed with beer flats and I'm afraid that she is being kept in one of them. I've had no word from her now for more than 48 hours, and my greatest fear is that she has been killed."

Mrs. Otis said that for several months a gang of young ruffians in the neighborhood has terrorized her and her family. Anna, the 16 year old daughter, won a beauty prize in a business men's association contest a few months ago, she revealed, and since then the girl has been continually annoyed.

"Anna hardly dared to go on the streets," the mother said. "This Johnny and his gang were always trying to get her to go on parties. When she refused they followed her home. They threw stones at the windows and broke several of them.

Police Hunt in Vain.

Austin police were notified of the kidnaping Wednesday night and have been searching for the man known as "Johnny" without success.

The girl was described as about five feet tall, with large, violet blue eyes, fair skin, long flaxen hair, weight about 95 pounds. She wore slippers, no stockings, and a blue dress when last seen.

The father of the girl, Edward Otis, was sent to Leavenworth penitentiary about six weeks ago by Federal Judge Barnes on charges of impersonating a prohibition officer.

There are five children in the Otis family in addition to Anna, the kidnaped girl. They are Frank, 18 years old; Edward, 13 years old; Marie, 10 years old; Francis, 4 years old, and Myrtle, 8 months old.

OPPOSE INCOME TAX AS PRICE OF FINANCE RELIEF

County Legislators Won't Be Coerced.

Downstate cannot coerce Cook county legislators into passing an income tax in return for favorable action on the bill to revise Chicago's assessing machinery, according to expressions yesterday.

E. J. SCHNACKENBERG.

"If that is the price the price is too high," said Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, recognized generally as the leader of the Cook county Republicans.

"What the downstaters are asked to give us wouldn't cost them a thing," he said, "whereas the income tax would aid them materially and give Chicago only a small return for what it would pay. And it is also true that if the assessing machinery is revised, it will probably aid in the collection of some $25,000,000 in taxes which Chicago owes downstate."

Democrats Oppose Tax.

Most of the Democratic leaders were in Washington, D. C., yesterday, aiding Mayor Cermak and Edward N. Hurley in their efforts to swing the Democratic national convention to Chicago and their opinions could not be had. It was recalled, however, that as many objections to passing the income tax came from their side of the house last Wednesday as were registered across the aisle by the Republicans.

Representative Charles J. Jenkins, south side Republican, proposed two amendments which were adopted by the house. These raise the exemptions for single persons from $1,000 to $1,500 and for married heads of families from $2,000 to $3,500, thus raising them to the level of the federal income tax exemptions.

These amendments brought a roar of protest from the downstate proponents of the bill. They had been "wounded" seriously, they said, by the motion of James T. Burns [Rep., Kankakee] to kill the bill outright by striking out its enacting clause and further tampering with it assumed the proportions of an "insult," in the words of one senator.

Smith Defends Tax Plan.

A plea for support of the income tax was made yesterday by Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural association, the body most interested in levying the impost.

Defending the measure against the charge that it is "an added tax," Mr. Smith said it became that "only for those who now own substantial amounts of intangible property from which they receive large incomes, but pay no taxes either on the property or income, and those who are enjoying substantial incomes from personal services, owning no tangible property and therefore paying no taxes.

A counter statement was that made by County Attorney Hayden Bell. "There are people in Chicago who pay little or no property taxes and have large incomes from untaxed sources," he said. "Such persons should pay taxes in some form and should be the objective of any income tax law, but another tax on the bent and breaking backs of the present burden bearers of Chicago is a price which Chicago cannot afford to pay."

Northwest side leaders called a citizens' meeting for tomorrow at 2 p. m. to talk over pending legislation in the interests of tax relief and the payment of municipal employés. The meeting will be held in the Shabbona park fieldhouse, 6900 Addison street, and will be addressed, among others, by City Controller M. S. Szymczak, Representatives Raymond T. O'Keefe, and Benjamin Adamowski, and by State Senators Arthur A. Huebsch and Thomas J. Courtney, the minority leader.

Total Savings in Teachers' Pay Is Raised to $4,485,000

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The school board's subcommittee on budget eliminated $2,462,331 yesterday from the educational budget. This brings the total budget cuts so far to $7,144,880, which is $1,582,520 short of a balanced budget, according to the trustees' reckoning.

To accomplish this result the trustees have reduced their pay rolls an estimated $4,485,670, and still have refrained from eliminating any of the so-called "fads and frills" of the educational system. Supt. Bogan has been too busy to prepare a list of the school "activities," so the "fads and frills" were not discussed yesterday.

Increase Load on Teachers.

Of the total pay roll saving $1,035,000 was retrieved by increasing the pupil load on the teachers. The teachers now in the service will be required to absorb the growth in the schools, for which the board would normally employ 300 high school teachers, 200 junior high school teachers, and 50 elementary teachers.

The remaining $3,450,670 of pay roll saving is to be accomplished by reducing the amount paid the employés. Their compensation is to be reduced by cutting salaries, compelling work without pay, reducing the amount of time to be employed and eliminating pay for holidays when no work is done.

No Pay for Holidays.

The teachers will not be paid for the ten holidays, Labor day, Columbus day, two Thanksgiving days, Lincoln's birthday, Washington's birthday, and so on. It was estimated by Superintendent Bogan this saving will total $1,800,000.

The week of the engineers, janitors, and other operating employés was limited to five days. This 26 days' saving per employé a year was placed at $655,000. The repair mechanics were cut down to four days a week, at an estimated saving of $351,933.

All of the employés attached to the superintendent's office are to be required to work 12 months for 11 months' pay. This saving is estimated at $54,340. The same rule is to apply to employés of the business office with a resultant saving of $51,200.

Teachers Lose Extra Pay.

The "bonus" teachers, to the number of 1,513, are to lose their extra pay, which it is estimated will save $277,000. Certain other "bonus" teachers have not been reduced, because it was argued that their work among subnormal pupils is worth more compensation.

The "extended days" of 382 principals and teachers is to be curtailed to the extent of an estimated saving of $92,000.

Several hundred school clerks are to be given staggered hours with an anticipated saving of $128,000. The compensation paid bathroom attendants has been trimmed in the subcommittee to $82,425.

Staggered hours are to be given the truant officers with a reckoned saving of $58,772.

In addition 22 bureaus in the education department were consolidated yesterday into five with an estimated saving of $137,985. The details of that scheme was not made public and it is impossible to indicate how many jobs, if any, have been dispensed with.

When this point had been reached Superintendent Bogan said that he did not think any more could be eliminated from the appropriations except posibly a small amount here or there.

It was then that Superintendent Bogan suggested that the schools be closed for eight or nine days, if necessary. It was his opinion, twice expressed, that it will be unnecessary to close the schools, which is convincing evidence that the estimates are not yet down to probable expenditures.

Savage Favors Closing.

Trustee Joseph P. Savage, chairman of the subcommittee, fostered in two or three short speeches the closing of the schools.

"I'll never vote to close the schools on the showing to date," announced Trustee Walter Brandenburg, another member of the subcommittee. "We are still shy $1,500,000. We haven't even discussed closing the Normal college or Crane college."

"I am not yet satisfied that the budget has been trimmed nearly as much as it should be," said President Lewis E. Myers, ex officio member of the committee. "I still believe it would do no injury to close the Normal college for a year. We have hundreds of teachers on the waiting list we cannot employ. Why train more?"

Majority Against Closing.

Trustee Savage urged that the Normal school be kept open. No action was taken to close the schools. If it had come to a vote yesterday it would have been defeated.

"I will never vote to close the schools a month, week or a day," asserted Brandenburg with heat.

Finally Trustee Savage asserted: "I do not think we will be able to borrow money from the banks on the budget as constructed so far. After we have talked with them I think we will have to come back and cut out still more."

"Yes, several million," added President Myers.

Want Still More Savings.

While the savings are large in comparison with other years, there is a feeling among certain trustees that the board, by this budget, is authorizing the spending of more taxes than will be collected; and the bankers will object to loaning on such a proposition.

There are two objectors to the board budget plan. One is R. J. Tormey, business agent of the Firemen and Oilers' union, and the other is B. J. Weber, business agent of the Window Washers' union. Both insisted yesterday that no members of their organizations will work without pay. An attempt will be made to adjust the claims of the union officials.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

More than 80 per cent of the proposed state income tax, now being urged in the special session of the legislature, would be paid by Cook county. More than $24,000,000 of the $30,000,000 which, it is estimated, would be collected under the original bill presented to the general assembly would come out of the pockets of Cook county residents. In good times, when it is estimated that the revenue would total $45,000,000, Cook county would pay $36,000,000.

These deductions are made on the experience of Wisconsin, which is often cited as a model for state income taxes. Its tax commission, unlike that of Illinois, has the statutory duty "to disseminate from time to time in such manner as shall best be calculated to attract public attention, useful and valuable information concerning the subject of taxation and public finance."

Cities Pay Bulk of Bill.

Under that obligation it has published an elaborate study of the geographical problem of Wisconsin taxes, written by Dr. J. Roy Blough.

Dr. Blough's report demonstrates that residents of Wisconsin's larger cities pay the bulk of the income taxes.

The city of Milwaukee, with about one-fifth of the state's population, pays approximately half of the income taxes from individuals. Cook county has more than half of Illinois' population. In Wisconsin 14 of the 71 counties have a trifle over 50 per cent of the state's population. These 14 counties have more than 81 per cent of the taxable individual incomes of the state, and accordingly pay that proportion of the income taxes.

81 Per Cent in 14 Counties.

For the year investigated by Dr. Blough, the taxable incomes if individuals totaled $293,270,527. Of that sum these 14 counties supplied $237,881,900, or 81.16 per cent.

Those 14 counties contain the cities of Milwaukee, Madison, Kenosha, Racine, Oshkosh, Janesville, Sheboygan, Green Bay, Watertown, Superior, Fondulac, Wausau, Appleton, and Waukesha.

In the 14 counties the taxable income of individuals, under the Wisconsin income tax laws, and the percentage each county bears to the state's total, are set forth in Dr. Blough's study as follows:

County—	Individual taxable income.	Pct. of state.
Milwaukee	$143,248,802	48.83
Dane	13,507,582	4.60
Kenosha	12,886,284	4.39
Racine	12,283,601	4.18
Winnebago	9,814,068	3.47
Rock	8,272,831	2.82
Sheboygan	7,011,323	2.39
Brown	5,100,642	1.74
Fond du Lac	4,880,419	1.66
Douglas	4,762,236	1.62
Outagamie	4,737,202	1.61
Marathon	4,429,648	1.51
Waukesha	4,213,769	1.43
Dodge	2,733,583	.93
Totals	$237,881,900	81.16
Entire state	$293,270,527	100.00

The Illinois bill, as originally presented, was drafted with the intention of collecting—according to the estimates of its sponsors—about six times as much income taxes as Wisconsin collects from a population about three times as great.

On Wednesday the bill was amended raising the income exemptions. No estimate has been made of what the amended bill will produce, but judging by the experience of Wisconsin there will be practically no farmers who will pay an income tax.

2 SUBURBS LAY PLANS TO END FINANCE WOES

Glencoe and Wilmette Hold Meetings.

Citizens' meetings were held in Glencoe and Wilmette last night to attempt some solution of the financial difficulties facing the two north shore suburbs which threaten a virtual shutdown of educational, police, and fire protection activities. The programs sponsored by both villages call for voluntary payment of that share of taxes allocated to the village taxing bodies.

A meeting of the board of education, city officials, and interested private citizens was held last night in Glencoe to complete plans for a house to house drive for funds. An explanatory and pep meeting of the 200 volunteer salesmen will be held on Monday night, and Tuesday morning the house to house canvass will start.

Town Divided Into Districts.

Glencoe, with 1,200 homes, has been divided in four districts, with five captains and fifty salesmen to a district. Each will be given names of residents in his "beat" and will carry the general slogan of "a tax warrant sale in each home." Elmer F. Wieboldt is in charge of the drive. Most of the work will be at night.

All funds collected will be placed with the Chicago Title and Trust company and will be spent only for necessary village activity.

James A. Russell, president of the village, and Homer F. Horton, president of the school board, pledged their organizations to a rigid economy program. Three schools with about 2,000 students are now closed in Glencoe. Hope was expressed that the schools will be reopened Jan. 18, giving the pupils a four weeks' vacation. All teachers were paid to date before the closing of the schools.

Massmeeting in Wilmette.

A massmeeting to arouse Wilmette citizens to the crisis facing that village was held in the Howard grade school. While particular emphasis was given the financial difficulties faced by the school board, with no money in sight to meet the January pay roll of $17,000, [illegible] speakers stated that unless needed funds were provided all other municipal activities would be greatly curtailed if not entirely stopped.

A citizens committee composed of Carbon P. Dubbs, village president; Henry E. Cutler, president of the village school board, and J. R. Gathercoal, president of the New Trier township high school board, was appointed. With this nucleus a larger general committee will be formed to map out a program for relief.

Two Plans Advocated.

Two general plans were advocated—the Glencoe plan of tax warrant sale to the general public and a similar plan with the banks acting as intermediaries. The consensus seemed to favor the Glencoe plan of selling 1931 tax warrants to the public through a general sales drive. Due to the fact that no 1930 warrants are available, all being held by the banks, the suggestion was made that these warrants be sold to the public, the banks in turn buying 1931 warrants from the municipal bodies.

According to Herbert B. Mulford, a member of the Wilmette citizens' committee, Wilmette's share of tax collections will run to 70 per cent. He urged the public to buy as much as possible up to the maximum allocated share.

Cutler explained the situation as it affected the schools and advised the 500 village residents packing the assembly hall that while a month remained in which only $17,000 had to be raised the amount was absolutely needed. Approximately $125,000 in 1931 warrants can be legally sold, he said, as there are now outstanding $50,000 in 1931 warrants.

U. S. Battleships Reach Cuba for Winter "War"

GUANTANAMO, Cuba, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Battleships of the United States fleet began steaming into the bay here this evening for the annual winter maneuvers.

SEEKS NEW JUDGE TO TRY NELSON AND 2 BANKERS

Young Bain and Kinsman Freed on Bonds.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county announced yesterday that he would appear before Judge Edward Shurtleff in Woodstock on Monday to request that another judge be appointed to try the conspiracy case pending against State Auditor Oscar Nelson, Norman O. Geyer, former president of the Waukegan State bank, and George Woodruff, formerly the chairman of the board of the National Bank of the Republic. This case is scheduled for trial on Jan. 18.

Mr. Smith said he also would request the judge to expunge from the court records the directed not guilty verdict which was returned at his direction in a misfeasance case against Auditor Nelson last Monday. Prosecutor Smith contends that if, as Judge Shurtleff announced, he had no jurisdiction to try the case he had not the right to direct a verdict of not guilty.

Accused in Bank Failure.

The defendants in the conspiracy case are charged with overt acts in connection with the closing of the Waukegan State bank last June.

Fred Brown Whitney, receiver of the Waukegan State bank, announced yesterday that up to Nov. 30 he had collected $263,280 and disbursed $193,490.

The receiver asserted that officials of the former National Bank of the Republic had not answered his queries concerning the relationship between the Waukegan bank and the National Bank of the Republic.

Depositors of all closed state banks were asked last night to join in a move to demand the impeachment of Auditor Nelson. The request was contained in a resolution adopted in Waukegan by more than 100 members of the Waukegan State Bank Depositors' association, headed by H. Frank Marsh.

Bain and Kinsman Released.

In Chicago yesterday John H. Bain and W. Merle Fisher, son and son-in-law, respectively, of John Bain, head of the twelve closed Bain banks, were released in $15,000 bonds each by Judge Philip L. Sullivan in the Criminal court. They are charged with conspiracy to defraud depositors of the West Englewood Trust and Savings bank. They were arrested on Thursday on warrants which, according to Edwin J. Raber, special prosecutor in charge of the Bain bank cases, were issued to keep the men within the court's jurisdiction.

Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg yesterday collected $6,500 from debtors of the West Central State bank. He issued a writ of attachment for Dr. A. Louise Klehm of Niles Center, who refused to answer a subpoena issued in an effort to discover the whereabouts of her sister, Mrs. A. J. Harms, a debtor of the bank.

Nelson Names Receivers.

State Auditor Nelson appointed John J. Callahan receiver of the Ashland State bank which closed on Dec. 19 and Charles Heller receiver of the State Bank of Maywood, which closed two days earlier.

Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel overruled a demurrer which attorneys for four defunct banks had filed against the petition of Probate Judge Horner to declare all accounts of insane and incompetent persons under control of his court as trust funds, and therefore preferred claims against the institutions. The banks' attorneys were allowed ten days to answer the petition. The banks were the Diversey Trust and Savings bank, the Citizens Trust and Savings bank, the Ridgeway State bank, and the Brighton Park State bank.

The estates in these banks aggregate only $100,000, according to Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Judge Horner. Other claims, however, which will amount to $500,000 will be filed against other banks later. Petitions also will be filed in the United States District court to declare trusts for estates in national banks.

TAX COLLECTOR CITES SAVING IN TOWNSHIP PLAN

Shows Lower Fees on Large Amounts.

Sanborn Hale, collector of New Trier township, yesterday defended the tax collection system in Cook county, whereby township collectors are allowed to retain as high as $10,000 annually from taxes collected by them before general collections are started by the county treasurer.

Mr. Hale, who is vice president of the State Bank of Winnetka, has been collector of New Trier township since 1925, and in that time has collected six tax levies. In that period he has collected $7,532,339 in taxes. His fees for the six years were about $36,000, he said. Had the taxes been collected by the county treasurer, for which service the county receives 1½ per cent, the collection cost would have been $112,985.

Points to Local Gain.

The county's fees for collecting taxes more than cover the cost of collections, and are added to general county revenue, but this, Mr. Hale points out, does not aid the local governments in his township. The governments suffer a 1½ per cent deduction from their revenue for collectons made for them by the county.

Mr. Hale cited the 1929 collections in his township. He received the full fee allowed by law, $10,000, for collecting $1,392,023. But had the county collected the same amount of taxes, its fee would have been $20,880. Since local governments in New Trier township get about 60 per cent of the total levy there, they were actually richer by 60 per cent of the $10,880 saving.

"I collect about 50 per cent of the taxes," Mr. Hale said. "I must pay the expenses. Roughly, I believe I have cleared $12,000 out of the $36,000 I received for the last six collections."

Fees of Town Collectors.

Township collectors receive 2 per cent of the first $200,000 they collect, and 1 per cent of the next $600,000. For collections over $800,000 they receive nothing. Mr. Hale's argument in favor of the present system would apply only in those townships where the local collectors take in at least $400,000. There were only ten such townships out of the thirty country towns in the 1929 tax collection.

Henry D. Penfield, collector of the town of Evanston, denied yesterday that he was one of the township collectors who received $10,000 fees for collecting 1929 taxes, as was reported yesterday. He took office on May 1, 1931, and the collections were made by his predecessor, Horace D. Bent.

SUES 2 TOWNS FOR BILLS DUE ON WATER PLANTS

Suits against the water supply plants of Des Plaines and Bellwood were filed in the Circuit court yesterday by William H. Cater, president of the contracting company of that name at 2643 West Monroe street. He asks injunctions to restrain the villages from selling the plants, and asks a court order for an accounting and payment for his services.

The suits charge that he constructed the water systems under agreements by which he was to be paid at a set rate for the water pumped. The village of Bellwood has refused to allow him to superintend the plant and has defaulted in payment of his bill, according to Cater. The village of Des Plaines, it is alleged, defaulted on the contract last August. Both village boards have been negligent in the collection of water taxes and have kept the rates so low that it is impossible to operate the plants and pay the bills, it is charged.

CHRISTMAS SHIP FOR LONELY ISLE HELD UP BY SEAS

LONDON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A story of Christmas disappointment from H. M. S. Carlisle, off the island of Tristan da Cunha, a lonely spot in the middle of the South Atlantic ocean, reached London by wireless today.

The Carlisle got there late with Christmas gifts for the inhabitants and tried in vain to launch boats in pounding seas. The natives tried to get boats out from shore, but their efforts were futile.

Finally the Carlisle steamed off to the other side of the island where another attempt will be made tomorrow to land and carry the presents over the mountains to the one little town. The weather is always bad there and a landing is seldom easy.

HOOVER LIFTS VOICE AGAIN IN ECONOMY PLEA

Counters Thrift Cry of Democrats.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Rivalry between the Democratic congressional leaders and the White House for whatever credit that may accrue from current movements to slash federal, state and local expenditures continued at a high pitch today, with President Hoover having the latest word.

In a public statement issued at his afternoon conference with the press, the President issued a new call for the strictest economy in governmental expenditure, asserting that the public should derive "great assurances," from recent developments showing Republican and Democratic leaders ready to coöperate with the administration in balancing the budget in 1933.

Hopes for Coöperation.

Calling attention to Democratic protestations that 300 millions would be trimmed from the Hoover budget and steps taken to put the government on a more economical basis, President Hoover said he would welcome any move in this direction which would not prevent the proper functioning of the government.

With congressinal coöperation, the President said, the full stability and credit of the federal government can be maintained and the budget balanced during the 1933 fiscal year.

While calling attention to the fact that congress has brought forth a flood of "extravagant proposals," which, if passed, would imply an increase of governmental expenditures during the next five years of more than forty billion dollars, Mr. Hoover said he believed the public could rest assured that congressional leaders, who are urging more drastic economies than even he had proposed, will not enact their proposals into law.

Up Pops Pat Harrison.

Senator Pat Harrison, ranking minority member of the senate finance committee, attempted to take the ball away from the President shortly after congress received the federal budget when he announced the Democrats would trim 300 millions of fat from federal expenditures. Numerous pronouncements along the same line have been made, one material result being the shaving of several millions by the house appropriations committee from the first deficiency bill sent to congress by the President.

Today's White House announcement called attention to the reduction by the administration of 360 millions in the preliminary estimates submitted by the various government departments and independent establishments. The President stated that we "cannot squander ourselves into prosperity."

He emphasized that the "people must realize that government cannot continue to live in a depression upon the scale that was possible in times of great prosperity."

The President urged even stricter economies for local, state, and federal governments, asserting that with the coöperation of congress, "the full stability and credit of the federal government can be maintained" without further increases in the public debt after next July.

"With the general realization of the necessity of reductions in expenditures," he added, "we should also at least be able to bring about the wholesale elimination of overlapping in the federal government bureaus and agencies, which will also contribute materially to the program of economy.

"The balancing of next year's expenditure and receipts and the limitation of borrowing implies the resolute opposition to any new or enlarged activities of the government.

"Rigid economy is a real road to relief, to home owners, farmers, workers and every element of our population.

A Warning to States.

"It is worth noting that the state and local government expenditures of the country amount to nearly nine billion. The federal government itself oft times contributes to increased state and local expenditure by appropriations requiring a matching of money by the states. The result is pressure upon state officials by the groups who will receive benefits from these expenditures and makes them the unwilling victims of increased government costs.

"Our first duty as a nation is to put our governmental house in order, national, state, and local. With the return of prosperity the government can undertake constructive projects both of social character and in public improvement. We cannot squander ourselves into prosperity."

"West Side" Frankie Pope Indicted for Bribe Attempt

"West Side" Frankie Pope and his cousin, Fred, were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday on charges of attempting to bribe prohibition agents. They were found guilty last October of violation of the prohibition law. Defense Attorney William F. Waugh appealed the case to the supreme court on the grounds the Popes might be guilty of bribery, but not of violating the prohibition law. The appeal is pending. Testimony at the trial showed that after a raid on a still in Melrose Park in 1928, the Popes offered government agents bribes up to $10,000 to forget the case.

Wood Alcohol Sellers Get 4 Months' Jail Sentences

Myron Retsky, former proprietor of a drug store at 656 West Madison street, and Julius Levy, a clerk in his store, convicted by a jury Thursday of selling wood alcohol mixture as a beverage, were sentenced to four months in the county jail and fined $500 each by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday.

ADMIRAL LEIGH COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF FLEET

Changes Are Made All Down the Line.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Admiral Richard S. Leigh, now commanding the battleships force in the Pacific, was today named commander in chief of the fleet to succeed Admiral Frank H. Schofield, who will return to Washington as a member, probably as president, of the general board of the navy.

Admiral Luke McNamee, commander of the battleship divisions, was ordered to command the battleship force, while Rear Admiral Joel R. P. Pringle will be promoted to vice admiral and assume the command vacated by Ad-Admiral McNamee.

Changes in naval command will be made all down the line. The new commander of the scouting force will be Rear Admiral Frank H. Clark, in place of Vice Admiral Arthur L. Willard.

Rear Admiral Walter H. Crosley, commanding the Chicago naval district, is ordered to sea as commander of the third battleship division.

Admiral Leigh was born in Batesville, Miss., Aug. 12, 1870.

SENATOR BLOCKS ALL POSTAL JOBS IN N. CAROLINA

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Senator Josiah W. Bailey [Dem., N. C.] has held up all postmaster nominations for the state pending study of complaints made to him of "irregularities in the appointments."

Bailey said he was making an inquiry to ascertain the facts. Complaints are before him also of "unjust discrimination against former soldiers in the making of the appointments."

"You understand," he said in a statement today off the floor, "that a bill of indictment is pending in the middle district of North Carolina charging the secretary of the Republican state committee on counts of soliciting funds from federal office holders."

About 25 names have been submitted for postmaster appointments so far by President Hoover to the senate.

RAID HIGH HAT CLUB; SEIZE 100 BOTTLES OF RUM

New York, Jan. 9.—[Special.]—The Five o'Clock club in West 54th street, a fashionable night club, was raided, the manager and five employés arrested, and 250 men and women patrons, all in evening dress, ordered to disperse tonight after evidence had been gathered in an unusual fashion by a policeman.

Seven policemen, accompanied by a federal agent, went to the club shortly before midnight and, although they brought two axes with them, they said they found 100 bottles of assorted liquors without the aid of the axes.

Bandits Invade Party; Rob 25 Guests of Cash

Three bandits invaded a birthday party at the home of Frank Schulhoff, 2419 Potomac avenue, a fruit commission man, last night, lined up twenty-five guests, including several children, along a wall, and obtained between $50 and $100 in cash and $450 in jewelry. The men entered through a front door. They searched the men and women, took their money, and warned them not to make any outcry. The party was held to celebrate Mrs. Schulhoff's birthday.

Three Filipinos Robbed of $1,500 by Countrymen

Fillmore street police were investigating last night the complaint of Filipinos that six of their countrymen robbed them of $1,500 earlier in the day. The trio, Monico Gaeula, Francisco Gayanin, and Clemente Raminez, live at 3657 5th avenue. They said they withdrew the money from a bank to send to relatives in the Philippines. On their return home the six men, two of whom they knew by name, were waiting for them. Gaeula lost $720; Raminez, $700, and Gayanin, $80.

Bomb Explosion Shakes Hotel Guests in Wheaton

A black powder bomb was exploded against the Elmwood hotel at President street and Roosevelt road, in Wheaton, late last night. Twelve guests were shaken. No one was hurt. Damage was estimated at $200 and limited chiefly to windows. The hotel is a three story structure, owned by Mrs. Helen Homan and operated partly as a roadhouse. Police could learn no reason for the bombing.

LEGION WILL GUARD BODIES OF 2 YOUNGS, SLAYERS OF OFFICERS

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—A call for members of the American Legion to guard the hearse bearing bodies of Harry and Jennings Young into Springfield was received tonight. The hearse was scheduled to reach Springfield at 11 o'clock tonight but hours before the road was blocked with cars awaiting the arrival.

A request also was made for a guard of Legionnaires to patrol the mortuary where the bodies will be held until the funeral tomorrow.

Reports were heard today that a mob planned to meet the hearse and that the bodies would be burned, in the Young home. The following appeal was issued by the widows of the slain officers:

"With deep appreciation to the public for its sympathy expressed to us in our great bereavement, we earnestly request that there be no demonstration when the bodies of Harry and Jennings Young are returned. Nothing will bring back our husbands to us. A demonstration of vengeance against the two dead men would only bring further hours of terror to the community."

As a reward for services when he shouldered a gun and went with Jailer Frank Willey to recover the bodies of Sheriff Marcell Hendrix and other officers slain by the Young brothers, Amos Brewer today won a parole from the Greene county jail. He is a former service man and served in the battle of the Argonne.

STATE EVIDENCE AGAINST CIGARET GIRL COMPLETED

The state yesterday closed its case against Mrs. Bernice O'Connor, 25 years old, former cabaret cigaret girl, on trial in the court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan for the murder of her divorced husband, Edward J. O'Connor, a lather, who was shot and killed July 31, when he forced his way into her apartment at 4330 Lake Park avenue. Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne in an opening statement declared the shooting as a "cold and deliberate murder." Attorney Harold Levy declared the woman feared her husband and shot in self-defense.

Garfield Park Opens Its Formal Garden as Exhibit

The horticultural hall at the Garfield park conservatory has been converted into a formal garden with various varieties of primroses predominating in the exhibit, it was announced yesterday. The garden is 200 feet long and 12 feet wide, flanked with plants, which include palms, oleanders, bananas, genistas, and yellow groundsel.

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—A battle behind closed doors between city officials and Wall street financiers to determine the entire future course of the city's material growth and method of financing that growth reached a crisis today. The outcome may be an unexpectedly sudden transit unification with skids greased for an increased subway fare, or the wreckage of unification maneuvers combined with a drastic municipal retrenchment program.

With the secrecy of two weeks' negotiations broken open, both bankers and city officials were reticent about cause and effect. Each said the other side started it all. Each group was optimistic, but not for direct quotation, about being on top at the finish. Reports of agreement between municipal and private finance were branded as absurd.

Push Aside Chit Chat.

With talk of such relative financial chit chat as meeting small short term notes and other minor obligations pushed to one side, the financial battle of the century—a strange spectacle enshrouded in the forbidding, somber silence of Wall street offices and the "know nothing" detours of those guarding closed doors in the municipal building—resolved itself into a battle to the finish between advocates of a five cent subway and a smaller but more financially powerful group insisting against any odds for a fare of seven cents or more.

The reaction of Wall street to reports of the negotiations was shown strikingly in the fact that transit securities improved materially while other city securities suffered slight declines. On the basis of the possibility of an increased fare, Interborough stock moved up 1½ points to 8, an increase of more than 20 per cent, while B. M. T. common and preferred advanced from 1 to 3 points. The turnover in bonds of the two systems spurted substantially, with advances of 2 to 3 points in price.

While Mayor Walker remained at his home and accountants for both the city and private bankers were poring over the city's ledgers to diagnose past and future municipal health for another conference next week, Controller Charles W. Berry called at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., where the first turbulent powwow was held for informal discussion of points in the city's program.

Advice of Private Financiers.

Yet elsewhere there was no public denial of reports that the advice of private financiers, proffered to the city administration at the only time since city consolidation 34 years ago, that the city has faced a rapidly mounting interest rate in its securities market, was that the city must operate all its departments on a self-sustaining or pay as you enter basis.

Literally interpreted the proposal thus offered to the city by those in the best position to take up all city securities offered in an open market on competitive bidding for the lowest interest rate was that subways, which account for nearly half of the city's one billion 500 million concrete improvement program for the future, must be put on a paying basis. The only known way of achieving that point without disguising the subway ledger by subsidies from profitable municipal enterprises is to increase the fare.

Although Mayor Walker has made no comment and given no intimation of his views on the conferences in which he and colleagues of his administration have participated, no political observer has been able to conjure any way by which the mayor could do anything but fight such a move. Mayor Walker rode into office twice on a five cent fare platform and entrenched himself there by helping to carry to the United States Supreme court the successful fight to protect that fare.

The irony of the situation most impressive to city officials is that the city's credit position is strong in the open market—more solid than that of any governmental agency of its size in the world. Nevertheless the city, after marketing some securities at the unprecedentedly low rate of 1¾ per cent last fall, was forced to pay 5 per cent on one set of securities marketed in December.

DEMOCRATS AT ANNUAL FEAST SOUND WAR CRY

nominee. Such a disclaimer, however, was conspicuous for its absence from the remarks of Mr. Smith, who is suspected by many of harboring an ambition to win the nomination again this year.

Hearers Wildly Cheer Smith.

The appearance of Mr. Smith at the dinner and his address evoked demonstrations of approval that testified to his great popularity. No less striking was the amount of sentiment on tap in favor of Gov. Roosevelt, whose progress toward the nomination Messrs. Smith and Raskob are reputed to have set out to stop.

The strength of the Roosevelt partisans in the membership of the national committee and their predilections regarding the scene of the nomination have supplied an eleventh hour complication to the selection of the convention city by the national committee tomorrow. Inasmuch as Mayor Cermak of Chicago and other Illinois Democrats have lined up with the Smith-Raskob movement to "stop Roosevelt," the New York governor's friends in the committee fear that a convention held in Chicago might be stampeded into nomination of a rival aspirant.

They Prefer Kansas City.

The Roosevelt contingent arrived on the scene manifesting a preference for Kansas City, which is on the threshold of the habitat of the "sons of the wild jackass," who are shouting for the New York governor. Spokesmen for that city announced that they were able to promise the national committee an unqualified donation of $150,000 for the convention, whereas the Chicago offer is the expense of the convention up to $150,000, with the understanding that any residue will be returned to the contributors.

The national committee made it known early today that the convention is on the auction block to the highest bidder. It wants not only the expenses of the convention, but at least $100,000 more, which would be applied on the committee's debts to Mr. Raskob and others.

Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the Chicago citizens' committee, declined to raise Chicago's bid, but Mayor Cermak, who arrived today at the head of a Chicago delegation, set out to raise a separate fund of from $50,000 to $100,000, to be offered as an outright gift to the committee. The Chicagoans were predicting tonight that they would get the convention by topping any other bid.

Prohibition Row Smolders.

As a result of Senator Glass' threats to open up on Mr. Cox in the meeting tomorrow, it is not so certain that a flare up over the prohibtion issue can be averted. Chairman Raskob had backed down from his original proposal to demand an indorsement of his "home rule" modification of the 18th amendment. He and former Gov. Byrd of Virginia, representing the southern drys, had agreed on a resolution referring the home rule proposal to the national convention without recommendation. This program will be followed unless Glass and others spill the beans.

All three of the Democratic orators at the dinner, as well as the toastmaster, Claude G. Bowers, raked the Republican party fore and aft, comparing Republican promises of continued prosperity, the "full dinner pail," and a "pullet in every pot" with the prostrate business and unemployment of the present times. Many a barbed shaft was loosened at President Hoover.

Davis Is Sarcastic.

"This country has had all the miracle men it needs for many a day to come," said Mr. Davis, with reference to the advance advertising of Mr. Hoover as a superman.

Toastmaster Bowers said Mr. Hoover has pursued a Pollyanna policy in dealing with the depression.

"And what," he exclaimed, "has the administration done to meet the emergency when the depression came? For almost two years it refused to face realities. It gave human misery the absent treatment. And above the turmoil and the clamor of crashing enterprise could be heard a blithesome voice from the aristocratic end of Pennsylvania avenue—'prosperity is back and all is well.'

SMITH PROSPERITY PLAN

Former Gov. Smith in opening his speech referred to the optimistic utterances of President Hoover during the 1928 campaign and immediately after his election.

"He went the limit," said Mr. Smith of his 1928 opponent, "when he stated that it was but a matter of a short time when poverty would be abolished entirely from our land.

"Before the administration was one year of age, what happened? Bank failures throughout the length and breadth of the land; bankruptcy proceedings; foreclosure of mortgages; depreciation of prime securities; paralysis of industry and business; and, crowning it all, seven million people out of employment and the reëstablishment of the bread line for the first time in many years."

Mr. Smith said he favors "all constructive and workable plans for international adjustments and expansion of credit," but objected that they could not be matured in time to "solve the immediate problem of unemployment."

The administration plan to pass the unemployment problem "along to states, their localities, and to private charities" Mr. Smith pronounced "indefensible, inasmuch as it already has been proven that the states, localities, and private charities cannot cope with it. Cities and localities have exceeded their debt limits and face constantly decreasing revenues."

Describes New York Situation.

Speaking from his experience on "all the committees so far brought into existence," Mr. Smith said that in New York City alone, where 700,000 are unemployed, they had been unable to more than scratch the surface with appropriations of 10 millions by the city and 8 millions by the state and private contributions of 20 millions. He understood this is the situation everywhere.

"The direct results of this form of relief," he went on, "are two. One is to extend charity to people in their homes, and the other is to provide work of no lasting benefit to the taxpayers whose money is appropriated. It is nothing more or less than a disguised dole. At best, all this relief must be for an extremely limited period. Private funds can last only for a short time and the localities are unable to carry the burden much longer.

Problem Transcends Politics.

"With respect to the solution of the unemployment problem, we must absolutely forget politics and we must regard the United States to be in a state of war. It is a war against unemployment, disease, and malnutrition. The results growing out of this business depressions are creating greater havoc with the family life of America than did the actual operation of the war, and we must resort to extraordinary means in order to bring about a solution.

"I suggest, first: An issue of federal bonds for necessary public improvements, as distinguished from so-called 'made work' for the purpose of carrying over a winter.

"When it is known to the American people that the federal government is paying $20,000,000 a year in rent it can readily be understood that the construction of public buildings for the conduct of public business is not only relief in an emergency, but a necessity at all times and produces permanent economy.

Points to Postal Field.

"The public prints tell us that the postal deficit in the present year is $120,000,000. The postmaster general, recently reporting to congress, stated that a large part of the loss in conducting the postal business is due to the antiquated facilities with which he has to deal. Bringing that important branch of the government up to date would not only tend to relieve present unemployment, but make for economy and efficiency in the operation of the service for years to come.

"If these bonds were to be issued in the ordinary manner I would say, as the Liberty bonds were offered, direct to the American public, exactly as the liberty bonds were offered, through an appeal to their patriotism and their devotion to the country. I feel safe in venturing the opinion that an offer of such bonds under such conditions will loosen up the hoarded money which is now cared for in sugar bowls, between mattresses, and by the more careful in safe deposit boxes.

Would Restore Buying.

"I believe that if this matter is properly started and if this issue is properly handled it will restore purchasing power that will be beneficial to business, commerce, and industry all along the line. The expenditure of the proceeds of these bonds will renew confidence in business and will start the mill and the factory working, add to the tonnage of our railroads, and provide real employment for the army of the idle.

"Were the proceeds of these bonds to be used under present conditions, I would again say 'no.' I believe that following the bond issue congress should bestow upon the President of the United States plenary powers for the appointment of a federal administrator of public works and clothe him with the power and authority to cut, slash and dig into the red tape now found throughout the statute laws of the country which retards the progress of public works. Here again we must invoke the tactics of war as against the slow and cumbersome operations of peace time.

Vast Highway Opportunity.

"A large part of the proceeds should be appropriated directly from the sale of the bonds for the construction of highways, and it would be no mistake if in highway improvement the United States were to include bridges or tunnels, even through cities where these improvements are logically a part of the national highway system.

"One of the main duties of the federal public works administrator will be to speed up the federal building program for which appropriations already have been made. There was expended in one year under the present system only three times the cost of a single building in one city in the country.

"Some people will say it is bad business to issue bonds for public improvements. If it was bad business to issue them for the destruction of property, as they did during the progress of the world war, what's wrong with issuing them to save lives?"

Warns Against Burdensome Taxes.

Adverting to that concomitant of business depression, "excessive taxation, which adds a further burden upon industry," Mr. Smith suggested that we ask ourselves what we have done to reduce government costs to meet the deficit. He recalled that for ten years there has been talk of reorganizing the government, "cutting out duplication of effort, waste and eliminating the large number of boards and commissions that produce a costly overhead, responsible in a large degree for the enormous costs of the federal government.

"And what about prohibition?" exclaimed the orator, in this connection. "The United States is spending annually $100,000,000 in a senseless, useless and fruitless attempt to enforce prohibition.

"Who says this? Do I say it, No, that comes from a commission appointed by the President himself. No matter what may be their final decision, throughout the lengthy report that they prepared they declared that prohibition was not enforceable, largely because it lacked public approval and public support. Seven of the eleven commissioners picked by President Hoover wanted something done to it right away. Four believed in a further trial, admitting, however, that they saw no hope for any change in the present situation.

"Not only have we spent $100,000,000 for enforcement in a single year, but what about the billion dollars in revenue that we have tossed away while carrying on this useless attempt at enforcement?"

COX FLAYS BUREAUCRACY

Mr. Cox in his address laid stress on the constantly growing interference by federal authority in state affairs. He sketched Uncle Sam of the prohibition era as a local constable.

"Neglecting the common carrier of our economic life, a very definite national responsibility," said the 1920 standard bearer, "he has busied himself chasing bootleggers, an affair of the states.

"If the President of the United States had opportunely announced that, with all the powers of a sympathetic public opinion, he was going to balance our budget and if, at the same time, the railroad question had been brought to the executive desk for composition of differences under the stress of menacing conditoins and the invoking of common sense administrative methods, we would not have witnessed many of the consequences of a lack of confidence; and frugal citizens, general industry, banks, insurance companies, and administrators of estates would have been spared grave uneasiness."

But "the fruits of our errors are more than economic," in the opinion of Mr. Cox, who went on to say that "in looking toward Washington for everything, we have been losing that sense of community self dependence which made us a great nation. We are wavering at the top because there is a loss of vitality at the root."

Finds G. O. P. Slipping.

The Republican party, according to Mr. Cox, has lost the confidence of all classes of socie and has "but two loyal allies left—privileged business and the Anti-Saloon league."

He defended Woodrow Wilson and the league of nations, which though it be defective, is the only thing that "bears the least resemblance to even a partial payment to the tens of millions of dead and wounded of the great war." Mr. Cox said that when the hour of the solution of the prohibition problem comes, Democrats will solve it.

"Any institution that has cost our government twenty-five billion dollars and created a super-criminal state," he continued, "presents a problem that cannot long be deferred. Its very controversial nature precludes any hope of the Republican politicians giving it straightforward attention. When we meet this issue let us meet it candidly and courageously. Let us leave hypocrisy to those whose political natures do not revolt against it.

"Let us be fair and honest minded. Edmund Burke, the great English statesman, once said that 'magnanimity is of the essence of great politics.' Let every section realize that this question concerns each section in its own peculiar way. Let truth and tolerance rule where untruth and fanaticism have confused the public mind.

A Word to the South.

"Let the south be reminded, if you will, that reconstruction did not end because of its protesting voice alone. Those who waved the bloody shirt invoked a bitter fanaticism to impose injustice. Democratic leaders of the north fought it out in the congress eye to eye and toe to toe with Thaddeus Stevens and his like. They did so at great political sacrifice. In our state of Ohio for a long time it was practically impossible to elect a Democrat to any office because we asked for justice for the south. The party assembled in convention in 1873 and was so discouraged that it informally decided to abandon the organization.

"A committee waited upon Allen G. Thurman. Sitting in his family rocker, in carpet slippers, he patiently heard the delegation recite its plan. Then, rising in his might, he declared with all the fury of thunder:

"'This room is not big enough to bury the Democratic party in! We have been defeated because an everhanging war bitterness has been kept alive to serve political ends; but we are right. There can be injustice nowhere under the flag.' The old Roman ordered the mobilization of the forces of democracy and he carried the state for Gov. Allen.

He Makes a Request.

"In those stirring times we grew to venerate the names of Zeb Vance, Wade Hampton, Ben Hill, and L. Q. C. Lamar. I am sure that the sons and daughters of the south have not forgotten Allen G. Thurman, Daniel W. Voorhees, Thomas A. Hendricks, and Thomas F. Bayard. We forced the bloody shirt leaders in the north aside and let the truth go to our people. May we not now, respectfully, ask that you call political ecclesiastics back to their pulpits that truth may go to your people?"

Both Cox and Davis sailed into the Republican tariff. The governmental attempt at fixing prices by tariff subsidy, said Mr. Cox, "proved just as futile and fallacious as the effort directed by the farm board. As a result, relief must now be devised for both the farmer and manufacturer. Their rights are co-equal and the prosperity of one is necessary to the other.

Davis Goes Back to Harding.

According to Mr. Davis, "not one new dollar has this tariff bill dropped into the pocket of a single American citizen." He characterized the Harding administration as "the era of dark betrayal," the Coolidge administration as "the era of smug complacency," and the Hoover administration as "the era of wild dismay." He depicted the mad adventure of the farm board in its attempt to "sweep back the sea and thwart the inexorable law of supply and demand." Its one success, Mr. Davis said, has been to convince the farmer, "who has seen the value of his crops cut in half, that once more he has been handed a gold brick of purest brass serene."

When Ritchie Presidential Boom Was Launched

DOWNERS GROVE PROVIDES JOBS IN ITS RELIEF PLAN

How Downers Grove is meeting the problem of furnishing relief to its destitute was described yesterday by Mayor W. C. Barber and Dewey Toon, secretary of the relief organization.

In October, they said, the American Legion post in the town organized a drive for funds. Instead of requesting pledges, they sold "work tickets" in $3.50 and $7.00 denominations. Applicants for help were required to work for the donors at the rate of 35 cents an hour.

More than $2,500 was raised, the Downers Grove school teachers, who are still being paid, contributing $900. In addition to the work tickets, the residents of Downers Grove have established a supply depot where food and clothing are sent and then distributed to the poor. Mrs. J. P. McDonald, police matron, is in charge of the depot.

NORTH DAKOTA CONVENTIONS OUT FOR ROOSEVELT

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York was indorsed as a presidential candidate by a number of Democratic county conventions held throughout North Dakota yesterday.

The county conventions were held primarily to elect delegates to the state convention at Valley City Jan. 14, when candidates for national, state, and congressional offices will be endorsed.

3 Indicted on Charge of Hiding Bankruptcy Assets

A bench warrant for three officers of the defunct Motor Parts corporation, 1017 South Michigan avenue, charging them with concealing assets in bankruptcy, was issued yesterday by Federal Judge John P. Barnes following their indictment by the federal grand jury. Those named in the warrants are Samuel H. Somberg, 6434 Magnolia avenue, president; Harry Frankel, 6101 Sheridan road, office manager, and Miss Ella Goldberg, 5517 Kenmore avenue, secretary. According to Assistant United States District Attorney Owen A. West, the officers failed to list $57,000 worth of merchandise when the organization was forced into involuntary bankruptcy in June, 1930.

Jim Reed Points Seven Roads "Back to Old Americanism"

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—More than four thousand leaders of Missouri's Democracy gathered in Shrine Mosque here tonight for the annual Jackson day banquet and heard former Senator James A. Reed expound his seven point platform formally to launch the 1932 campaign in Missouri.

For those who remembered Reed as the vitriolic foe of prohibition the address was disappointing, for only once did he even hint at the issue, and then he pleaded for a "return to state rights, to allow the individual states to decide what they want."

It was the greatest attendance in the history of Jackson day banquets in Missouri and marked the first return of the former senator to Springfield as a speaker since the famous state convention of eight years ago when an attempt was made to "read Reed out of the party."

Outlines His Platform.

Outlining his seven point platform, Reed said:

"We have stretched the constitution to the breaking point at a score of places. We are undertaking to have the federal government and the state governments interfere generally with the life and habits of the people.

"The remedy fundamentally must be a return to the old ideas of government.

"FIRST—Decentralization should be the order of the day. We should begin that by withdrawing the United States from every European controversy in which we are not directly and immediately concerned. We should provide for our own protection, always remembering that, while the largest and most powerful nation on earth, we are, nevertheless, unless prepared, an easy victim to the avarice and cupidity of greedy enemies.

"SECOND—We should repeal every federal statute which imposes upon the federal government powers or duties that can as well be performed by the several states.

"THIRD—We should wipe out innumerable boards and bureaus and discharge an army of spies, snoopers and tax eaters.

Business Regulation.

"FOURTH—We should cease attempting either to promote, regulate or destroy the business of the United States. By that I do not mean we should repeal the laws against combinations in restraint of trade, for such laws are themselves protective of trade. Upon the contrary, those laws should be strengthened and every attempt at monopoly or unfair trade practices should be, in the interests of fair trade, strictly prohibited and be punished.

"FIFTH—We should demand that the federal reserve banking system should no longer be made the agent and banker of the stock gambling hells of the nation; and the fraudulent practices of these institutions should be prohibited and punished.

"SIXTH—We should immediately lower tariff exactions and, as rapidly as the revenue exigencies of our government will permit, wipe them out. This must be accomplished in order:

"[a] To relieve the present burdens of our people;

"[b] In order that our manufacturing industries may be able to compete in the markets of the world, thus furnishing employment for American labor.

Return Power to States.

"SEVENTH—The laws regulating the habits and lives of the people, in so far as such laws should ever be passed, should be left to the several states; such doctrine of state sovereignity in its high and proper sense should be restored.

"These beneficent objects will never be accomplished by the present Republican body. Since the unfortunate election of Warren Harding down to the present hour it has been the hewer of wood and the drawer of water for every selfish interest which has infested and crossed the United States."

8 MILLION JOBLESS AND NEED RELIEF, IS ESTIMATE BY GREEN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.] — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, estimated today that there were more than 8,000,000 unemployed in the United States in December and declared that private relief funds are "entirely inadequate" to meet the situation. The present level of unemployment, he said, is the highest in the history of the country.

Declaring that the families of jobless men brought the total of persons in need of relief to more than twenty millions, Mr. Green asserted that only immediate action by the government can save the situation.

"We cannot avert this disaster unless all employers coöperate to shorten hours and put men to work, and government agencies create work," he declared.

"Private relief funds are entirely inadequate. We must have generous appropriations by municipal, state, and national governments."

Former Kaiser's Grandson Will Visit Chicago Today

Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, is expected in Chicago today to spend the week end at the Hotel Pearson as the guest of Prof. Rudolph Deman and Mrs. Deman who is Freida Leider of the Chicago Civic opera. PERUVIAN PAID $415,000 TO AID BOND FLOTATION

87 Millions in Default, Senators Told.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—How they had paid Juan Leguia, son of Augusto Leguia, former president of Peru, $415,000 in "commissions" for acting as agent in the flotation of 100 million dollars worth of Peruvian bonds was told to an openly surprised and dismayed senate finance committee today by two partners in the banking house of J. & W. Seligman of New York.

The story was unfolded by the elderly Frederick Strauss and Henry C. Breck, a younger partner.

Mr. Strauss and Mr. Breck not only told of the payment of this commission but testified that it was customary to reimburse agents who brought together loan seeking countries and banking houses anxious to arrange bond issues in the United States.

Total of $600,000 Paid.

The money was paid to Juan Leguia, Mr. Strauss, and Mr. Breck testified, after the firm of F. J. Lisman & Co., which brought them the first Peruvian business, notified them that he deserved a major share of the commission paid to the promoters of the loan. A total of $600,000 was paid to these promoters of the Peruvian loan, this ranging from ½ to ⅝ of 1 per cent of three different issues.

Of the three Peruvian loans issued by the Seligman house there are outstanding $87,000,000 which are in complete default.

A revolutionary tribunal gave judgment against the president and his son partly as a result of this transaction and after the overthrow of Leguia's dictatorship in 1931, Mr. Breck testified.

"This business," explained Mr. Strauss, "came to us from people in New York, saying that they wanted a commission. We had no knowledge that Leguia had any interest in it until quite a long time afterwards. We did not retain in any way the services of this son of the president, and when we found out it was something that we did not like.

Committed, He Testifies.

"We thought it might not make a good picture; but we were committed to a group of promoters who had the president's son among them."

Part of the remaining commission on these loans, $40,000, went to S. A. Maginnis of New York City, an attorney, who in 1927 was a representative of the Seligman company in Lima, Peru, and who was identified as former American minister to Bolivia, Mr. Breck testified.

JUDGE PREWITT WINS POINT IN REPORTER CASE

Order Barring News Men Is Upheld.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Kentucky Court of Appeals late today refused to force Judge Henry R. Prewitt to admit Knoxville News-Sentinel reporters to his court at Mount Sterling.

The Circuit judge barred them on the grounds the paper had published a "libelous, slanderous and false" editorial about the conduct of labor trials in his court.

The Tennessee paper, a member of the Scripps-Howard chain, declined to retract or apologize, and with Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, as its counsel, sought a temporary and a permanent writ against the judge's order.

Temporary Writ Denied.

The appellate court denied the temporary writ. The petition for a permanent writ still is before the court.

Chief Justice Richard Priest Dietzman rendered the opinion in which the whole court concurred. It said the showing so far made did not warrant issuance of the writ requested.

Arguments on the motion for the temporary writ were heard yesterday with the former secretary of war speaking for the newspaper and Judge Prewitt's 28 year old son, Allen Prewitt, pleading for his father. Another son aided in preparation of the case.

Judge Prewitt was unable to attend because of the Hightower trial now in progress. Informed of the decision in court he smiled broadly and said to friends, "Well, the boys have won out over Newton Baker."

RADICALS WIN DELAY

BY PHILLIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pineville, Ky., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Kentucky is engaged on five fronts today in social disturbances and class struggles growing out of the coal fields war. It extends from the Court of Appeals in Frankfort to a court of preliminary hearing in this mountain city, where the state law against criminal syndicalism has been invoked to stem the red menace among the hill miners.

A third effort was made today to give a hearing to the six women and three men arrested here last week on the charge of having circulated literature in which the overthrow of the United States government was advocated. The other two failed because hundreds of miners marched into town and made such a demonstration that the officers decided it would not be safe to go ahead. The hearing failed today because of bickering among counsel and a misunderstanding on the part of the defendants. They claimed they were being rushed to trial without warning and Judge George Van Beber continued the cases until next Tuesday morning.

Atmosphere of Hostility.

The atmosphere in the little courtroom was charged with hostility against the group of alien agitators who came here to lead the strike of the national miners' union, a communist organization, now in progress and spreading in hills in many directions.

Walter B. Smith, the young county attorney and prosecutor, clashed several times with Allan Taub, attorney from New York, who was sent out here to aid these prisoners by the International Labor Defense, another communist organization. He is himself a defendant on the charge of obstructing justice. "Do you believe in God?" the prosecutor shouted at the dark eyed New York radical, when the question was raised as to his right to practice in this court.

The six young women on the defendant's bench snickered and looked disgusted, amused, defiant, as the crowd around them murmured as if it approved of this attack.

Ready to Debate Religion.

Taub replied that he was ready to debate religion at any time, but that this was a serious trial, involving a felony, and he wanted to get at the issue. The prosecutor said he could not practice until he had sworn to uphold the state constitution and, in order to do this, he had to say that he believed in a supreme being.

Attorney W. J. Stone of defense counsel jumped into the fray with the remark that Clarence Darrow did not believe in God and had been permitted to practice in many courts. Religious belief was not a matter of coercion in this country, he reminded the court.

The attorney finally was admitted to practice in this case after he had affirmed, instead of swearing, that he was of record and in good standing in New York. He gave his address as 521 Fifth avenue.

Audience Is Rebuked.

The demonstrations on the part of the audience, which consisted of coal operators as well as miners, were rebuked by the court, and N. R. Patterson, a corporation lawyer and influential politician, who had a seat near the bench, arose and as a friend of the court advised the people to be careful of their conduct and not let their feelings be shown, as thus they could be accused of falling into the same errors of which they were accusing the radicals.

Attorney J. H. Taylor, a local lawyer, who had just been engaged to aid the defense, made a plea for a continuance in the cases, as he said it was not fair to rush these people to trial and they had expected to go to trial tomorrow morning.

Understanding Claimed.

"That was for the public, for the press," said the prosecutor. "We had an understanding with Mr. Stone that such a story would be given out, but that we would go ahead this afternoon. We can't hold a trial with a thousand men coming in here and marching around. Some one might start some trouble and there might be a riot and bloodshed. One drop of Kentucky blood is worth more than the blood of all the Reds in the world."

"I take back the motion," said Mr. Taylor. "I did not know that there was such an arrangement."

Mr. Stone denied that he had entered such an agreement, but the court upheld the prosecutor on this. The court was not disposed, however, to force the defendants to trial and the room was warm and crowded to

Robbers Wait Half Hour for Her

Get $670

Two bandits held six women and eight men employés at bay with their revolvers for thirty-five minutes yesterday in the ofices of the Prudential life Insurance Company of America branch at 453 West 63d street while they waited for the cashier to arrive. When the cashier, Miss Beatrice Cunningham, 47 East 109th street, entered, the gunmen forced her to open the safe, from which they took $670 and fled.

suffocation with miners and boys climbing in the windows, and so he put it off until next Tuesday.

The prosecution had a suitcase full of literature seized in the headquarters of the party opened here recently.

Typical in Appearance.

The defendants were typical radicals in appearance, of the type that might be seen on the platform at a communist meeting. One of the youngest looking of the girls is Nan Barton, said to be the representative of the Federated Press, which supplies radical papers with articles. Another is Julia Parker, who was here with the Theodore Dreiser group under the name, it is said, of Celia Kuhn. She was indicted with the members of the Dreiser party on similar charges of criminal syndicalism.

Others gave the names of Norma Martin, Margaret Fontaince, Dorothy Weber, and Mrs. Clarina Michaelson. The men are Vincent Kemarovich, John Harvey, and Verne Smith, all stormy looking petrels of the radical platforms.

CHARGE JEWELRY STORE WITH LOAN LAW VIOLATION

The racket bureau of the state's attorney's office yesterday was investigating an alleged violation of the small loan act by a jewelry company. The prosecutors said the company charges approximately 520 per cent interest a year on merchandise certificates. A girl employé was arrested yesterday and the owner of the shop will surrender this morning. Both will be arraigned before Judge Donald McKinlay next Wednesday.

The store is the Ridge Jewelry company, at 6349 North Clark street. According to Assistant State's Attorney Donald Thompson the company makes small loans for two weeks, charging no interest but requiring the borrower to purchase a merchandise certificate for 20 per cent of the loan.

Miss Katherine Ekstadt, 6416 North Richmond street, was arrested and the owner of the shop, Hubert Kingsley, last night telephoned Sergts. John Walsh and James Zegar that he would surrender this morning.

$18,000 FOR TUG IS GOOD BARGAIN, STATES SPRAGUE

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, declared yesterday that the charges made by Ald. James C. Moreland [41st] at the meeting of the city council Thursday that the city is paying too much for the tug Kenosha are without foundation. The commissioner said investigation had shown that the boat was a good bargain for the city at $18,000.

"The city has paid much more than the price of the boat for monthly and overtime rental of tugs in a single year," said Col. Sprague.

Ald. Moreland's charges were based on a statement made by a relative, Capt. Ava Smith, who sailed on the tug a number of years ago. Capt. Smith later said that his statement had been that the tug wasn't worth $1,500 to him and that he didn't know how much it would be worth to the city.

BRITON BOYCOTTS U. S. MOVIES TO HELP PAY DEBT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 8.—G. L. C. Beattie has a grouch, but he thinks relief is handy. In a letter which the Evening News printed today, Beattie remarks that Senator Hiram Johnson of California suggests Great Britain could pay her war debt if every one gave up one visit to the movies monthly.

"If giving up films is American, I consider this a very just idea," Beattie declared. "My wife and I see approximately 12 American films yearly.

"Enclosed please find check for 2 guineas [around $7.25], representing abstention from American films for one year. Kindly hand this over toward the payment of the American debt. If others do likewise Great Britain will teach America what reparations mean."

BRITAIN DECREES DEATH PENALTY IN INDIA REVOLT

Stiffens Policy Against Outbreaks.

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Great Britain stiffened its policy in India still further today by promulgation of a new ordinance empowering judges to pass any sentence, including the sentence of death, upon any person convicted of disobeying the series of emergency orders recently enacted.

The courts may pass sentence in the absence of the defendant and by recording only the substance of the evidence.

The roundup of Nationalist leaders continued and the ordinance outlawing the congress party was extended to Delhi province and the presidency of Madras. Dr. Ansari, acting president of the congress, and Dr. Choksey, another prominent leader, were among those arrested during the day.

Condemn Government's Policy.

Meanwhile the powerful Bombay cotton brokers association, which usually sets the pace for other important business organizations, drafted a resolution condemning the government's policy. It will be acted upon on Monday.

The Hindustan Republican society, a secret organization standing for independence through violent methods, plastered some sections of the city with flaming red posters of warning.

"Beware, demons of a vanishing empire!" the posters read. "We warn British officials to go about always armed. On orders the soldiers of our society will kill any officer. Therefore, beware! We also warn all Nationalists not to interfere with our solemn duty."

The cotton brokers' resolution described Viceroy Lord Willingdon's refusal to grant Mahatma Gandhi's interview before his arrest as "an insult to the whole nation."

Warns of Trade Paralysis.

"The unheard of ordinances enacted by the government deprive all classes of their elementary rights by placing them virtually under a régime of unbridled despotism," says the resolution. "In their far reaching effects they are worse than martial law and this condition inevitably will result in endless misery to the people. It will not only cause complete cessation of trade, but will destroy the good will between India and Great Britain."

The resolution urges the viceroy to withdraw all repressive measures and to negotiate with Mahatma Gandhi, "the idol of the nation."

The Nationalist leaders, apparently helpless under the new emergency ordinances, concede that the government has won a "temporary victory," but maintain that a policy of repression can do nothing but destroy whatever possibility there is for willing allegiance of the people to British rule. They predicted that the struggle would go on for two years.

NICKEL PLATE ASKS MORE TIME ON CALUMET JOB

The Nickel Plate railroad petitioned the Illinois commerce commission at Springfield yesterday for additional time in which to start work on improvements at 103d street and throughout the Lake Calumet region, which were ordered by the commission last March. The railroad pleaded that because of a decreased income it is unable to finance the projects at this time.

The work involves the opening of 103d street by a viaduct over the tracks of the Nickel Plate, the Chicago and Western Indiana, and the Belt Railroad of Chicago. The Nickel Plate also was ordered to relocate its Stony Island yards south of 103d street, permitting the opening of streets north of that thoroughfare as far as 79th street.

COUNTY PENSIONS TO 7,900 TO GO UNPAID TODAY

There will be no mothers' pension checks paid today to 1,962 mothers and 6,000 children who are partly supported by the county. The checks due today are for the last half of December. In all, six weeks' pensions, amounting to $450,000, are in arrears and no money is in sight, the county treasurer said yesterday.

The county board will act on Monday on the suggestion of Judge Mary Bartelme of the Juvenile court, who has requested that the county bureau of public welfare furnish food to the families on the pension rolls, which can be charged off against the funds due them. Judge Bartelme, who administers the pensions, reminded the commissioners that a similar procedure was followed two years ago.

How One Woman Lost 47 Lbs. of Fat

In 3 Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it." Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern N. C.

"P. S. You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents.

When reducing attention to diet will help—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat.

To take off fat harmlessly and safely, take one half teaspoon of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning—don't worry—it's the safe way to reduce.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any druggstore in the world and if the results one bottle brings do not delight you—do not joyfully satisfy you—why money back.

DR. RADCLIFFE OF WAUKEGAN DIES; STRUCK BY TRUCK

Dr. Arthur A. Radcliffe, 77 years old, 2134 Ash street, Waukegan, a pioneer resident of that city, died in the Victory Memorial hospital there last evening from injuries suffered on Thursday when he was run down by a truck at Sheridan road and Franklin street, Waukegan.

Dr. Radcliffe began to practice in Waukegan in 1891. He is survived by his widow, Ella, and a son, Arthur Jr.

Louis E. Clark Jr., 404 North Genesee street, Waukegan, the driver of the truck, was not held. He said that Dr. Radcliffe had walked in front of the truck.

A Negro was fatally injured and six other persons, including three detectives, were bruised when an automobile containing four Negroes and traveling at an alleged speed of 50 miles an hour, crashed into a detective bureau squad car at Indiana and 47th streets early this morning.

The police car, assigned to Lieut. William Cusack of the narcotic detail, was hurled 55 feet and overturned. The other machine caromed into a street pole, bounced off and broke apart 200 feet further. The policemen injured are John Mangin, James Wolfe, and John McNamara. The man killed was James Howard, 30 years old, 3739 Indiana avenu. His companions were Fred Miller, 26, 5401 Indina avenue; Benny Clark, 18, 720 East 38th street, and Theodore Roe, 22, 428 East 47th street. Lieut. Cusack was not in the police car. Police arrested Miller, Clark, and Roe.

The death of Howard and two others brought the toll since Jan. 1 to 33. The victims:

Le Roy Schuler, 27 years old, 2458 Division street, River Grove, a railroad switchman. Died in the St. Elizabeth hospital from a skull fracture suffered on Dec. 6 when his automobile collided with another machine at Grand and Harlem avenues.

Martin Schendor, 60 years old, 3711 South Wood street. Died in St. Paul's hospital from injuries suffered on Dec. 29 when he was run down at 36th street and Ashland avenue. The driver was Victor Vozzi, 6732 South Hermitage avenue.

Gordon H. Campbell, 23 years old, 542 West 62d street, a chemist in the Gary steel mills, was killed yesterday when his coupe was demolished by a switch engine of the Pennsylvania lines at the Dickey road crossing in Hammond.

BRITAIN REFUSES TO BACK U. S. IN WARNING TO TOKIO

French Hold Back; Italy's Attitude Uncertain.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune 'ress Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Great Britain will not join the United States in its demand for an open door in Manchuria. The reason, as learned today from a high authority, is that Great Britain, as a member of the league of nations, received assurances from the Tokio delegate at Geneva that Japan had no intention to interfere with the open door policy, and the British feel they cannot go behind this assurance.

There is also some irritation here and in France as well over the action of Secretary of State Stimson in sending his note to Japan without previous consultation with the other powers signatory to the nine power pact. Owing to their membership in the league the European nations are in a somewhat different position than the United States.

Just what action will be taken the British government has not yet announced, but within the next twenty-four hours a diplomatic note will be sent to Washington and a soothing communication to Tokio.

France Holds Back.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—No decision has been reached as to whether France will join the United States in invoking the nine power treaty in the far east, a foreign office statement said tonight. It was pointed out that the United States has more freedom to act than France, which is linked with the league of nations, and that the necessity for immediate steps on France's part is not so urgent because her interests in Manchuria are not so important.

Italy to Decide Today.

ROME, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The foreign office withheld tonight any comment on possible Italian participation in the American initiative toward Manchuria under the nine power pact.

Officials said a decision would not likely be announced before tomorrow. Unofficially, it was said that Italian interests in Manchuria are considerable, ranking about fourth among the signatories to the pact and including concessions and much private property.

China to Strengthen Stand.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8.—America's action in invoking the nine-power treaty was received with the greatest satisfaction at Nanking.

The central executive committee of the Kuomintang met at 8 o'clock tonight to discuss the note. It is expected that a formal reply will be dispatched tomorrow morning.

It is understood that China will approve the American action and restate China's attitude toward the Manchurian situation, but the restatement is likely to be considerably more determined now. It was reported tonight that Nanking was considering breaking off diplomatic relations with Japan.

Dr. Kan Chai-Hou, vice minister of foreign affairs, announced at Nanking today that China would invoke article 16 of the league of nations covenant, which provides for sanctions of an economic and military nature against members resorting to war in disregard of the covenant, when the league council meets on Jan. 25.

U. S. Awaits Reaction.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—The attention of the administration today was directed as much to Europe as to the far east for the first reactions to the firm identic notes sent yesterday to Japan and China asserting American rights under the nine power treaty of 1922, the Kellogg anti-war treaty and the open door policy.

The action taken by the United States, it was again emphasized today, was not an invocation of the nine power treaty with its guarantee of the territorial and administrative integrity of China, as well as the open door policy, but a declaration of American rights under that pact. Had the treaty been formally invoked, presumably a conference of all the signatories would have been called to take action.

While officials had little to say regarding the action taken yesterday in maintaining this country's historic open door policy, it was evident that the Japanese encroachments on American business interests in China played a big part in this country's decision to act. In recent weeks many inquiries have come from business houses telling of infringements on their trade and asking what the attitude of the government was to be.

JAPANESE ACTION RECALLS SEIZURE OF COREA IN 1895

The attempted assassination of Emperor Hirohito by a Corean at a time when Japan is engaged in extensive military operations in Manchuria recalls the case of Corea. In 1894-'95, and again in 1910, Corea occupied space in world newspapers comparable with that given to the Manchurian situation today.

For centuries China has exercised suzerainty over Corea. The kings of Corea, a country twice the size of New York state and with a population of about 17,000,000 now, paid tribute to China.

In 1894 Chinese and Japanese forces which were in Corea, supposedly to help the government put down an insurrection, clashed and a war flamed up which spread to Manchuria and covered much the same ground the Chinese and Japanese troops have fought over in the present Manchurian dispute. The Chinese were no match for the Japanese. Both on land and sea the Nipponese defeated the Chinese decisively. China signed away its suzerainty over Corea. Japan established a sort of protectorate, guaranteeing the continuance of the Corean ruling family in power. This continued until 1910, when the emperor of Corea ceded his power to Japan and a Japanese governor general took control.

DUTCH STUDENT LOSES STOCK.

Peter Bonema, 22 years old, a Bible student from Holland, who has been living at 153 Institute place, reported the loss of a prayer book and seven shares of stock worth $225 yesterday. He was starting back to Holland when he discovered the loss of his brief case at the Union bus depot, Wabash avenue and Roosevelt road.

Japanese Cabinet Which Resigned

wheels of the second carriage, occupied by Dr. Kitokuro Inki, minister of the imperial household. An imperial guardsman was slightly wounded and three horses were struck by fragments of the bomb.

Three police officers and two gendarmes immediately arrested Li, who was rushed into the police station. Newspapers issued extras, but these were taken from the newsboys by the police and for several hours the public was in the dark regarding the incident. However, an air of consternation was apparent everywhere.

After the cabinet council, the government resigned en bloc with the exception of Tukugoro Nakabashi, home minister; Teijiro Yamamoto, minister of agriculture, and Yonezo Mayeda, minister of commerce, who is traveling. The premier took the resignations to the palace at 5:12 p. m., but the emperor requested the cabinet to carry on for the time being.

May Ignore U. S. Note.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the foreign office declared tonight that Japan, seeing a marked resemblance between the memorandum from the United States invoking the nine power treaty and the verbal note handed to Japan on May 13, 1915, protesting against the famous 21 demands on China, may not reply to Secretary of State Stimson's declaration. Japan did not reply to the protest of 1915.

The Japanese spokesman declared that despite the American memorandum Japan must recognize any de facto government in Manchuria, as it always has. This does not mean that Japan does not recognize the de jure government in Nanking, for it always has and will continue to attempt to obtain an ultimate settlement of Chinese and Manchurian affairs from the central government. But, regarding local Manchurian matters, such as railways and trade, Japan must deal with the government actually in charge of the Manchurian administration, it was declared.

Says Chang Was Independent.

"It must also be remembered that Nanking has never, in fact, exercised administrative authority in Manchuria, with the exception of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's action in hoisting the Chinese flag and accepting the post of vice commander in chief of the Chinese army, navy and air forces as his only sign of allegiance to the Nanking régime," the spokesman said.

"In practice and point of fact Chang has always dealt independently with Japan. Japan always recognizes the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Nanking over Manchuria, but China has never exercised administrative authority there.

"Japan regrets that the open door should be hampered by chaos, but thinks that if Japan succeeds in clearing this up it will result in promoting the open door. All we insist on is that Manchuria should not be reduced to chaos again."

Japanese Army Resentful.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Jan. 8.—(AP)—News that the American government had invoked the nine power treaty and the Kellogg pact was received in Japanese military circles with mingled surprise and resentment.

While they refused to talk for publication, they maintained informally that Japan's military operations in Manchuria were consonant with existing peace treaties and that there were many precedents for the course followed in occupying the territory.

STEAL COP'S CAR AS HE LEARNS TO CATCH THIEVES

Detective P. H. McInerney, attached to the stolen auto detail at the detective bureau, parked his car at Roosevelt road and State street last night. Then, with his partner, John Doherty, he went to the detail quarters and listened to an hour's instructions by Lieut. Maurice Wall on how to prevent automobile thievery and how to catch the thieves. The lesson over, he returned to where he had parked his automobile. A few minutes later he confronted Lieut. Wall. "Please give me the lesson over again on the part referring to how to catch auto thieves," he asked. "Some one just stole my car."

BLIMP RESCUES FLYERS, DOWN IN THE EVERGLADES

Aurora Pilot Wins Trophy Event at Races.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Forced to land in the inaccessible Everglades late yesterday afternoon when a throttle rod of their plane broke, two flyers from Tampa en route to the All-American Air races under way here were rescued this afternoon by a Goodyear blimp that hovered over their wrecked plane and dropped a rope ladder for them to ascend.

Art Rigney, the pilot, and Ishmel Escalante, his student, told of being attacked by clouds of insects all last night while they stood by their plane waiting to be sighted and rescued. They were brought to the airport in the blimp Puritan after being seen by E. S. Hensley, Tampa pilot, who was also flying to the air races here. An autogiro piloted by Jim Faulkner reached the stranded flyers first, but was signaled not to try to land in the marshy ground. Neither Rigney nor his student was injured. Their plane was a Bird biplane, powered by a Kinner motor.

Livingston Takes Trophy.

The rescue of Rigney and Escalante occurred in the midst of a thrilling program of speed events, including the Ecuador and French trophy races. John Livingston of Aurora, Ill., who has won more national air races than any other pilot, captured the Ecuador trophy in his yellow monocoupe, flying the fifteen mile course at an average speed of 141.68 miles an hour. The finish was close, John P. Morris of Pittsburgh, also flying a monocoupe, ending in second place and Barton Stevenson of Kansas City, with another monocoupe, in third. The three planes were Warner powered.

Art Davis of Lansing, Mich., won the French trophy race at an average speed of 140.35 miles an hour in a Waco powered by Wright, and Karl Voelter of Pittsburg finished second in a Travelair powered by Wright. Clyde Pangborn, around the world flyer, finished third in a Pitcairn. Both trophies were awarded by foreign governments.

Art Carnahan of Bloomington, Ill., flying a monocoach powered by a Wright motor, won the Italian trophy race with a speed of 120.17 miles an hour. Howard Allor of Miami, flying a Waco, took second place, and John K. Lagrone of Kansas City, third, in a Waco. The race was limited to planes with motors of 225 horsepower.

Mrs. Betty Lund of Chicago, widow of the famous stunt pilot, Freddie Lund, drew the crowd's applause with a demonstration of aerobatics as a preliminary to the contest for the Freddie Lund Memorial cup, for which Art Killips of Chicago, Martin Jensen of Camden, N. J., and other pilots competed.

Army Does Some Bombing.

Army bombers blew up a miniature city of Miami as part of the program of army, navy and marine planes this afternoon. Three autogiros flew in formation and the Goodyear blimps circled the airport. More than 225 planes have arrived to participate in the air races and a majority of the outstanding pilots of the country, led by Maj. James H. Doolittle, former army ace and Bendix trophy winner, are present.

Results of other race events were:

Bomb dropping—Harold E. Neuman, Moline, Ill., first; Carl A. Dixon, New Britain, Conn., second and Monroe Bradley, Miami, Fla., third. Distance from target, eleven feet two inches.

Dead stick landing—Hugh L. Woods, Miami, Fla., first; Carl A. Dixon, New Britain, Conn., second, and Elkin Floyd, Brookville, Fla., third. Distance from mark, ten feet ten and one-half inches.

Parachute jumping—Dick Hunter, Greensboro, N. C., first; Ace Potter, Miami, Fla., second, and Fay F. Wilcox, Niles, Mich., third. Distance from mark, eighty-five feet.

M'HENRY COUNTY TO INVESTIGATE PURE MILK ASSN.

Complaints of a group of McHenry county, Illinois, dairy farmers on the price they receive for milk sold in Chicago through the Pure Milk association is to be made the starting point of an investigation of the association by State's Attorney V. S. Lumley of Woodstock.

Lumley declared yesterday that several farmers had complained about the basis of their membership in the milk association, which contracts to sell the milk of 19,000 dairymen in three states supplying Chicago and nearby cities. He indicated the investigation might be taken before the McHenry county grand jury, which convenes Monday.

"There is a power of some kind in the Pure Milk association," stated Lumley, "that can either reduce or increase the basis of production and payment from a farmer's herd while the farmer has little to say about it."

He declined to divulge the names of the complainants, but cited cases of one dairyman who "had been tricked out of his membership" in the association and of another who had purchased part of a member's herd but could not continue to sell the milk of the purchased cows to the market the association had maintained.

Flying Forecasts

Special flying route forecasts for the period from 8 p. m. Dec. 8 to noon Dec. 9:

GERMAN FASCISTI DEBATE FATE OF VON HINDENBURG

Decision on Extending Term Due Today.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—Ten thousand Fascisti assembled in the Sport palace tonight to hear one of their leaders, Joseph Goebbels, discuss the possibility of President von Hindenburg's re-election.

Goebbels in his speech attacked the assistant chief of police, whereupon the police censor, who was present, ordered the meeting dissolved. The 10,000 Nazis displayed iron discipline. Instead of rioting, as the police had expected them to do, they disbanded in perfect order "to prove to Germany that the National-Socialists are truly dignified and are men who remain calm even when unduly provoked," Goebbels told them before retiring from the rostrum.

Hold 59 Political Meetings.

Berlin is seething with political activity. Fifty-nine political meetings were held tonight. The communists held the record with 20 meetings, the Nazis held 10, the "Steel Helmets" 11, and the jobless 3. Police reinforcements were held in readiness to prevent clashes between the opposing factions.

Meanwhile, the Nationalists and Hitlerites were debating whether or not to cast their votes in the reichstag for an extension of the term of President von Hindenburg, as proposed by the government yesterday. Tomorrow at 9 p. m. their final decision will be known, according to an announcement made at the National-Socialist headquarters.

Hitler "Thinks It Over."

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, Fascist chieftain, turned his back on the leaders of the government tonight and hurried off to the Graustarkian principality of Lippe to speak in behalf of the National-Socialist candidates running in the provincial election, which takes place on Sunday.

Tomorrow he will came back and resume the series of conferences which came to a climax yesterday when he talked with Chancellor Bruening about extending the term of President von Hindenburg so that the expense and turmoil of a presidential election scheduled for next May might be avoided.

Political observers think he will accept the olive branch the chancellor has extended. There has not even been a guess as to what political concessions, if any, the government will make in return for the support of the opposition. It is in a tight spot, however, for if it concedes too much to Hitler it may alienate the Socialist support.

EVANSTON CHIEF HALTS ABLIN PLAN TO HELP GARAGES

David ["Cockeye Mulligan"] Ablin's plans to organize the garage owners of Evanston into a mutual benefit association suffered a setback yesterday. Chief William O. Freeman of the Evanston police announced that he would prevent the expansion of Mr. Ablin's business into the northern suburb.

To block Ablin's plans, Chief Freeman called a meeting of the garage owners for next Tuesday afternoon at the Evanston police station. Ablin has had many brushes with the Chicago police over his racketeering organizations and his night clubs.

"Our police department gives the garage owners ample protection now," asserted Chief Freeman, "and if Ablin shows his face in our town I'll lock him up."

D. B. FISK & CO. QUIT BUSINESS; FORM NEW FIRM

Jos. C. Beckmann Heads Corporation.

One of Chicago's oldest mercantile establishments—D. B. Fisk & Co., wholesale milliners—founded 79 years ago, has discontinued business in the thirteen story Fisk building at the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and East South Water street. A new corporation bearing the same name has leased the entire fourth floor, with 8,000 square feet of the Eastman Kodak Company building at 133-137 North Wabash avenue, through Warren A. Cahn, who represented all parties.

J. C. BECKMANN.

Joseph C. Beckmann, until recently vice president of the former Fisk concern, is president of the new D. B Fisk & Co. Dr. Robert H. Harvey, for twenty-five years president of the old time millinery concern, will be associated in an advisory capacity with the new organization. Harold Vaughan is vice president and F. J. Hall is secretary.

Established in 1853.

D. B. Fisk & Co. were established in 1853 by the late Capt. D. B. Fisk, grandfather of Mrs. Robert H. Harvey. They covered the entire country and Canada with their sales. According to President Beckmann the new Fisk concern will reduce its territory to the area between Pittsburgh and Denver and south to Mississippi. The new firm will formally open for business next Monday. The new quarters are being completely remodeled and decorated.

The thirteen story Fisk building was built by the Marshall Field estate according to the specifications of the Fisk concern, which occupied six floors. Later the building was sold to the present owner, the Miami-Deering estate, which later took over the leasehold of the entire building owned by the Fisk interests.

Clark-Division Lease.

For their sixth unit in a city and suburban chain the Stineway Drug Stores have leased the southwest corner of North Clark and West Division streets for a term of fifteen years. They have taken possession and will open their new store within two weeks, according to E. R. Perlman, who was broker for both parties. Fred Becklenberg was lessor. The upper floors of the building are occupied by the Mark Twain hotel.

The lease is on a minimum rental basis and calls for a percentage of the gross sales. The leasing company, of which Henry A. Stine is president and Max A. Stine is secretary, already operates five drug stores. Their two newest are in Oak Park, in the new building at Wisconsin avenue and North boulevard, and at the southwest corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Cornell avenue.

The other stores are at Irving Park boulevard and Cicero avenue, at Clark street and Wilson avenue, and at 69th and Halsted streets. Their latest store, according to Henry A. Stine, will be of the same modern type as the other branches. Nathan Schoenbrod was attorney for the lessees, and Oscar McGlasson for the lessor.

N. U. PROFESSORS TO BE GRADED BY THEIR STUDENTS

Students at Northwestern university have turned the tables on their instructors, and are going to grade the professors.

The Daily Northwestern, campus newspaper, yesterday sent questionnaires to 5,000 students, asking them to grade their instructors, estimating both ability and personality with the same letter system which the instructors use for the students, ranging from "A," which is perfect, down to "F," a failure.

The students are also asked four questions: Which course they like best, and which professor; and which course they dislike most, and which professor. The returns on the questionnaires are to be anonymous, the students giving only the year of their class.

SHIPPING BOARD IS ACCUSED OF $982,000 WASTE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Controller General McCarl, in a 113 page report to congress, today severely criticized the United States shipping board for what he termed unwarranted expenditures, "the free gift of supplies, equipment, and stores valued at approximately $982,321 to purchasers of shipping board vessels," and for its attitude in "avoiding" an accounting by his office.

The report said that in addition to the grent amount of equipment and supplies given to the purchasers of the vessels without cost, deck chairs, medical supplies, and other stores worth $114,000 had been thrown away by the shipping board when the ships were sold. Mr. McCarl said that the passenger vessels sold three years ago were disposed of for only one-fourth cash, the remainder in promissory notes. The second note for the Leviathan, he reported, was not paid, and interest on the notes for that one ship totaled $397,220 on Oct. 31, 1931.

"The board itself, as other federal agencies, being subject to regulatory statutes and accountable for its uses of public moneys," Mr. McCarl said in a foreword to his report, "avoids such regulatory control and accountability by operating through its corporate creature, the fleet corporation."

Deaths from Communicable Diseases Show Decline

Deaths from communicable diseases in Chicago showed a slight decrease last month from those in December, 1930, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, reported yesterday. There were 423 deaths last month and 430 in December, 1930. Last month 407 cases and 166 deaths due to tuberculosis were reported, as compared to 426 cases and 177 deaths in the same month of 1930. Pneumonia showed an increase, there being 746 cases and 219 deaths last month and 609 cases and 213 deaths in December, 1930. There were 623 cases and nine deaths from scarlet fever, as compared to 823 cases and 14 deaths in the same month a year ago.

NAVAL TRUCE NO BAR TO ENACTING A NAVY PROGRAM

U. S. Too Far Behind to Be Affected.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—A letter written by Secretary of State Stimson and read before the senate naval affairs committee today definitely brushed aside the possibility that authorization of a London treaty warship construction program would be in violation of the letter or the spirit of the naval construction truce entered into by President Hoover last October.

ADMIRAL WILLIAM V. PRATT.

The Stimson letter, addressed to Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, was read into the record by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations and chief technical expert on the American delegation to the London conference in 1930. It had been called for by Chairman Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.] of the committee as a means of removing all doubt as to the legality of congress passing his bill authorizing 800 million dollars' worth of warships to build the fleet up to our treaty ratios with Japan and parity with Great Britain.

Plenty to Do Under Truce.

"So far as it can be seen, the proposed truce does not seriously affect the navy," Secretary Stimson wrote to Mr. Adams in October, when the building holiday was under consideration. "It permits the completion of ships building and contracted for. It permits replacement building and it would seem by omission of any provision to the contrary, that it permits authorizations and appropriations for other vessels, provided they are not begun prior to Nov. 1, 1932.

The Stimson letter also stated that the United States reserved the right to exercise any reservations made by other powers in ratifying the truce. Admiral Pratt said that, practically, the truce would not hurt the United States, as the United States was so woefully behind in naval building it could build as fast as it liked without constructing other than replacements.

Pratt for Navy Bill.

Responding to queries, Admiral Pratt strongly advocated approval of a naval authorization bill at this session and the construction of warships needed to give the nation security and sufficient power to protect its overseas possessions, its continental limits and its trade. He scoffed at the idea that this country could proceed on the pacifist theory that there will be no more wars.

"No sane man," he asserted, "can say war will not come again some time. The history of the world bears this out and present conditions do not indicate that another war as impossible."

Admiral Pratt told the committee that the opinion seems to be abroad that the Kellogg pact prevents the use of force. In explaining that he did not consider this to be true, the admiral took what was interpreted as a slap at Japan for its activities in Manchuria.

Explains Article I.

"Article I. of the treaty allows strong nations," he said, "to do whatever they please so long as no declaration of war is made. If the other nation objects and declares war, then it becomes the aggressor."

Admiral Pratt urged immediate authorization of a London treaty fleet either through enactment of the 850 million dollar Hale bill or the Vinson 616 million dollar measure. He said Great Britain could be depended on to keep up her navy to treaty strength if her pocketbook held out.

Admiral Pratt declined to answer a query as to whether the United States navy was strong enough to repel an attempted invasion by the strongest naval power.

"Why should we advertise our weakness," one senator said in supporting the admiral's reluctance to testify on this point.

ACCUSE FORMER BROKER OF POSING AS U. S. AGENT

Leslie Loh, 35 years old, said to have been a wealthy insurance broker at one time, was held to the federal grand jury by Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday on a charge of impersonating a government officer. His bonds were set at $2,500.

According to Assistant United States District Attorney Edward A. Fisher, the charge against Loh arises from an alleged attempt to force Tom Anderson, proprietor of the Cozy inn in Waukegan road at Northbrook, to pay $300 to prevent a government raid.

Three men visited him with a fake search warrant a month ago, Anderson said, and he paid them $225. He charges that Loh was the man who came back later to get a package containing the $75 due. Loh was arrested by deputy marshals when he made the demand. He said at a preliminary hearing before Commissioner Walker that he was hired to get the package and did not realize what was in it or the circumstances surrounding the incident.

ROBINSON RESIGNS AFTER 4 YEARS ON RADIO COMMISSION

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Commissioner Ira E. Robinson of West Virginia today submitted to President Hoover his resignation as a member of the federal radio commission effective Jan. 15. His two year term would have expired on Feb. 23, and his resignation rounds out nearly four years of service on the commission, the first two of which he served as its chairman.

He will engage in the private practice of law.

Prominently mentioned for appointment to the post, which is for the second radio zone, made up of the east-central tier of states, is Col. Thad H. Brown, of Ohio, general counsel of the commission and active in Republican politics. His appointment by President Hoover is expected within the next few days.

Also mentioned for the position are William D. Terrell, radio director of the commerce department, and the government's first radio official, and Ellis A. Yost, of West Virginia, at present the commission's chief examiner. Mr. Terrell is a Virginia Republican and served under Hoover for the eleven years that he was secretary of commerce.

UNCLE SAM WILL SIT IN ON PRESS 'GAG' CONFERENCE

League Out to Censor Arms Parley News.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Uncle Sam is going to sit in officially at an international conference under the auspices of the league of nations to devise ways and means of controlling the press during the international disarmament conference at Geneva—the first organized attempt to establish international censorship since the war. The press conference opens at Copenhagen on Monday.

This Copenhagen rally is a convention, according to well informed quarters, of government spokesmen—the traditional journalistic cliches used to designate members of the government press bureaus, or in plain English, governmental press agents.

Besides the chief of the league's press section, stated members of certain press agencies will attend. This, undoubtedly, refers to various semi-official government subsidized agencies, such as the French Havas, which transmit official handouts. Whether any American agencies are to be represented is not stated here.

The Copenhagen conference is the result of a resolution passed at the eleventh assembly of the league. The original resolution was introduced by Alejandro Lerroux, then Spain's foreign minister. Its objective was information "regarding proceedings at the disarmament conference for the press of all nations, thus preventing the spreading of false news calculated to disturb the maintenance of peace and friendly relations between peoples."

Want International Censorship.

A struggle has been going on at Geneva for years to set up machinery of some kind for international censorship. The Poles, Jugo-Slavs, and the Japanese have been particularly active in boosting it, but the suspicions of the big democratic powers and the violent opposition of some of the smaller countries prevented it from getting anywhere in the original form.

The league's information section can and does exercise considerable influence over the press, especially the American press, by encouraging correspondents who play Geneva's game with "inside information," but of course it hasn't the power of real censorship.

The Copenhagen conference has the germs of a permanent organization for controlling the press, for in addition to the preparations for the disarmament conference, these assembled official relations counsels will discuss "a problem of professional nature" and will seek to organize "mutual collaboration" and examine the possibility of "further regular meetings of foreign office representatives and the form that these meetings may take."

In order to keep a closer check of the press, Secretary General Sir Eric Drummond has been authorized by Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference, to ask all governments to instruct their delegations to put at the disposal of the secretariat each day the cabled press report they receive.

Seize 2 on Mexican Border in $50,000 Counterfeit Plot

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A dispatch from Mexicala today said $50,000 in counterfeit imitations of Federal Reserve of San Francisco bank notes have circulated there since January, most of them turning up in "Tecolote" gambling hall. Two suspects have been arrested through efforts of Mexicali, Calexico, and Los Angeles police, the dispatch said.

Swiss Savant Lands Among New Savages

BY FANNY BUTCHER

"Swiss Family Manhattan," by Christopher Morley [Doubleday Doran]. Published Jan. 7.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, who has a pen gayly satirical when he so wills, has done up our modern rush and tumble jauntily and charmingly in "Swiss Family Manhattan." The author has dedicated the volume to Frank C. Henry and William StanleyHall, "practitioners of laughter" to whose riant ranks every one who reads the little volume will be added. The idea is extremely amusing and the way that Mr. Morley has worked it out is warranted to tingle the funny bone of any one.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY.

The Swiss family [surnamed Robinson] consists of four members, the professor [who tells the story], late chief of the bureau of available reference at Geneva; his wife, Gretchen, and their two sons, aged 16 and 10. Not experimentally, but merely because a nice cruise is good for the spirits after too many documents, they all set out on a ten day air cruise [in the off season when the rates were low, but the wind high].

Gretchen had trouble with the motion of the boat, but the others enjoyed their first day on the great air liner, and they were all celebrating with a half bottle of champagne when the wind got higher. Finally they were in the teeth of a gale, with the rigging going off in shreds, and the corridors of the liner strewn with victims who couldn't quite make their cabins. Being prudent and methodical souls, the Robinsons buckled themselves into their pontoon lifeboats and floated off from the wreckage just as it was about to touch goal. When they stopped jolting around in the rocky air waves they found themselves caught in what the professor was sure were tree tops, but which, as morning approached, they found to be scaffolding around a terrace high in the air. Fate had landed them, though they did not know it, on one of the upper reaches of the Empire State building before it was completed.

The Robinsons, unused to buildings more than five stories high, unused to the language which reached them from the "anthropoids" working on the scaffolding beneath them, were convinced that they had landed in some savage country of tree dwellers. Prof. Robinson's explorations among those savages is the material of the rest of the book.

Prof. Robinson achieves a first hand knowledge of American life and customs which will give the "savages" whom he studied a real guffaw now and then, and a good, clean, quiet laugh every page. Part of that knowledge was gained on a lecture tour of the United States which he was induced to make by Gazelle, a slangy member of the Junior League, an organization which the professor thought was an offshoot of Geneva.

The professor, not being versed in the American language (nor the English for that matter), learned his speech by rote and was "managed" by Gazelle all over the country. Part of his popularity (and he had a vast one) was due to his inadequacies with the language. Once, upon beholding the extreme décolletage of one of the elderly ladies at one of his lectures, and mistaking a mole for "a hibernating moth" which he felt he ought to capture "before it crossed the isthmus," he consulted Gazelle, who explained, whereupon Herr Robinson exclaimed reproachfully, "That sort of thing should only be exposed to spice." Gazelle was blank. "Mouse, mice," explained the professor, "the plural of spouse is spice?" "No, darling," Gazelle corrected him, "the plural of spouse is bigamy."

The professor's quaint English gave the tour an extra fillip, as the audiences were used only to those who spoke the most perfect English and he was a national sensation. His lecture (observations on the American scene) was published under the title "What a Young Nation Ought to Know." It had a vast sale and it was almost selected by a book club. The author was tea-ed and dined and plied with every attention. Most of those attentions took place in what the professor called "speecheasies." It was through one such that he found again his Gretchen and his Fritz and his Otto who disappeared one day from their treetop home while he was in the forest foraging for food (before he went on his lecture tour). Gretchen had fitted up a nice, homey Swiss cheese and beer cellar in a vacant house whose front was boarded up. There the professor was taken by one of his intellectual friends and, through the barred door, he saw again the eyes of his beloved. The Robinsons carried on their missionary work among the hungry and the thirsty savages until they were interfered with by the law.

The end of the book finds them gloriously happy as proprietors of a gas and service station called the League of Nations station on the "Sunrise Highway," where the professor was at first shocked by some of the signs which adorned the station, especially by "7 Gals for $1, Cash Only," but which he finally understood.

AMERICANS TO HEAR ALICE TELL ABOUT WONDERLAND AUTHOR

New York, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Near the banks of the placid river Cherwell a few miles above Oxford, a young lecturer on mathematics, Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, related on a summer's day in July, 1862, the story of a little girl who wandered through a rabbit hole into amazing underground adventures.

His bright eyed listeners were the Misses Lorina, Alice and Edith Liggell, daughters of the dean of Christ Church college at Oxford. The story they heard was one that later charmed the world of childhood as "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," by Lewis Carroll.

The original Alice, now Mrs. R. G. Hargreaves, is coming to the United States this year to attend the celebration of Carroll's centenary at Columbia university in May. The centenary actually falls on Jan. 27, but Columbia postponed its festival until May so that Mrs. Hargreaves might be spared an ocean crossing in winter.

Dodgson, who had just turned thirty in 1862 could write reverend in front of his name and M. A. after it, and so far as the outside world was concerned was simply the author of dry works on geometry and trigonometry.

To the Liddell sisters he was a fascinating story teller. The guns that boomed at Vicksburg that July 4 when the tale of Alice adventures first was unwound were as far away to the entranced childish listeners as the guns of Flanders fields before which Alice Hargreaves' two sons were to fall more than half a century later.

Dodgson kept his promise to write out the story for Alice Liddell, and once in her hands it left them but twice, first in 1885 when Dodgson borrowed it for a facsimile edition, and again in 1928 when it was auctioned to Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach for $72,250. Eldridge R. Johnson of Morristown, N. J., is the present owner.

WEEK-END MARRIAGE
FARRAR & RINEHART

Another Book Depicts the History of Ships.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"The Ship Book," by Jean Dukelow and H. H. Webster [Houghton-Mifflin].

"The Three Owls," third volume, edited by Anne C. Moore [Coward McCann].

AMONG the books of interest to young people who like to know the whys and how of things, George E. Bock's "What Makes the Wheels Go 'Round" occupies a conspicuous place on current lists. It is a book on mechanical engineering for the boy of junior high school age or older for whom the subject of levers, turbines, power transmission, etc., offers stimulating reading.

The book opens with a presentation of fundamental principles of force, speed, etc., and concludes with the explanation of the complicated workings of locomotive, automobile, and electric transmission. So clearly and concisely has the author presented his facts that even the casual reader, who is in no sense a student of the subject, will find them interesting information.

The author is a practicing engineer whose enthusiasm for the mechanical evidenced itself in early years and whose understanding of his subject enables him to present a valuable and very readable account.

In "The Ship Book" by Jean Dukelow and Hanson Hart Webster, we have an exceedingly interesting book for the younger boy whose interest runs to ships and their work. This most attractive little volume tells the history of the development of ships from the canoe to the fine liners of today. For good measure it includes instructions to the young readers on making and sailing miniature models of the various types described, and an interpretation of ships' signals and of nautical terms.

All readers interested in news of children's books will be happy to know that the third volume of "The Three Owls" edited by Anne Carroll Moore, is now available. This, like the earlier volumes, is a collection of critical reviews of current children's books.

The reviews are written by authorities on juvenile literature, including Rachel Field, Charles Finger, May Lambertson Becker, and others as well known. There is also a very interesting article by Miss Moore on reviewing juvenile books, and her selection of the distinctive juveniles of the past decade. Miss Moore has been for many years head of the children's department of the New York Public library, and is nationally known for her work in behalf of better books for young people. The book is one of the most valuable aids available in the field of contemporary criticism.

MEETINGS AND LECTURES

"The Long Christmas Dinner" by Thornton Wilder will be discussed at the meeting of the Bookfellows this evening at six o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. building, 19 South La Salle street.

Mr. Leo Rosenberg will, beginning tomorrow, deliver a series of ten talks on "Great Humorists" at the Jewish People's institute. These lectures will include the following: Voltaire, Heine, Swift, Mark Twain, Oscar Wilde, Whistler, Ambrose Bierce, Bernard Shaw, and H. L. Mencken.

On Monday Mabel Oppenheim will discuss "Tendencies in Recent Literature" at the meeting of the Englewood Woman's club.

"The Last Great Adventure — Rounding the Horn" will be the subject of Shaw Desmond's lecture on Monday evening at 8:15 at the Emil G. Hirsch center.

Friends of American Writers will have a literary tea on Thursday afternoon at the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co. There "Westward Passage" by Margaret Ayer Barnes, "American Beauty" by Edna Ferber, and "Starry Adventure" by Mary Austin will be reviewed.

Reviews and discussions of recent books will be given by Ethel M. Colson Brazelton at the Joliet Woman's club on Monday, the Glenola club Tuesday, the Chicago College club Wednesday, the South Shore Country club Thursday, and the Chicago Woman's and North Shore Study clubs on Friday.

Hugh Walpole lists these novels among those he enjoyed most during the last year: "Tobit Transplanted," by Stella Benson; "Early Closing," by Wynne Wilson; "Hatter's Castle," by A. J. Cronin; "Juan in America," by Eric Linklater; "The Grasshoppers Come," by David Garnett, and "Finch's Fortune," by Mazo de la Roche. He adds that "Juan in America" and "Hatter's Castle" "have been by general consent the great novel discoveries of the year."

Cartoonist Sees Russia, Draws Pictures and Some Conclusions, Too

J. N. [Ding] Darling, American cartoonist, in his book, "Ding Goes to Russia" [Whittlesey House], has some unusually interesting and fresh things to say about the conditions there, The author traveled 8,000 miles over the country, visiting towns and villages that, as a rule, are inaccessible to the foreign traveler.

The book is illustrated with his own cartoons of the people at play, at work, in their homes, and out of them. There are sketches of the desolation of the Russian countryside, of the offices and homes of many types of Russians.

The author says that it will take the Russians many generations before they reach the standards of living that they destroyed during the revolution. But in the meantime he finds it is a valuable experiment for both the Russians and the countries that look on.

If there are important changes in economic and political policy that we need, for instance, we can copy the pattern of the Russian system without having to experience the terrible privations of its creation first. "Ding" found nude bathing a national custom, for two reasons, because the Russians have not the facilities for bathing and so take their baths in the river, and because the manufacture of bathing suits is not included in the five year plan.

"Ding" says that the workman who is well behaved gets a bread ticket which provides him with cabbage soup, black bread, and muddy looking porridge. He gets his food at the breadline. If the foreman is displeased with the workman he loses his ticket.

Treating symptoms won't stop the cold-infection from multiplying internally.

Colds must be driven out from within, otherwise you risk dangerous complications which often begin with a slight cold.

The tonic properties of Quinine combined with a gentle laxative, as in Bromo Quinine, destroy the internal infection and eliminate the impurities promptly from within the system.

YALE PROFESSOR COMES OUT FOR 4 PER CENT BEER

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—A Yale professor today told four United States senators that Uncle Sam would never hold a job in a college laboratory if he didn't do better work than he is doing on the prohibition problem.

MRS. GEORGE E. BRENNAN.

"I have heard this prohibition question referred to as a 'noble experiment,'" Yandell Henderson, professor of applied physiology at Yale university, said to the senate subcommittee on manufactures as it began hearings on Senator Hiram Bingham's [Rep., Conn.] bill to legalize 4 per cent by volume beer.

"But it's one of the worst experiments I ever heard of, in both design and execution," Prof. Henderson said. "Why, any laboratory man who couldn't make a better experiment than Uncle Sam would lose his job."

Pleases Anti-Prohibitionists.

Senator Bingham, one time Yale professor, smiled his academic approval, and feminine fans of prohibition reform, headed by Mrs. George E. Brennan of Chicago, looked pleased.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield [Rep., W. Va.], descendant of the feuding Hatfields, shot out some peppery questions of doubt, which seemed to please Bishop James Cannon Jr. and Mrs. Ella Boole, who sat near with note books.

Uncle Sam's experiment, Dr. Henderson went on to argue, has made America a nation of hard liquor drinkers consuming large quantities of "highly concentrated alcohol, causing intoxication."

Slow to Bring Intoxication.

But four per cent beer, the physiologist maintained, is so diluted and contains such a small percentage of "absolute alcohol" to be absorbed into the blood, that it can produce intoxication only if 8 or 10 quarts are drunk in rapid succession. Whereas general experience shows, he asserted, that "practically no one ever drinks two liters [half a gallon] of beer in any hour."

On the other hand Dr. Henderson contended, one, two or three cocktails, with a highly concentrated alcoholic content consumed around five o'clock in the afternoon, do cause intoxication.

Linking up drinking with driving, the professor offered this new definition for intoxication: "An intoxicating beverage is that amount of alcohol, in high concentration, which apparently impairs the ability of a man or woman to drive an automobile with safety to self and to the public."

The American taste for hard liquor, he said, by the way American tourists desert beer and wine and rush for the American bar in foreign countries, could not be cured immediately by the return of beer. But the oncoming generations, he predicted, would benefit by the change.

Calls Beer Drinking Innocent.

Speaking of youth, the professor has this to say about student drinking:

"Nothing is more innocent than for students to sit around the table at night after their work is done and sing songs and drink beer. If they are prohibited by law from doing that they will go off in twos and threes and drink hard liquor."

Recalling his own college days, Yale 1888, he said, "Why, I, nor any of my friends never carried a flask then. But today when I go to a football game at the Yale bowl, I have to step high over the bottles so I won't get my feet cut. I see not only boys but, and this is the tragedy, nice looking young girls, intoxicated."

Dr. Norris characterized return of 4 per cent beer as "the biggest piece of public health legislation possible," and also declared that it would increase prosperity and "thwart the triumphant march of the bootlegger."

Senator Bingham in explaining the bill asserted that "there is widespread disgust over the Volstead act because the average person has sense enough to know that one-half of one per cent is not intoxicating."

Drys Seize 140 Barrels of Beer in Brewery Raid

Special prohibition agents led by Deputy Chief Eliot Ness raided a large bootleg brewery yesterday at 2271 South Lumber street. The agents found 140 barrels of beer, which they said were ready for distribution. The equipment was valued at $75,000. The raiders were forced to smash in three sets of steel doors.

ASSAILS PENSION TO VETS WHO DID NOT FIGHT

Many Not in Battle, Gen. Parker Says.

Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth corps area, yesterday laid "a great deal" of the government's present fiscal distress to the policy of paying pensions to war veterans who never smelled powder. He spoke at the Hotel La Salle before the national defense committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

MAJ. GEN. PARKER.

"The country is full of men today," he said, "who are receiving life incomes from the government and yet did nothing except put on a uniform when called to the colors. They have gone home without being exposed to any personal danger, and without fighting in a single engagement."

Assails American System.

In addition to the expense from pensions, Gen. Parker deplored the needless withdrawal of thousands of men from civil occupations for military service, a policy which he said had been characteristic of the American system of defense since the revolution.

In the revolution a total of 395,000 men served, but the largest number in service at one time was 89,600, and the most Gen. Washington ever led into battle was 17,000, while in the battles of Trenton and Princeton he had only 4,000 men, Gen. Parker pointed out. In the war of 1812 527,000 men enlisted to fight the 16,580 regulars whom Great Britain had in all North America. In the Mexican war, out of 104,000 who enlisted, Gen. Taylor had only 2,100 in his border campaign and Gen. Scott only 8,479 in the march on Mexico City. In the Spanish-American war 247,000 men enlisted, but only 15,000 fought at San Juan and El Caney under Gen. Shafter.

Figures on World War.

In the world war the United States had approximately 4,800,000 men under arms, of whom only 2,086,000 got to France and 1,390,000 were in combat.

Discussing the industrial preparedness of the United States for war, Gen. Parker declared that the industrial plants of the country are no better prepared today to meet a great emergency than they were when the United States declared war on Germany.

Overall Dealer Beaten; Stock Ruined by Acid

Moe Buchalter, 35 years old, 6714 South Sangamon street, was severely beaten last night by six men who forced his automobile to the curb at Marquette boulevard and Union avenue. His assailants drove away after pouring acid on a large number of suits of overalls Buchalter was carrying in the car. According to the victim, he had gained the enmity of men connected with the organized cleaners and dyers. He sells overalls to garage men and collects their apparel to be cleaned at the plant of the International Cleaners and Dyers, 2812 South State street.

COAST GUARD AID IN RUM CARGOES LANDING SIFTED

Much Bribery in Small Amounts Alleged.

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Evidence of graft in coast guard stations on the outer Long Island shore has been gathered by investigators of the department under Rear Admiral F. C. Billard in Washington and four men have been court martialed, with a score of men awaiting trial under arrest, it was learned today.

In a statement issued in Washington, and later made public here by Capt. Randolph Ridgley, Jr., commanding this district, Admiral Billard said "a few men" in four stations had been found guilty of accepting bribes.

Admiral Billard said none of the bribes had been high, as reported, and that the men had accepted sums from rum runners and bootlegger in return for safety in landing liquor on the Long Island shore for transportation inland.

Fire Starts Investigation.

The investigation uncovering the graft began four weeks ago following the beaching of a heavily laden rum craft near the Blue Point, L. I., coast guard station. Coast guard patrols had chased the rum runner in shore and forced the crew to beach her. Although the craft was within sighting distance of the coast guard station, no cognizance of it was taken by the land station, and the cargo of contraband was loaded on trucks and taken away and the beached launch set on fire. It was only when the blaze attracted citizens who notified the fire department that the incident came to official notice.

Although he steadfastly refused to comment on the case, it is believed that Lieutenant Commander Osborne, in command of the 4th district and the Blue Point station, set the investigation under way when he returned to the station and learned of the successfully landed cargo.

Bribery Sums Small.

The investigation, which was carried on with the assistance of Capt. William J. Wheeler, chief of personnel of the coast guard, disclosed that the involved men of these four stations had received sums of from $80 to $200.

Admiral Billard stressed the point that none but enlisted men were involved in the graft charges and said no commissioned officer of the guard had ever been involved in "such an offense."

United States District Attorney Howard W. Ameli, who on Thursday questioned two coast guards on graft charges, said today that he had not done anything further in the case.

Senator Lewis Has Entirely New Name for Volstead Act

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—It was by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois that the Volstead act was dubbed by a new name in the senate today.

SEN. J. H. LEWIS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"That unhappy wart of misery that is fastened upon the body politic," he termed it, as he made his first speech since his return to the senate.

He was defending an amendment to the pending reconstruction finance corporation bill—an amendment seeking to give courts of equity the right to restrain foreclosure and dispossession proceedings until the relief machinery of the act could be set up. He was answering the objection of Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] that the amendment invaded state rights, by pointing out that the prohibition laws were foremost among many measures which have wiped out the distinction between federal and state authority.

Blister that Festers.

"There never was a violation so great of individual human liberty, a blister upon the republic that festers so completely as that unhappy wart of misery that is fastened upon the body politic," Senator Lewis declared.

"My friend sat here and witnessed the passing of a law which allows a state court to seize a building in any state upon the pretense that there is whisky sold in that place, the property nailed up and taken by confiscation, while the man himself and his family are dishonored for life.

"This law goes into the state, into the private undertakings of the citizen, the financial undertakings of the community, and since it does, I demand that the laws shall be executed in behalf of the humble and miserable, who are powerless, as well as in behalf of those who are powerful."

His amendment, the senator explained, smoothing the famous beard with graceful thumb and forefinger, was "to rescue those who are upon the eve of being ejected from their premises and sent to the atmosphere of the chill winter, with no shelter above them other than the weeping wintry skies."

He had his bit of fun with the moratorium, declaring that seemingly it came from the Latin "mori," to die, plus "taurus," the bull, meaning therefore "the dead bull."

His was but one of many lengthy speeches made upon the reconstruction bill in a debate during which many amendments were proposed and several adopted.

Amendments Passed.

Most important of the amendments passed by the senate were: One by Senator Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.] to provide that the two billion dollar credit facilities of the federally financed corporation may be extended to embrace new financing by federal and joint stock land banks and live stock and agricultural credit associations; one by Sentor Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] excluding Canadian together with other foreign securities from being put up as collateral for loans from the corporation: one by Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] to provide that bonds of a corporation shall not be exempt from federal inheritance, estate and gift taxes; and another by Senator Reed stipulating that when export bills of exchange are offered as collateral they shall be payable in dollars and guaranteed by an American bank of sound standing.

The long debate prevented the expected vote today and final passage of the bill, which, it is taken for granted, is looked for tomorrow.

Hunt Jeweled Pin Lost by Daughter of Cermak

Police yesterday were attempting to find a $1,500 breast pin, a gift of Mayor Cermak to his daughter, Mrs. Kenlay, which was lost or stolen on Thursday. Mrs. Kenlay said she missed the pin as she was bidding her father good-by in the Grand Central railroad station as he left for Washington, D. C. It is of platinum and is set with three large and 100 small diamonds and six sapphires. Chief of Detectives Schoemaker assigned Sergts. Robert McCarthy and Samuel Block to make a search of pawnshops for the pin.

PASTOR RUM RAID SLAYER HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Palatka, Fla., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—In default of $5,000 bond E. H. McGaha, crusading Christian minister, charged in connection with the fatal shooting of John W. Malone during a raid on a liquor still Dec. 24 which McGaha directed, is behind the bars of the county jail to await action of the April grand jury on a manslaughter charge.

McGaha was committed back to jail today after a preliminary hearing held before Justice P. B. Huff in which the minister declined to take the stand to testify in his own behalf. Justice Huff fixed the amount of the bond.

Deputy Sheriff G. W. Prater, a member of the raiding party, created a surprise at the hearing when he emphatically asserted that Charles Jackson, the helper produced at the coroner's inquest as the one who had accompanied Malone to the still, was not the pastor's companion.

McGaha faced the court today with greatly changed demeanor. Immediately following his arrest he had been confident that his release was a mere formality. He had pleaded to be allowed to leave the jail in order to preach on Sunday as usual. He informed members of his church who visited him that there was nothing to the case and that he would be exonerated, alleging his gun had fired accidentally. Today, however, the youthful pastor appeared in a crowded court room pale of countenance and subdued in manner. He plainly showed the result of the suspense under which he has been since the killing.

Meanwhile, some action is being taken to oust him from the pulpit which he obtained shortly after coming here to conduct an evangelical campaign.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE BLIGHT OF A NEW TAX.

Downstate members of the house of representatives threaten to make the income tax the price of legislation for the relief of Chicago. If they do so they will be unreasonable and unwise. The cause of the present trouble is excessive taxation incompetently and dishonestly levied plus dishonest spending of the revenue. A new tax cannot be collected. The old taxes cannot be paid if they are levied to satisfy extravagant and corrupt spending. The tax sources will be strained now to meet honest and reasonable levies for the bare necessities of public service. The wreck of the tax machinery has produced an accumulation of bills which are too heavy for the private resources which must pay them. The income tax would be an added tax and it couldn't be paid. The people haven't the money to meet the present delinquencies of government.

It is foolish or knavish to pretend that the remedy for a community prostrated by the conscienceless dissipation of public funds is another tax. It is, furthermore, unreasonable and unfair to complicate emergency legislation with a bill which could do no good in the emergency. The situation is too desperate to permit the use of ordinary legislative tactics.

The proponents of the income tax should have more regard for the plight of the people involved in the consequences of their action. They are dealing with suffering and dread of the future. The critical affairs of a great city are in their hands. It is, if they have not given it consideration before, a fact that the city does not know how it can keep going. It is not ordinary political action which is asked of the legislature, but an almost unbelievable condition which is presented to it.

So controversial a subject as the income tax should not have been introduced at a session called for the purposes of this one. If its proponents want to prove good faith and show good sense they will drop it.

EVENTS IN MANCHURIA.

Suppression of banditry and protection of Japanese life and property in Manchuria have now extended to the capture of the mountain barrier city of Shanhaikwan, in the Chinese province of Chihli, of which Peiping is, or was, the capital. In other circumstances this might be, and the Chinese no doubt call it, an invasion. Its tactical reasons are plain. If Japan is to administer the peace in the adjoining territory within Manchuria it is obviously expedient to control the gateway into Manchuria and hold the great wall which ends at Shanhaikwan at the sea. That town on the wall dominates the district, and it is easy to understand the unwillingness of the Japanese forces to leave it in the possession of the Chinese, not only because it is a convenient refuge for the so-called bandits but because it commands the narrow pass between the sea and the mountain country, as its name implies, which opens South Manchuria to an invading army from the south. It will be interesting to see whether Japan keeps this post in its possession.

Another development which may have more significance than need be given it now is the report of the advance of a Japanese force into Jehol, a large administrative district of Inner Mongolia, Chinese territory. Northern Jehol has been developing economic relations with Manchuria.

Meanwhile Russian silence and inaction is suggestive. All immediate indications point to a policy of Japanese expansion which already has control over all southern Manchuria and may soon include at least a part of Inner Mongolia, a region of increasing agricultural production and therefore of food supply for Japan. But the expansion of Japanese control to the northward in Manchuria, to say nothing of the hinted expansion into Inner Mongolia, substitutes a strong power for a weak and distracted one on the Russian frontier and athwart the path of Russian advance, if any is even remotely contemplated by Russian ambition.

The quiescence of Moscow during these developments may be the result of difficulties which absorb all of the government's attention or, rather, all of its powers. We are permitted to know some of these difficulties, but they do not seem serious enough to account for the fact that the soviet foreign office is not even indulging in diplomatic gestures. The probability is that Moscow and Tokio have come to a definite understanding which leaves the latter's hands free in an agreed sphere.

If this exists it is a momentous development in international politics, but it does not dispose of the possibility, perhaps probability, of a future collision between Russia and Japan, for Japan at present is getting much the best of it. Russia's interest in obtaining access to the ice free harbors, to say nothing of the potentially rich territory to the south, is not likely to die out. This and other reasons make Russia and Japan uneasy neighbors.

MR. STIMSON AGAIN TO JAPAN.

Mr. Stimson, for whatever may be the consequences, is persistent with Japan. The league of nations has confessed its futility. The European powers have apparently constrained themselves, separately, to be satisfied with what Japan is doing in Manchuria. Nearly all of them have embarrassment in protesting against occupation of Asiatic territory. Action they could not agree upon in common they have not undertaken one by one. The American secretary of state, however, is stubborn.

In his latest note Mr. Stimson seems to shift definitely to the ground of American rights, policy and treaties, reminding the Japanese that there are agreements other than the Kellogg peace treaty and that the United States cannot consent to their impairment. The nations which signed the nine power treaty for the stabilization of Asia have been handed copies of the American note.

If no previous irritations had been given Japan by the unusual procedure of the American state department the warning now given that treaties and rights must be respected would be faultless. The United States could be expected to serve notice that conditions forced upon China must not injure the legitimate interests of the United States and its citizens. Both China and Japan have made agreements which must be respected as they affect the United States. The traditional American policy is for the open door in China. America may object to an imperialistic advance which threatens its trade relations with another friendly nation. Japan could not ignore such protests unless it desired to create unfriendly relations with the United States.

This simplicity of procedure which Japan would find it difficult to resist has been muddled, however, by the infatuation of the state department for other methods, including that of the temporary alliance with the league of nations to bring moral pressure on Japan. Whenever the secretary of state has departed from the ordinary course of American negotiations with a foreign power he has given Japan a grievance which could have been avoided. This has put the United States out in front as the principal obstructor of Japanese policy without getting anything but resentment for the United States.

Mr. Stimson still refers to the Kellogg treaty and will probably continue to carry that load. All the Kellogg treaty does is to keep the war from being a war and to increase the number of the convenient Chinese bandits which compel the Japanese advances. No nation yet has respected its signature to that agreement when it wanted to do otherwise and an appeal to the treaty has developed only chicane or scorn.

THE MATCH KING GIVES LIGHT.

A cooling hand has been laid upon the fevered brow of Uncle Sap. Ivar Krueger, Swedish "match king" and one of the greatest industrialists in the world, has told Mr. Hoover that "Europe has its problems, but I do not believe they are of the kind to cause panic in America."

Whether this will in any degree allay the passion of our government for saving Europe from itself, in spite of itself, and at our own expense, may be doubted. But the hint should have some influence upon the psychosis of fear which undoubtedly afflicts many Americans who are taking the alarums and propaganda of Europe at face value. Mr. Krueger is trying to tell us politely to buck up and attend to our own knitting. What ails us chiefly is our own extravagance, public and private. The latter has been violently suppressed and it remains for us to see to it that our governments, national, state, and local, follow suit. As we get rid of the blue funk which has been studiously planted in our ingenuous minds and cultivated since 1914 we shall see clearly the road back to healthy self-confidence and the national prosperity it commands, and we shall know that our duty is here at home, and first and foremost to stop the exhaustion of the nation's strength by wasteful public expenditure, to take from the back of productive enterprise and of the harassed people the vast burden of debt that self-seeking politics and socialistic nostrums for every ill, real or imaginary, have piled upon us.

A British oil magnate lately in America told his friends at home that he was astonished at the depth of the moral depression in the United States. Mr. Krueger gives us a hint to the same effect. The trouble with America is not Europe, though Europe contributes to it. The problem of America is not to save Europe from bankruptcy, but to save ourselves from bankruptcy.

LYNCHINGS CAN BE STOPPED

[The Des Moines Register.]

Tuskegee institute has a very obvious interest in the progress of tolerance between the colored and white races, and therefore in the lynching evil. Its research department collects records constantly not only on lynchings but on ramified phases of the whole field of racial antagonism.

The institute now reports that there were 13 persons lynched during the last year, and that 12 of them were Negroes. There is no especial significance in the fact that this was 8 fewer lynchings than occurred in 1930. For it was more than had occurred in 1929 or 1928.

But there is something about the Tuskegee report that has real significance in it. And that is that despite the 13 persons actually lynched, the forces of law and order prevented attempts to lynch 88 others. Furthermore, of the 57 instances in which lives were thus saved, 50 of them were in the southern states and 70 of the 88 persons involved were Negroes. This surely demonstrates an inclination toward protection of Negroes under arrest, even in the southern states, which is too often overlooked by northerners and westerners.

But it demonstrates something else that is more important. It shows that mere removal of the prisoner to another jail or augmenting the guards will prevent violence [that was true in 45 of the 57 cases]; and that if necessary lynchings can be prevented by the use of armed forces [as they were used in the other 12 cases].

Lynching remains largely a disgrace of the south. All but one of the 1931 lynchings occurred in the southern states. When the mass of enlightened citizens in those states get it thoroughly into their heads that lynchings are not inevitable, that the enforcers of law could prevent them if they honestly wished to, then the final traces of this scar on an ostensibly civilized nation will disappear—and not until.

HOW TO DRESS THE KIDDIES. (By the Useless Hints Dept., Washington, D. C.): We are sending you this beautiful and highly illustrated pamphlet, Mr. Taxpayer, to show you how much the United States of America is interested in the dear little kiddies. The government does not wish foreign visitors to come here from Europe, and especially from England, and look at our little kiddies and say: "Oh, what disgusting brats." No, we want our dear little kiddies to look as swell as the kiddies of any other country. In the first place, the kiddies should wear clothes. In India, Africa, and other parts of the world the kiddies do not wear much besides what they were born in, but the severity of our climate renders it necessary for our kiddies to wear clothes. Clothing includes dresses, pants, rompers, undies, sockies, shoesies, nighties, and hatsies. To dress a kiddie stand him or her on the floor and approach gently but firmly. (Write to the government for Booklet ZZ for full directions for dressing and undressing the kiddies. Booklet JJ tells you how to bathe the little devils.) The very small children, those less than a year, require special treatment, which is fully given in Booklet XYZ.

Now, as to washing the faces and combing the hair of the kiddies: To wash the little face take a wash cloth (some people take the end of the family towel and dip it in water, but such are communists at heart and should be sent back to Moscow, where they came from). Rub the wash cloth smartly with soap and then, holding the kiddie by his or her back hair, rub the wash cloth smartly over face and neck, to and fro, here and there, especially the ears. Now dry with a large bath towel. Now for combing the hair. Take a comb, any ordinary comb will do, but avoid the use of a currycomb, as it is apt to scratch. Draw the comb through the hair, parting it any definite place.

Next week your kind and dotingly parental government will discuss another subject of the most thrilling interest to the citizens of this great country—viz.: how to train cockroaches so that they will not only make interesting and amusing pets but, after they are taught to bark, will help guard your property at night and keep wicked bandits away. "Put teeth in the cockroaches" is our new slogan, and, when our thousands of experts in the farm department have finished their exhaustive series of experiments, the government will tell you not only how to make the ordinary kitchen sink cockroach bark at burglars but jump at the intruders and bite a leg off 'em. Are you on our free mailing list? The more places we have to send our circulars and booklets to, the faster we can spend the taxpayers' money. Write today. Your good old Uncle Sam and your sweet Aunt Sammy are crazy to hear from you. Address the Useless Hints Dept., U. S. Government, Washington, D. C.

THOSE WHO BREAK BREAD.

You came, like some soft wind at early night,
Swift recognition deep within your eyes;
And unbelief was there, a bright surprise
Some one to give you peace . . . that sweet content
Your soul went seeking far; and merriment
To flash across a somber mood, a smile
Like something you no longer dreamed to see.
You rested here, you spent a little while.
(And that is how a friend once came to me.)

Would that the tale were finished there.
But I
Cannot forget that once I knew the way
You broke within my armor, into my
While I, in trust, thought nothing you might do
Could ever change the way that I loved you.
There is a law that no man dare to break,
A law of salt and bread that has no end . . .
But, for another's, more than for your sake,
Illusion stays. And still I call you friend.

DON FARRAN.

THE LINEBOOK SHORTAGE gets worse instead of better. We were cleaned out of 1931 Linebooks before Christmas, although it still takes most of the time of two secretaries and three small boys to send back orders for them. But on top of that now they've started writing us for complete sets of Linebooks. Yes'm, 1924 Linebooks, 1925 Linebooks, 1926 Linebooks, 1927 Linebooks, 1928 Linebooks, 1929 Linebooks, 1930 Linebooks, AND 1931 Linebooks—that's all they want. But, dearies, much as it hurts papa to tell you so, there aren't any more of most of those, either. According to a careful check made by the Public Service department, there are no 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, or 1931 Linebooks left. There are a few, and darn few at that, 1929 and 1930 Linebooks left, which they will part with to those as wants 'em for the sum of 10 cents a copy, 12 cents by mail. We thank you.

TIME.

Why do we say "old Father Time,"
Picturing one whose vigor is past?

ADELAIDE LOVE.

GOV. RITCHIE comes straight out and says he would like to be the next President. As he is the only one among all those talked of for the Democratic nomination who says he's a candidate, then why should we not in our turn come out for Gov. Ritchie? The party has to have a candidate, and Gov. Ritchie is the only one who wants the nomination. And if he makes as good a President as he has a governor we could be very well satisfied. And, anyhow, Gov. Ritchie is the only Democrat who has said right out loud that he will take the job. There may be others, but as long as they won't speak up, how can we know? We're not mind readers.

THE DEMOCRATIC party owes Johnny Raskob $345,250. The party doesn't own any real estate that they can give a mortgage on, but there's a fine piece of property with a big house on it, painted white, that they think will pass into their possession next November.

VACCINES FOR COLDS.

SEVERAL groups of Canadian physicians have been trying their hand at a solution of the problem of the common cold, as physicians are doing over most of the civilized world. About a half dozen of them reported their experiences in a recent number of the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association, and the editor thereof rounds out the subject with an editorial.

They are agreed that the common cold is the most important of all the diseases. To begin with, it far surpasses other diseases in prevalence. Even when it pursues a mild course, it causes the maximum amount of absence from work, including school work. In addition, it causes great financial and economic loss, because of the discomfort and lowered capacity of people who remain on the job when they are uncomfortable from the fever and aches caused by colds. To make matters worse the infection may bring about a pneumonia, or it may involve the sinuses.

There are some who think that vitamin A increases the resistance to disease of those who eat it. This vitamin abounds in carrots and some other vegetables. These Canadian authorities were not able to confirm this opinion. They fed groups of people plenty of carrots and other vitamin A foods without lowering the prevalence of colds among those who were on the diet. The number of people who have faith in the power of vitamin D foods surpasses that of those who pin their faith to carrots.

The Canadians found the evidence on the vaccine question quite conflicting. Taken as a whole, they thought it proved that vaccination was of service in the prevention of colds. However, they found that it was effective when used by some persons and useless for others. They do not think it should be classed with smallpox, typhoid, or diphtheria vaccination.

They are disposed to hope for a vaccine developed out of the viruses which several people have found in cases of coryza, and which many think to be the cause thereof. A considerable group of bacteria were found in the nose secretions of those affected, but these microbes, they think, are complications rather than the basic cause of the trouble.

Nevertheless, vaccines made out of these microbes appear to be of moderate service. When some one has found a way to combine the virus in the combination the product should be more useful.

DESERT FEVER.

Q. S. writes: Since 1920 a large part of my time has been spent in the Sahara and Libyan deserts, and, of course, during this time I have managed to catch about every variety of desert fever. In 1928 I had an especially severe attack of malaria, my temperature going up over 40 degrees (centigrade) on alternate days for nearly three weeks. My partner that same year had an attack lasting over two months, with fever as high as, and in some cases higher than, I recorded.

In both cases Italian specialists prescribed plasmochin over a period of two months, and we not only recovered but have had no recurrence of the fever. We are told that the plasmochin kills the tropical fever germ when taken over an extended period of time. And our personal experience would seem to confirm this fact.

REPLY.

Many physicians who handle large numbers of malarial people advocate the use of plasmochin compound. They find it especially valuable in chronic malaria. It makes the patient incapable of infecting mosquitoes.

TRENCH MOUTH.

Mrs. A. V. wants J. M. J. and others to know how she cured herself of trench mouth after other treatments had failed.

First, wash the mouth with peroxide of hydrogen. Next, wash the mouth with a solution made by dissolving one teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in a glassful of lukewarm water. This is followed by washing the mouth with a teaspoonful of table salt dissolved in a glassful of cold water.

REPLY.

I am sure your method will cure some cases, and it is safe. I am equally sure that other cases will require more active treatment.

ADMINISTRATOR'S FEE.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—When a party dies and leaves no will and the estate is probated in order to collect a claim due the estate (1) what per cent of the estate is the lawyer allowed to charge? 2. What per cent goes to the person acting as administrator if there is not enough money to pay all bills, including court costs, lawyer's fee, etc.? 3. Are the lawyer's fee and court costs paid first and then the other bills against the estate? 4. Is bankruptcy filed, and [5] if not, how are the bills settled? If the administrator is one of the deceased's children [6] can he claim household effects as his fee for taking care of the estate?

M. E. M.

1 and 2. The statute does not specify. The statute authorizes payment to the administrator of not more than 6 per cent of personal property. The attorney should be paid out of this allowance.
3. Yes.
4. No.
5. The claims are paid in the order of their priority as specified in the administration act and that ends the matter.
6. Yes, in the sense that his fee would be paid in full before anything would be distributed to the beneficiaries.

CITIZENSHIP STATUS UNCHANGED.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—[Friend of the People.]—I have been in this country four years. I married an American citizen. Did he lose his citizenship when he married me? When may I apply for naturalization? G. J. G.

The citizenship status of the husband has not been changed by the marriage. The applicant, being married to a citizen, may apply for naturalization at any time, she having resided in the United States for more than a year. She does not require a declaration of intention (first paper). Applications may be procured at this office, Room 776, Postoffice building, Chicago.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
District Director, U. S. Dept. of Labor.

WATER METERS.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Who pays for the water meters now being installed—the landlord or the city? 2. Both parties have asked different authorities and both received different answers. A. S.

1. The property owner is required to pay a fee.
2. This may be due to the fact that the question, as you ask it, is ambiguous. Obviously the city puts up the money in the first instance, and in this sense the city pays. Obviously also the property owner is charged a fee, and in this sense he pays.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The manufacturing interest is the one that is now suffering the most from the panic, not only in this vicinity but in all parts of the United States. The grain trade is recovering, but the manufacturing business will feel the effects of the panic for some time. It is for this reason that the disorganization of business is worse in Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and St. Louis than it is in New York or Chicago. Business here is simply dull, while in the manufacturing cities a large part of it has stopped.

New York, March 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly trade review says: Prices of commodities are this week on the whole the lowest of which there is any record, having declined 1.2 per cent in March, and averaging 11.3 per cent lower than a year ago. The Illinois Steel works is about to resume in part, having secured orders for rails, but in the east rails are inactive and deliveries everywhere are the lowest for many years.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Large reductions in working forces in many industries in Chicago have been made within the last few days, owing directly to scarcity of orders and business depression.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 13.—The Superior Savings and Trust company was appointed receiver for the Royal Motor Car company.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Two thousand unemployed men and women marched on the Maxwell street police station last evening after the arrest of a Russian, a former political prisoner in Siberia. A battle with police followed.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 9, 1916.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Darkness, silence, and fear hang tonight like an ominous pall over the scene of Ohio's most violent clash between the two great forces that have turned the valley of the Mahoning river into one of the industrial centers of the nation and now threaten to devastate it. Two persons dead and more than thirty wounded is the toll of last night's riot. East Youngstown with its six city blocks of smoldering ruins is divided into two armed camps. On the river bank and entrenched around the steel plants are three regiments of Ohio National Guardsmen and all other available officers of the law. Above, on the hill beyond the town, are 20,000 strikers and their sympathizers. The situation is tense, but the authorities say they hope to avoid an outbreak.

NEW YORK.—Ada Rehan, the actress, died in Roosevelt hospital today after an operation for an arterial infection. She had been ill for several months. She was born on April 22, 1860, in Limerick, Ireland, and came to America at the age of 6. She made her first appearance on the stage in Newark, N. J., as Clara in "Across the Continent." From that time until she retired from the stage in 1905 she played 200 different rôles, many of them Shakespearean.

CHICAGO.—Rosenberg's department store at Davis street and Benson avenue, Evanston, the largest retail establishment in the suburb, was partly destroyed by fire early this morning. The loss was estimated at $200,000. For a time the fire assumed such proportions that it threatened to spread through the entire business district and Chicago fire companies were sent to aid in checking it.

JANUARY 9, 1902.

CHICAGO.—Before 500 members of the local and state Democracy at the annual Jackson day banquet in the Sherman House, Judge E. F. Dunne declared that conditions were ripening which would need another Andrew Jackson for their solution. Of these conditions, he said, the tendency in financial circles to establish another banking monopoly was the most alarming. The number present was the largest in years, although the feast was notable for the absence of party leaders who heretofore have been regular in attendance.

NEW YORK.—Disregarding block signals by the engineer of a train was responsible for a collision in the New York Central tunnel today which resulted in the death of fifteen persons and the serious injury of sixteen others. John Wischo is the engineer under arrest. The trains were crowded with suburbanites. Wischo said he was trying to make up time.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Miss Julia Foraker, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Foraker, was married to Francis King Wainwright of Philadelphia at the Foraker home. The Rev. Dr. Mackay-Smith performed the ceremony. The senate had adjourned in order that the senators might attend the wedding. President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt also were present and the gathering of society, both official and otherwise, was the most distinguished in Washington in many years.

A NEW KIND OF BANK.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Confidence in the banks must be restored before there is any general upturn. I believe that I have a solution to the problem of bank failures.

Savings accounts will be divided into two divisions. A depositor may deposit into either or both divisions.

1. Noninterest bearing accounts. The depositor will receive no interest but has the assurance that his money is always safe and can be drawn out at any time, for the banks will keep these funds inviolate and will not lend a penny of it out. Absolute assurance of safety will compensate the depositor for loss of interest.

2. Interest bearing accounts. In return for receiving interest the depositor agrees that he cannot draw out at will. The money he deposits in this account will be used to buy bonds issued by the bank. These bonds will be issued serially in different denominations and expire at different times. They will be a first lien on all the bank's assets, except the noninterest bearing accounts. The depositor will understand that his deposit goes toward the purchase of a bond which will be issued to him whenever he has deposited sufficient to buy a bond of the denomination he has selected. These bonds will have the same market as any other bond has. They can be cashed on the due date, or before, at the option of the bank. Interest bearing coupons will be attached.

These two plans taken together will absolutely prevent runs. They will restore confidence and bring out of hiding the millions that are in hiding. Confidence will return and things will soon be on the upgrade. To pay interest on its bonds the banks will, of course, invest a certain percentage in account No. 2. The amount of bonds outstanding will of course depend on the total funds in this account. F. W. B.

CHICAGO ARTISTS.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—I wish to compliment you upon your efforts through the column written by Eleanor Jewett to assist Chicago artists in placing their work. R. C. GRIFFIN.

JUSTICE TO THOSE WHO HAVE PAID.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—I was much interested in your editorial of today on the tax crisis. You will certainly earn the everlasting gratitude of your host of readers who have loyally paid their 1928 and 1929 taxes if you can assist them in getting a credit for the overpayment, thus putting them on an equality with those who have refused to pay and who have in a measure been responsible for the present chaotic situation. HOWARD W. FOOTE.

THE CAFE DE LA PAIX.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—I have read recently in two newspapers that the famous Café de la Paix, which for so many years was located across the street from the opera house in Paris, had moved to make place for a bank. I presume there are many of your readers besides myself who would like to know if this is true. CHARLES R. DONALDSON.

NEW POTATOES, HOME GROWN.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Mr. P. M. Morine and family of Hennepin, Ill., sat down to their Christmas dinner and enjoyed new potatoes, dug from their own garden the day before. Mr. Morine says they were of average size, grown from the potatoes that had been left in the furrows last fall. California please notice.

MRS. ELSA M. WINTERSCHEID.

PEARS.

Illiopolis, Ill., Dec. 27.—Resolved, never to go to Florida when you can pick pears in Illiopolis to eat after Christmas day. I just picked two pears out of Johnson's tree and we ate them. Strawberries are in bloom, but will not be ripe till the middle of January.

G. HAROLD HUBBARD.

THE AGEING SONS OF FREEDOM.

Valparaiso, Ind., Jan. 5.—We Irish are a fine bunch! Only a few years ago we made the air blue, if not green, here and abroad with "Home Rule for Ireland," "Free Ireland," and "Justice for Ireland." And the Irish Land league and its tributaries carried shoals of money from this country across the sea to help free Ireland from British rule. But now, when India is on the rack and the great apostle Gandhi is calling for deliverance of his people from the same tyrannous British rule we Irish lovers of freedom and liberty are as mum and as smug as Irish moss.

Is this because Gandhi is brown and his dress more like that of St. John than St. Patrick, or is it because Gandhi's doctrine of nonviolence is too yellow for red blooded Irish? Has the Irish Free State already become diplomatic? Is the Tammany Hall till empty? Is Mayor Walker all in? HENRY LEE.

THE WAR ON SCALPERS.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Is Mayor Cermak so naïve as to believe anybody will take his so-called war on theater ticket scalpers seriously? About twice a year there's a lot of bunk in the newspapers about a drive against scalpers, and a good many of us are getting sick and tired of it. If theater managers had any sense they would realize that their dealing with scalpers and the indifferent and discourteous treatment given to the public at box offices are keeping a great many people away from the theaters. L. C.

CLOSING THE SCHOOLS.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—I would suggest that the schools be closed for a month or two in order to catch up in the city's expenses. It is well to remember that the taxpayer is hit just as hard as any one else in this depression. If he isn't able to pay taxes they just take his property. That is all and nobody cares.

I have passed through seventy years and as I look back, a month or two out of my school days would not have made a particle of difference. I, too, would like to have attended a college or university, but my parents hadn't the cash and so I did not go. The same applies today. If the taxpayers haven't the money to pay for everything—why, then, we must economize. C. D.

FOR A MORATORIUM.

Glencoe, Ill., Jan. 4.—What about declaring a moratorium, either state or national, on certain debts, such as interest on mortages or on mortgages falling due this year and which cannot be refinanced? Many families will be out of their homes this year through foreclosures although it is no fault of theirs at all, it being just a matter of the present conditions. HARRY C. NIEGELSEN.

A WAY TO RAISE REVENUE.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—I respectfully offer a suggestion which would, if adopted, increase the revenue considerably. Increase all soft drink parlor licenses 100 per cent. These places are only soft in name. Enter any one of them, provided you know the password, and you can refresh yourself on the hardest of the hard, regardless of age, taste, color, or strength. SPEAKEASY.

ROBINS.

Hinsdale, Ill., Dec. 28.—You may be interested in knowing that on Christmas when we, with several guests, sat down to our dinner we discovered two robins in the tree just outside the dining room window. Later they flew down and hopped along the lawn.

E. A. AMACKER.

RAINEY FOR PRESIDENT.

Versailles, Ill., Jan. 5.—It seems to me it would be a good thing if the Democratic party nominated that veteran congressman, Henry T. Rainey, for our next President. W. I. KENDALL.

WANTS EUROPE TO PAY DEBTS IN TRADE RIGHTS

Dewey Suggests Special Concessions to U. S.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A conference of business men to formulate a policy of war debt payment to the United States by means of an agreement by foreign nations to grant trade concessions to America was proposed by Charles S. Dewey yesterday before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in the Palmer house. Mr. Dewey served as assistant secretary of the United States treasury [1924-'27] and is former financial adviser to the government of Poland.

In discussing war debts Mr. Dewey declared the three means of paying debts, by gold, services, or goods, are closed by the world depression.

Only Means of Paying, View.

"It would appear," he said, "that all possibilities of current repayment are closed with the possible exception of an agreement by foreign nations to grant concessions to our trade commensurate with their debt repayment postponements.

"There is no doubt that our foreign trade will need such concessions. Every one of the nations indebted to us has established or is in the process of establishing regulations harmful to our commerce, or regulations unfavorable to our capital investments within that country.

"Might not a conference of American business men, who are the taxpayers most affected, produce a policy that will be beneficial to the United States, and at the same time follow the principle of not making our terms so difficult that we will injure the debtor, who should continue to be our very good customer?"

Capacity to Pay Changes.

The principle of capacity to pay, Mr. Dewey declared, was the basis of the agreement worked out by the debt funding commission.

"In applying this policy," he said, "the capacity of England was estimated at twice that of France. Yet six or seven years later England is off the gold standard and France is the second richest nation.

"It is well known that current international payments can be made only in three ways: by transfer of gold, by transfer of manufactured goods and commodities, and by the extending of services such as shipping and insurance. It is also well known that owing to the present distribution of monetary gold in the world, most of the nations indebted to the United States are not in possession of a sufficient quantity to make payment in this medium.

Rejects Payment in Goods.

"Payment by service is particularly restricted by depressed business conditions. This leaves only the third, and really the most important means of payment—by goods. If one considers the well being of our agriculture and labor it is obvious we would not wish to open our markets to an avalanche of foreign competitive products.

"The point now before the United States which should receive serious consideration is whether it is possible for the debtor nations to continue to make payments at the present time and, if it is proved that it is impossible, whether it would be advantageous to the United States to permit a default or rather to receive some other benefits in kind commensurate with the revenue we would be giving up, such as trade concessions."

LOUISIANA FLOOD MENACE GROWS AS RIVERS RISE

New Orleans, La., Jan. .—[Special.]—The flood that has been sweeping the Yazoo delta in Mississippi today threatens to invade a larger area in Louisiana. The weather bureau at New Orleans issued a warning of rising stages in the principal rivers.

More than 100,000 acres are under water and tremendous property loss has been suffered. Almost all further fighting to keep back the water virtually has been abandoned. The Red Cross and other relief agencies are rushing aid as rapidly as possible.

The communities of Marcel, Tippo, Delta, Ruby, Money and others on the east side of the Tallahatchie have been submerged and the inhabitants driven to higher ground.

It is estimated in the Tallahatchie valley that 15,000 persons, including more than 5,000 planters, will have to be provided with the necessities of life.

Refugees are crowded into the towns of Glendora, Webb, Sumner, and Stover. Others are being brought by boats. The Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad has established camps at Stover, Webb, Sumner, Glendora, Brazil, and Mikome, all sidings being lined with box cars.

The town of Sharkey, Miss., reports that 2,000 persons marooned in that area are being brought in by boats.

TWO LAW FIRMS TO FILE WILL OF ROSENWALD

Two of Chicago's large law firms were yesterday given the task of handling Julius Rosenwald's estate. They are the firm of Lederer, Livingston, Kahn & Adler and the firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann, Levinson & Morse.

Attorney Charles Lederer, senior member of the first named firm, said that Mr. Rosenwald's will would be filed for probate "within a few days." He declined to discuss provisions of the will. The understanding has been that members of the family share the entire estate. They have been given instructions to carry out Mr. Rosenwald's philanthropies and the will, therefore, will provide for no specific charitable bequests.

In addition to the hundreds of tributes extended to the late capitalist and philanthropist, the deepest sympathy of the German nation was communicated to the family yesterday by Chancellor Bruening through Dr. H. F. Simon, the German consul here.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATH.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned an open verdict in the death of Mrs. Marcia Ward, 30 years old, a nurse, who died Thursday of an overdose of a sleeping potion in her room at the Chicago Arms hotel, 5125 Kenwood avenue.

LOSES JEWELS

MRS. F. C. CALLAHAN.

A purse containing a $1,000 wrist watch set with 72 diamonds, a $750 diamond bracelet set with 60 diamonds, a $10 bracelet, a $10 check, and $25 was reported lost to the Chicago and Oak Park police yesterday by Mrs. F. C. Callahan, 1124 Washington boulevard, Oak Park. She said she discovered her loss when she arrived at the Evanshire hotel, Evanston, yesterday morning.

PROFESSOR RAPS ATTITUDE OF U. S. ON ARMAMENTS

Not War Cause, He Declares.

Armaments are not the cause of war and reduction of armaments will not stop warring, according to Harry D. Gideonse, associate professor of economics at the University of Chicago, in a public address last night at the Art institute.

"The American attitude toward disarmament," declared the professor, "like that of Russia and certain peace organizations, is oversimple. It has been abandoned by most European governments, including France, and by the league of nations. On the continent a great group of nations has come to realize, through years of experiment, that hoping to arrive at disarmament by the method of disarming is simple minded.

Last Link in Chain.

"Armaments are not a cause of war. They are an effect of political and economic insecurity. The armaments industry is simply a phase of modern technology, and armaments are the last link in the chain which leads to war. To remove the last link you must first attack the earlier links."

Prof. Gideonse pointed out that if all countries gave up all armaments there would still be vast differences in military power. A country with tractor and rayon plants, chemical industries, and commercial airplane service, he held, would be much better prepared for war than one without such facilities.

The league of nations, he added, had become skeptical of isolated efforts to induce disarmament, and had come to realize that the problem would have to be solved through the underlying political and economic causes of armaments.

Must Eliminate Rivalries.

If we are sincere in our desire for disarmament, the professor argued, we must eliminate national rivalries, imperialistic ventures in colonies, and other causes of distrust. To disarm, he asserted, would be logical only after international life had been so reconstructed that armaments were unnecessary.

The lecture, which was attended by about 600 persons, was the first of a series of five by Prof. Gideonse. The next will be given in the Art institute next Friday evening.

THREE HELD IN BOMBING PLOT FACE PROSECUTOR

CRIMINAL COURT.

Frank E. Dorano, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge George Fred Rush.

David Bruckheimer, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Rudolph Desort.

Three men, said to have been implicated in a plot to bomb bakeries which refused to pay tribute to their organization, are being held at the detective bureau. They are Benjamin Stone, ex-business agent for the bakers' union; Morris Kaufmann, secretary of the same organization, and Benjamin Grossman.

All were named in a confession made on Thursday by Joseph Siegel, 29 years old, who was arrested as he was trying to set off a bomb on the roof of Joseph Becker's bakery at 1502 South St. Louis avenue. Siegel, it is asserted, became disgusted with confederates when they failed to furnish bonds for him.

Assistant State's Attorney C. Wayland Brooks is to question the three men. Siegel declared that Stone offered him and Roy Rapp, who is also held, $300 to set off a bomb.

BOEHM, SLUGGING VICTIM, REGAINS CONSCIOUSNESS

Bruno J. Boehm, former vice president of the Chicago Real Estate Board, who was found unconscious and bound to the steering column of his automobile in a vacant garage near Wheaton on Thursday afternoon, recovered consciousness yesterday at the Elmhurst hospital.

Because of Boehm's condition, Dr. A. B. Jones decided that the police should not question him until today. Dr. Jones revealed that Boehm at times muttered: "He hit me, he hit me." Carbon monoxide poisoning was a contributory factor in Boehm's condition, Dr. Jones said. The motor of his car had been running.

WM. J. BRYAN ESTATE'S VALUE 'PROBLEMATICAL'

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The estate of William Jennings Bryan, the Great Commoner, has dwindled from $668,000 to a condition of 'problematical value," it was disclosed in bankruptcy caurt today in connection with the involuntary bankruptcy brought against Bryan's daughter, Mrs. Grace Bryan Hargreaves of Hollywood.

William Jennings Bryan Jr., a son, testified as administrator that the bulk of his father's holdings was in Florida real estate.

The bankruptcy petition was filed by the American Pipe and Steel company, with a claim for $2,790 growing out of an oil venture by Mrs. Hargreaves in the Venice, Cal., oil fields.

Young Bryan testified he had dispersed $21,000 since his father's death and that the entire balance of the estate was in real estate.

Mrs. Mary Kearney Dead; Helped Form Arts Club

Mrs. Mary Winifred Kearney, 61 years old, died yesterday following a short illness in her home, 2610 Lincoln street, Evanston. Mrs. Kearney was a member of the Art institute and a charter member of the Arts club. She had traveled extensively and spoke seven languages. Her husband, J. J. Kearney, president of the Stearns Electric Paste company, and three daughters, Mrs. A. A. De Lapp, Mrs. J. W. Cook Jr., and Miss Pauline Kearney, all of Evanston, survive. Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock today from St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in Evanston, followed by burial in Calvary cemetery.

30,000 at Funeral of Dane Who 'Defeated Bolshevism'

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Michael Christian Lyngsie, labor leader and "he man who kept the bolsheviks out of Denmark," was buried today after a funeral service attended by 30,000 persons. The Danish premier, speaking at the funeral, said Lyngsie had uplifted the lowest strata of the working class almost to the same living standard as that of skilled men, "thereby killing the germ of bolshevism and making Denmark safe for democracy."

TELL OF THREAT BY GIRL SLAYER AT POINT OF GUN

Flint, Mich., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—In the trial of Miss Helen Joy Morgan, charged with the murder of her sweetheart, Leslie Casteel, an automobile mechanic, testimony was given that two months before he was killed Casteel was threatened by Miss Morgan, who "covered" him with a revolver while they were in the garage where Casteel was employed.

Mason Sines of West Virginia, brought here by John Casteel, Leslie's father, told the jury how Miss Morgan entered the garage one night about a year ago, pointed a pistol at young Casteel and told Sines to leave the garage. Both men did as requested.

A few weeks later Sines was jailed for four days with Casteel. They were questioned on the loss of the mechanic's cottage by fire and then released with no charge against them. The prosecution contends the arson complaint by Miss Morgan against her sweetheart but later dropped was her way of keeping him from leaving Flint to escape her influence.

Kathryn Goebel, Widow of U. of I. Professor, Dead

Mrs. Kathryn Vreeland Goebel, 70 years old, widow of Prof. Julius Goebel, for many years head of the German department at the University of Illinois, died suddenly yesterday in the home of a daughter, Mrs. Fiske Kimball, in Philadelphia, following a heart attack. Until the death of Prof. Goebel last spring, she had made her home in Winnetka. Besides Mrs. Kimball she is survived by four other daughters, Mrs. Paul Greeley of Winnetka, Mrs. Ferdinand Meyer-LaBastille of New York, Mrs. Jean Beck of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Mrs. Roger Brooks of Washington, and two sons, Dr. Walter Goebel and Dr. Julius Goebel Jr., both of New York.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

WM. GRAHAM, NOTED BRITISH LABORITE, DIES

LONDON, Jan. 8. — (AP) — William Graham, 44, president of the board of trade in the recent Labor government, died tonight of pneumonia.

Mr. Graham was regarded by members of all political parties as one of the outstanding figures in the last house of commons, and a brilliant future had been predicted for him.

He was entirely at home in intricate statistical details and had the faculty enjoyed by the late prime minister, Andrew Bonar Law, of delivering a speech packed with figures for an hour or more without reference to a single note. His piloting of the highly contentious coal mines bill through the last house of commons earned the admiration of friends and foes alike.

WIDOW OF O'BANION FINED.

Mrs. Viola O'Banion, widow of Dion O'Banion, gang chief slain eight years ago, was fined $40 by Judge Padden yesterday after Policeman Orville Berkey said she drove through a red light and then cussed him when he halted her.

Machine Gun Nest Turns Out to Be Pinochle Game

The occupants of a vacant apartment on the second floor at 2 East Pearson street, which was thought to have been a gangland machine gun nest, revealed themselves yesterday as jobless plasterers who wanted their tools back from the police. The men had been playing pinochle in the apartment, but refused to divulge their names because they didn't want their wives to know what they were doing when they were supposed to be looking for work.

Former Justice Thompson Recovering After Operation

JAMES M'GOWEN IS DEAD; RETIRED AUTO EXECUTIVE

James McGowen, 83 years old, retired middlewest representative of the Cunningham company of Rochester, N. Y., manufacturers of automobiles, died last night in his residence at 6417 North Maplewood avenue. He represented the company for more than thirty-five years, beginning at a time when the concern made carriages.

Mr. McGowen was born at Castor, England, and came of a military family. He had served as a major in the British army.

Private funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock today in St. Timothy's Catholic church. Burial will be in All Saints' cemetery. Surviving Mr. McGowen are four children: James Jr., William P., Albert, and Thomas, the last named a member of McGowen, Cassady & White, brokers.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED.

NOTICE

RESOLUTION

Effective January 11, 1932, the Auto Livery Chauffeurs' Union, Local 727, will rigidly enforce its by-laws relative to the operation of cars in funeral processions by persons other than members of the Auto Livery Chauffeurs' Union, in that it will require all Chauffeurs, members of this organization, to refrain from driving in any funeral procession wherein cars driven by persons other than members of this Union are operated.

It is the concensus of opinion among the membership of this Union that the operation of cars by other than experienced livery chauffeurs, in funeral processions, constitutes a serious traffic hazard, endangering lives and property, and especially that portion which is entrusted to the care of our members.

In addition, the former policy has had a very detrimental effect in an economic way on the membership of this Union. Men regularly employed have been deprived of work and under existing conditions this means deprivation of their only means of a livelihood.

Therefore, the Auto Livery Chauffeurs' Union, Local 727, American Federation of Labor, with a view to relieving the present intolerable condition among the laboring men who constitute its membership, calls on the public generally, in the interest of fair play, to assist those men who are in attendance at funerals in carrying out the policy prescribed by their Union.

FAIR-MINDED citizens will recognize the underlying facts that brought about the passing of the above resolution. It was and is considered an essential measure—(1) to reduce accidents in funeral processions; (2) to speed up traffic; and (3) to increase employment among the hundreds of idle livery chauffeurs.

Statistics show that the overwhelming percentage of accidents in funeral processions are caused by privately driven vehicles. Union drivers are experienced, licensed chauffeurs whose minds are intent upon their duty and not on conversation while driving.

Statistics likewise show that delay in funeral processions is caused by private drivers unaccustomed to the orderliness and almost military precision essential to funeral processions.

Today there are hundreds of competent, eager-to-work chauffeurs in want—many are destitute—due to unemployment. The above resolution will aid immeasurably in changing this condition.

It should be understood that while private cars cannot enter the funeral procession, they are permitted to drive ahead to the cemetery and meet the funeral procession there.

The members of the Auto Livery Chauffeurs' Union trust that the citizens of Chicago will recognize the necessity of the above resolution and receive it in the same fair play spirit with which it has been passed.

GRAVE OF EARLY WHITE MEN IN ILLINOIS FOUND

Chester, Ill., Jan. 8. — [Special.] — While cleaning dirt away from the top of a ledge of rock at the prison quarry this afternoon, a group of convicts uncovered the burial place of skeletons believed to be early French settlers or members of George Rogers Clark's expedition.

Deputy Coroner Lucien File, who was called by prison officials, stated today that the absence of Indian relics and the shaps of the skulls led county and prison officials to believe that the bodies were those of white men. The manner in which they were buried indicated that they were buried hurriedly. The bones were almost disintegrated with age.

At the top of the promontory, four feet above the bodies and about ninety-five feet above the bed of the Mississippi river, was a crude square of stone, unmistakably laid as a marker for the burial ground. Bodies buried one above the other in an irregular fashion indicated bodies buried hurriedly, as after a battle. Nearby is a spring at which, legend has it, George Roger Clark camped during one winter.

The promontory on which the burial ground was discovered is the highest spot in the bluffs along the river for miles around. It is about six miles south of historic old Portage. Warden James A. White ordered the excavation stopped following the removal of the eighth body, pending communication with the state historical society.

NEW YEAR PLEA WINS PROBATION.

Kenneth Brown, 30 years old, 1124 Lill avenue, who took several overcoats from a New Year's eve party at 1643 North Cicero avenue, was placed on probation yesterday by Judge James F. Fardy in the Felony court when Brown pleaded he had been drinking and didn't know that he had taken the coats.

LEGION ASKS 6 HOUR DAY, 5 DAY WEEK AS UNEMPLOYMENT AID

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Legislation requiring all government construction contracts to contain provision for a five day week and a six hour day is to be sought by the American Legion as an unemployment measure, it was announced today.

"The answer to the question of doing away with unemployment is the immediate adoption by industry of the five day week and the six hour day with six hour pay and staggered employment.

"There are millions of dollars spent annually by the government for buildings. I have today instructed John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of our national legislative committee, to immediately start machinery in motion toward passage of a law requiring a clause in each governmental construction contract making it mandatory on the contractor to employ labor under the five day week and the six hour work day plan, with six hour pay for same, as part of the Legion's preferential legislative program."

Mrs. Emilie C. Hall Dies in Florida at Age of 72

Mrs. Emilie C. Hall, 72 years old, said to be a large stockholder in the Murine company, toilet manufacturers, died yesterday in Tampa, Fla. Her residence was at 4909 Drexel boulevard. Surviving Mrs. Hall are two nephews, Robert and Frank Hall. Burial will probably be in Chicago.

LAST YEAR'S WIFE

By ALICE M. WILLIAMSON

SYNOPSIS.

Lorne Carlton and Dick Farrow, popular moving picture stars of Hollywood, are given a farewell party on the eve of their departure for Europe, on a delayed honeymoon after a year's happy marriage. Lorne is unhappy about leaving, as she has an undefinable presentiment of trouble, but Dick is anxious for the adventure. They stop in New York to visit Dick's parents, who are famous on the stage. Lorne, who fought her way through poverty to the heights, feels that she is not approved by the elder Farrows. Lorne and Dick have a delightful time in Rome and Paris. Dolores, the duchess of Crowninshield, a friend of Dick's parents, has invited the young couple to be her guests in London. She is divorced from the duke, but is one of England's most important hostesses.

INSTALLMENT VI.

A LOST HUSBAND.

Dick didn't go on to point out what the "something different" was, but Lorne didn't need explanations. Of course she knew that he was not a snob. It was his feeling about the woman, not the duchess, that worried the girl. He was ready, even without seeing her, to set Dolores Crowninshield on a pedestal of almost legendary beauty. And so, when the pair landed at Croydon and didn't immediately see a dark blue 1931 model limousine with a dark blue chauffeur and footman attached, Lorne had a sharp little impulse of delight.

"Hurrah!" she said to herself. "If this duchess has forgotten to send for us, after telegraphing, that'll be a bit too casual even for Dick, I should think. He's got as much self-respect as any one, and he won't like being treated as if were dirt under a duchess' feet. That will start him off with a grouch against the lovely lady, to begin with."

But no such luck. There, after all, was the car; there were the chauffeur and footman as described in the cable at over a franc a word. And what was more, there was a woman—a girl—a dream of loveliness—descending from the car.

Lorne and Dick were not the only people who saw and looked at her. She was attracting so much attention that for once the two Hollywood stars with the famous faces might have been nobody at all.

Perhaps most members of the crowd recognized the duchess of Crowninshield from the many portraits and snapshots which adorned magazines and pictorial papers. But even if that were not so, all must have known by instinct that here was a very great as well as very beautiful lady. Something would have told Lorne, had the identifying background of car and liveried servants been lacking, that this nymph-like vision could be no other than the glorious Dolores.

It was a tall figure poised in an attitude of alert waiting, not quite so tall as the young Farrows, but as slender as Lorne Carlton, in a more voluptuous way. Lorne's slenderness was boyish; this woman's was the curved slimness of a youthful Venus. She wore a white silk sports costume, with a white beret that revealed all her forehead and a few sculptured waves of pure gold hair that twined into curls pushed forward by their own rich thickness.

As she caught sight of Dick and Lorne, she came forward quickly, the wind blowing her thin frock so that the nymph-like effect was emphasized; a nymph in motion with each delicious curve made visible. She smiled; she waved a small white-gloved hand. Lorne saw that her eyes were dark brown, and instantly decided that the gold of the curled hair had not been supplied by Nature. The girl from Hollywood was stabbed by the beauty of this semi-royal duchess, and almost mechanically she glanced aside to see how Dick was taking it.

Well, she might have known without troubling to look, how a poet and artist like Dick Farrow would take such a knock-out! He showed symptoms of being overwhelmed by it.

Lorne imagined such words, such thoughts, in her husband's mind as the duchess of Crowninshield came within greeting distance. The girl let Dick, as the son of Dolores' friends, take a step in advance of her. But where she stood apart, she could see both faces.

Lorne saw the eyes of her husband and the duchess meet, and thought with sudden anguish of the day when her eyes and Dick's had met for the first time. A blue blaze had shot from behind Dick's black lashes, a blaze that had fired her blood as no man's eyes had ever fired it before. The glance they two had involuntarily exchanged then, lights the eyes of a man and woman only when, with an electric shock, they see into each other's souls. They see, and one soul says to the other: "You belong to me."

This look from Dolores to Dick, from Dick to Dolores, was such a look. It was unmistakable. It could mean but one thing. An instant, and the world was changed. For these two it was all light and loveliness. For Lorne it was bleak and cold. She had lost Dick.

He had said to her when they had known each other no more than a few days: "You mean all womanhood for me. I know now that you've spoiled me for other women. For the rest of my life you're going to be the only one. I won't know the rest exist." And he had added, making her laugh, "Hell! How dull all the great clinches and close-ups will be for me after this, when I have to do them with any one that's not you."

At this minute Dick looked as if nothing on earth would please him so much as to do a clinch and close-up with Dolores Crowninshield for a partner, which simply proved to Lorne how history can repeat itself in a young man's heart.

But how could he help it, when the sky had opened and sent him a goddess?

Lorne wasn't blaming him. She merely felt bludgeoned. This was too bad to be true, and yet it was true. It was one of those things that just couldn't happen, having Dick snatched away from her between the drawing in of two breaths. But it had happened. Nothing could make it not have happened.

It was only for a few seconds that Dick Farrow and the duchess of Crowninshield inhabited together a world which was theirs alone.

Dolores didn't even speak to Dick. If she had spoken, words would have been the worst kind of anti-climax after that devastating gaze. Whether or no she acted deliberately, in any case her first words were for Lorne.

"How do you do?" she said. "You charming creature! You are even more fascinating off the screen, it seems, than on. And Dick—I may call you that?—you are as much like Margaret as you are like yourself. And that's funny, too, because she's so—feminine, and you are such a man."

There was a thrill in the word "man" as she uttered it. Consciousness of sex, his and hers, must have run through Dick Farrow's veins as the sap runs under the bark of a young tree in the spring. And Dolores had said it so on purpose, to rouse that consciousness. Lorne knew that she had, as one woman knows secret things about another.

The duchess, as a tiny child, had had an exalted English governess who taught her to speak English before she began to lisp Spanish. Therefore she had no accent. Her English was exquisite to the ear and her voice soft and sweet as cream and honey.

"How glad I am to see you both, and delighted that I am to have you with me," she went on. She gave a hand to each. She was being cordial to Lorne, but all the electricity was for Dick.

Possibly, being what she was, she couldn't help that. Some women can't. Men's women! Lorne knew all about them, inside and out, for she was a man's woman herself, born to attract men and be attracted by them. But Lorne wasn't a cat, or if she were a cat, she wasn't a damned cat; and that was what the duchess of Crowninshield was. In Dolores' place, Lorne wouldn't be doing what Dolores had begun to do now. She wouldn't work to take another woman's man away. Rather than do that, if she were tempted, instead of turning on all her sex, she would have turned it off. But the duchess was a man's woman and a man's woman only. She was also a man eater, and she had every intention of eating Dick. Lorne could have what was left of him; his rattling bones. . . .

Dick's wife didn't say to herself in this moment of crisis, "She'll eat him if she can." There was no "if" about it. The thing was here and had to be faced. The duchess would eat Dick, and he wouldn't try to escape. He would love being eaten. So what could the third person at the cold end of the triangle do?

The girl continued to feel stunned by that first bludgeon-blow of revelation. The three stood talking for a few minutes, without moving toward the car. Or, rather, Dick and the duchess talked, while Lorne was dumb. Yes, a regular dumbbell, she said to herself! And, listening to the two voices, she went on wondering why she didn't really much care. Ah, but why wonder? She knew very well in her heart what an ache would come later on.

Good morning!

Every once in a while there comes to our screens a wide eyed, open mouthed child of hokum such as "The Unexpected Father."

Because of its very naiveté we gather it to us and give it a pat and a smile, though we do wish it were brighter and knew more tricks.

The Palace's movie of the week is a sort of giggly infant class imitation of "Daddy Long Legs" and "The Bachelor Father." Slim Summerville, that long drink of ice water who played Tjaden in "All Quiet On the Western Front" and, since, has figured as a ganglingly frolicsome marine, is here elevated to stardom and pseudopapadom. With neither wife nor mother to guide him, he finds himself invested with the care of a small maid of three or four summers on the eve of his wedding to a blond gold digger whose mamma and brother are more set on her marriage to the wealthy oil man than is the lady herself—and that is pretty set!

Casting about for a woman to care for the cheelid, Jasper Jones nets a limp and yearning veterinary nurse. The name is Polly Perkins and Polly has always hoped that some time a child instead of a pup might claim her ministrations.

First it was Jasper. Then it was Jasper and Pudge. Now, it's Jasper and Pudge and Polly. They start out to be O, so innocently happy together—with Pudge calling Jasper "Daddy" just like she means it—but, ho, hear ye! hear ye!—WEDDING BELLS! Well, the scenario writer took care of them and when the picture ends why there are Jasper and Pudge and Polly all set for a grand threesome through life.

Miss Pitts and Mr. Summerville comport themselves as laudably and comically as the tale permits. As for Cora Sue Collins, who plays Pudge—THERE'S a darling!

You'll love her expressive face and soft wistful voice. Quite a find, that baby, I should say! Alison Skipworth does a clever character bit as the gin peddling Mrs. Hawkins in whose questionable care Pudge is first discovered, and portrayers of gold digger family handle well their hard boiled rôles.

Children will like "The Unexpected Father" and, who knows, so may you.

[The Brothers Karamazov.]
Produced by Tobis.
Directed by Fyodor Ozep.
Presented at the Cinema theater.
THE CAST.

Dmitri Karamazov	Fritz Kortner
His brother	Bernhard Minetti
His father	Dr. Max Pohl
Gruschenka	Anna Sten
The Butler Smerdyakov	Fritz Rasp
Katja, Dmitri's fiancée	Hanna Waag

KIND: Murder mystery, adapted from Dostoyevsky's Russian classic.

PHOTOGRAPHY: Rarely beautiful.

SCENERY: Lovely.

STORY: Extremely complicated. Be sure to consult the synopsis on your program before finding your seat. Because, otherwise to non-Deutsch sprechers and non-Dostoyevsky readers "Die Brueder Karamasoff" will prove Greek. [Russian movie in German proves Greek! There's a phenomenon for you.]

AUDIENCE APPEAL: Those who understand German and like Russian literature will doubtless enjoy this screen version of Dostoyevsky's contribution to letters. Those who do the first and don't the second—MAY find it entertaining. But by the rank and file, I greatly fear, the effort on the Cinema screen will be vastly unappreciated.

FIND HEREDITARY CANCER CLEW IN 2 VARIETIES OF FISH

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 8.—(AP)—A cancer "fishing" expedition to search for a promising clew in cancer study in rare Mexican fish, was announced at Cornell university today.

On March 1, Dr. Myron Gordon, research investigator at Cornell under the Heckscher foundation, and an assistant, will start by automobile for eastern Mexico, to work in the state of Oaxaca.

They will collect killifish, a many hued creature, no larger than the tiniest goldfish. For two years Dr. Gordon has been breeding these killifish under artificial conditions in a Cornell laboratory.

He has found that by crossing two unusual strains, the platyfishes, the offspring develop cancer. He goes to Mexico to learn primarily whether this same sort of cancer occurs among these fish in nature.

The laboratory work indicates a hereditary basis for cancer, at least in these fish. Furthermore, this cancer comes upon the offspring despite the fact that the parents are free from the disease, or of indications of it. Some of the experiments have shown the possibility that color pigments, to which the fish owe their variegated hues, have something to do with producing the hereditary cancer.

Los Angeles Police Raid Classic, Threaten Two Modern Dramas

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—The police having arrested all the cast of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata," last night, Capt. D. M. Jones said two more stage plays probably will be closed. These are supposed to be "Grand Hotel" and "Easy for Zeezee."

The Actors Equity association obtained bail for the cast of "Lysistrata," including Nance O'Neil, and over 50 others. The sponsors of the show announced they probably would seek a restraining order against the police. A member of the cast is 4 year old Donald Hayden, whose father, H. Hayden, was one of those booked on charges of giving an indecent performance. Capt. Jones said a juvenile court report will be made on the Hayden child. Those arrested pleaded not guilty when arraigned this afternoon, trial being set for Jan. 15.

Estelle Taylor's Injuries to Do No Lasting Harm

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Injuries suffered by Estelle Taylor, former wife of Boxer Jack Dempsey, in a Christmas day motor car accident will leave no permanent effect, her physician, Dr. Maurice Kahn, said today. Her car, forced off a boulevard by another machine, crashed into a palm tree.

Care of Aged Under Inquiry in This State

"Astounding reports" concerning conditions in the county poor farms of Illinois have been received by the Illinois commission for the study of poverty and dependency in old age. This was revealed at a meeting of the commission in the Palmer house yesterday.

The commission was created last year by the state legislature to investigate the extent of poverty and want among aged men and women in the state and to submit to the legislature a report and recommendations toward the betterment of conditions. Gov. Emmerson appointed Walter L. McMenimen of Chicago chairman of the commission.

The commission has not drafted its report, but it plans to hold meetings throughout Illinois this year and make a thorough investigation of the manner in which the homes are conducted and the conditions under which the inmates live.

"The commission also will study the methods of administration of relief funds in the counties," said Chairman McMenimen. "In making our survey we will interview the inhabitants of the various cities and obtain statistics from various institutions for relief or disability."

Some statistics have already been gathered by the commission. The 1930 U. S. census showed 306,762 persons between the ages of 65 and 74 years and 114,311 persons 75 years of age and over in Illinois. The two groups together total 5.5 per cent of the population of Illinois. In 1920 the census figures showed only 4.6 per cent of the population to be included in those groups.

In Cook county alone, the figures show, there are 123,920 persons between the ages of 65 and 74 and 38,117 who are 75 years of age and over. Males and females are numerically divided almost equally in this group.

The objects to be brought out by the commission will include the desirability of old age pensions; the minimum age requirements, if such a pension act is passed; the maximum income and property for qualification to the pension, and other qualifications necessary if the commission recommends an old age pension law.

Other members of the commission, in addition to Chairman McMenimen, are Charles H. Thompson of Harrisburg, Charles W. La Porte of Peoria, Miss Anne Hinrichsen of Chicago, Samuel Insull Jr. of Chicago, R. G. Soderstrom of Springfield, and Henry Abels of Springfield.

Predicts Lighter Bricks Will Cut Building Costs; Gets Medal

New York, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Clay bricks light enough to float on water yet strong enough to build a tower five times the height of the 1,200 foot Empire State building were promised by science here tonight.

Dr. Charles Frederick Burgess, in accepting one of chemistry's high honors, the Perkin medal, said the bricks were one of several means through which science would be able to reduce building costs.

Without disclosing the identity of the scientists, Dr. Burgess said chemists now were working on the new clay brick. It will have one-fifth the weight of ordinary bricks, be of high insulating value, and be resistant to the permeation of water, despite its porosity which will make it light.

He said these light bricks might cut the cost of bricklaying, perhaps by half, because of greater ease in laying them. Under prevailing rates he estimated it costs four times as much to lay a brick as to manufacture it.

Dr. Burgess is president of the C. F. Burgess Laboratories, Inc., of New York.

Plan to Make Dr. Wilson's Job Effective Loses

A proposal to make the post of Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Morals, elective by the general Methodist church conference, was defeated yesterday by a committee of the World Service commission of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Dr. Wilson, unlike the secretaries of other boards in Methodism, is not elected by the general conference of the Methodists, but by the members of his own board. The refusal to approve the change was interpreted as a vote of confidence in Dr. Wilson's board by the Methodist church.

Dr. Orrin W. Auman, treasurer of the World Service commission, said that Methodist missions and benevolences are doing well under current conditions. Contributions in 1931 were $6,721,299, compared with $7,961,898 in 1929.

MEMORIAL CONCERT

BY EDWARD MOORE.

THE memorial program to Theodore Thomas played by Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon turned out to be a memorial to several other distinguished persons in the world of music as well as the famous founder of the orchestra. It also turned out to be some of the most magnificent playing of the season.

The sixteenth century "Pian e Forte," by Giovanni Gabrieli, was once played by Mr. Thomas in 1901 in a historical program, and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony was associated with his name throughout his life. "Pian e Forte" was incidentally his transcription of an organ composition. As it was played in the old Auditorium, so it was in Orchestra hall, strings on the stage and brass up at the top of the house, the two sections playing antiphonally to each other.

In addition, Eric DeLamarter had made a transcription of a seventeenth century suite by Johann Jakob Froberger. It was a well devised, neat, and graceful orchestration of a set of neat and graceful tunes which, in spite of their years, are perfectly good today, without the slightest creak of age in their joints.

The work was entirely in character with a Thomas memorial. But Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor was first played last year and was dedicated to the memory of Horace S. Oakley, former vice president of the Orchestral association, who died at sea, Dec. 15, 1929; Vincent d'Indy's "Jour d'Ete a la Montagne" was played to the memory of the composer, whose death occurred Dec. 2, 1931, and Richard Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration" became a memorial to Peter Christian Lutkin, who died Dec. 27, 1931.

Magnificent performances they were. It is hard to describe what an era of tonal good feeling there seemed to be between the members of the orchestra and Mr. Stock. It rose to great heights in the Beethoven symphony; it had risen before in the Bach-Stock number. No one ever transcribed Bach with more artful skill. It was expertly colored, and it retained the Bach character. This work, in spite of its huge dimensions, sounds like Bach in a jocular mood, a super-giant at play, and it was this mood that Mr. Stock depicted and projected through his orchestra. No question, it is a masterpiece.

The seventh annual choral competition of the senior high schools of Chicago will be held at Orchestra hall next Friday evening. The choruses appearing have been selected through a city-wide competition. The groups are classified as boys' glee clubs, girls' glee clubs, small mixed choruses of less than 100, and large mixed choruses of over that number. Among the participants will be choruses from the Senn and Roosevelt High schools, each with a membership of over 450 students. The judges will be Edoardo Sacerdote, Graham Reed, and E. Warren K. Howe.

Benefit Adds $28,506 for Public Relief

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

THE radio profession of Chicago made its contribution to the Joint Emergency Relief Fund at the Chicago Stadium in the form of a revue that contained more entertainers than any of Flo Ziegfeld's or George White's. It gave three and a half hours of popular music and casual humor to an audience that registered 19,107 when the turn-stiles stopped clicking. It added $28,506.50 to the fund.

The floor and galleries of the great arena were filled with people who had come to see what their favorite radio personalities looked like when Ben Bernie, as master of ceremonies, started off the program at 8:20. The assemblage represented not only Chicago, but a large section of the state, for out-of-town ticket reservations were numerous.

A stage had been erected at one end of the Stadium floor, in pavilion style, and with excellent decorative effect. The dance orchestras and café bands had the full stage for their contributions; the others—trios, quartets, piano acts, monologists and all the other voices of the air—made their appearances before the curtain. For an improvised stage, the arrangement was ingenious and effective; even the circular draperies that served as curtain, escorted by six ushers, did their duty in a professional manner.

The program was so copious that a full report of it would be a census of the radio stations and chain broadcasting organizations of Chicago—a dozen or fourteen groups of familiar labels that keep the ether filled with entertainment day and night. W-G-N was represented by sixteen contributors, and the roll call of the other stations ran the list up to eighty.

Clara, Lou, 'n' Em were there, and Orphan Annie; and Harold Teen with his gang. Amos and Andy were seen as well as heard. The announcers announced and the performers performed, and the jazz bands jazzed—sweet and low or hot and high.

It was, altogether, an admirable show, completely in the radio spirit and yet with some of the theatrical values to supplement its quality. It was managed with skill and it moved with that smooth, infallible time sense which is characteristic of radio amusement. Each number was allotted two minutes, and nobody tried to "stop the show." Encores were barred, putting the performance, as Ben Bernie said, in the Theater Guild or highbrow drama class.

Herbert Rawlinson relieved the Old Maestro as master of ceremonies at the end of the first hour; and later on Pat Kennedy took command as a pinch hitter. It was a revue with a galaxy of ringmasters; and the wisecracks always found the center of the target, for the radio audience are easy and sociable laughers.

The most exciting event on the program, perhaps, was the scalping of Ben Bernie by four Indians off the Wrigley reservations. They were real Indians, right enough; and after they had done their specialty they went into a furious huddle with the Old Maestro. He escaped with his life, but to all appearances totally bald. One of the participants in this outrage is named Chief Evergreen Tree, who has a gift for imitating a flock of birds.

They did—19,107 of them, plus the ushers and program boys.

Red Cross Honors Sisters for Volunteer Assistance

Lorraine and Helen Rasmussen, twin sisters, who for the last few months volunteered their services to the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, were presented with rewards of merit yesterday by James T. Nicholson, manager of the Chicago chapter. The twins were given plus of recognition designating their office as staff assistants. They worked five days each week in the different departments of the Red Cross. Their home is at 2314 North Keystone avenue.

Delaware Senator's Son Wed Dec. 26; News Told

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The marriage of Miss Theodora O. Thomson to Paul L. Townsend in New York City on Dec. 26 was announced today by the bride's mother, Mrs. Harris Hamilton Thomson of the Rittenhouse Plaza.

Mr. Townsend is the son of John G. Townsend, United States senator from Delaware, and is employed as his father's secretary in Washington. The couple returned today from a honeymoon in Havana, Cuba. They will live in Washington. Mrs. Townsend, who was a student of Friends' Select school, studied music abroad for several years.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

An item in THE TRIBUNE stated that Frank A. Micaletti, owner of a gasoline filling station at 507 North Ogden avenue, accused hoodlums of mulcting autoists whose cars hit a large hole in the street at Ogden avenue and Ohio street. Mr. Micaletti denies saying hoodlums sold tires to motorists whose tires had blown out by hitting the hole.

"Watch Your Mouth Line; There Lies Age," Says Beauty Expert

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

"Age signs all in the neck, your eye!" So says a famous beauty practitioner.

"More women come to me and go out with anywhere from five to fifteen years lifted with the age signs removed from their mouths. Look at that woman over there!" she added. "Look at the tight grip of her lips on her teeth. You'd think she was trying to keep them from falling out! Now, she's a sample of what I mean!"

"Wait," said my friend. "I'll go over and make her smile!" She did. And the ten years flew.

"Keep those lips slightly open," she told her client. "Gates ajar, sister! And don't you compress them, either, until you learn to do it without clamping down the jaws!"

A good beauty point in that! It made a terrific change in that client's face. She was amused at the order she got and the way it was delivered, and, temporarily, anyway, the mouth was changed for the better.

"When you plump the jaw and mouth line down like that and grit your teeth you get the look of a toothless old woman. Nothing but age you get for all your grittiness!" was added for good measure.

So, better watch your mouth line or this practitioner may get you and tell you in plain terms what's wrong with your face. When the mouth is so set the upper lip is pulled down unnecessarily. You know, of course, that one of the assets for screen use is a short upper lip. The long ones don't get by.

It's curious, too, that when the mouth is set in a grim line the eyes take on a companionate hardness. Look at this in the mirror just to prove it to yourself. But loosen up the mouth muscles and the eyes at once are softer, too.

Subtle Methods Are Found Effective in Curing Tightwads

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"How can you overcome the trait of stinginess in a man who, otherwise, is everything you like? I want to marry him, as you may guess, but I feel I had better begin working on him right now and train him to become an opener-fisted husband than I have reason to suspect he will be. He's a grand person, really, but with a disproportionate sense of thrift, shall I say? MUDDLED."

You're right, "Muddled," about beginning the training early. While the thrift vice isn't one commonly complained of, still, carried to extremes, it's a mean domestic shadow.

Before me at this very moment lies a confession from a husband who nearly lost his wife because he began to value a nickel more than her smile. There are ways and means of handling these men who have an inclination to be miserly. I know of one case, personally, in which it worked beautifully. Never once did this girl pretend she saw a sign of miserliness. The man never heard a word of resentment, nor approbation, either, of his saving ability. Instead, she took pains to instill into her otherwise satisfactory Romeo that he was quite a generous fellow. She credited him with generosity toward his family which she had no reason at all for believing he made. But she gave him the benefit of the doubt.

If he took her anywhere that cost a few dollars, which, of course, he had to do now and then, she hinted how lucky she was to have a man like him to take her out. And, once in a while, just not to get too far away from her objective, she would say without any especial emphasis, "If there is one thing I loathe in people, it is money meanness!" And she would add with a bland, adoring smile, "Thank goodness, that is something you don't know anything about, or I never would have fallen so hard for you."

Attack the enemy vice that way and you have the man glorying in the good opinion you have of him, his hand expanding a bit automatically.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Fair Weather Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: Recently I lost my position. My girl refuses to go with me any more until I can obtain a good position with a fair salary. Please advise. R. BELL."

A girl who walks out on you in hard times isn't any girl for the bright days, either.

Food Talk.

During cold weather we are quite likely to forget the cold meats that served us so well during the summer. There is no reason why, every now and then, we should not have cold meat at a meal, particularly if it is bolstered up with hot vegetables. And for odd time lunches, there is something to be said for sausage kept in the ice box.

However, even the meats that we usually look on as cold may be cooked. Bologna, for example, is delicious with fried bananas. The bologna is cut in thin slices, skinned, dipped in egg mixture, and fried. Head cheese may be treated the same way.

There are several meaty sausages that may be broiled, and these are delicious in club sandwiches.

Have you tried putting slices of highly seasoned sausage into your soups? Others than lentil profit by having a few pink discs of it thrown in to liven up the stock.

YANKEE CHOWDER.

1 can corn.
1 quart milk.
3 medium sized raw potatoes.
1 pint oyster crackers.
1 quart water.

Fry the pork to a crisp after dicing it. Add the water, the potatoes pared and cut in half-inch slices, and the corn. When done, add the milk. Just before serving, season and add the crackers.

FRIED TOMATOES.

Cut the tomatoes in thick slices. Dip in beaten egg seasoned with salt, pepper, and sugar [the latter in proportion of one teaspoon to each egg], then in cracker crumbs. Fry for five minutes on each side in butter, and serve on thin toast.

Riding School at Onwentsia Hints of Spring

WHEN in the due course of events, the Lake Forest and Fort Sheridan horse shows will be occupying the social limelight next summer, the spectators will probably have the pleasure of watching several young matrons display some equestrian tricks that they could not or would not have attempted last summer.

The women's riding classes opened last Monday at Onwentsia, and more than twenty young women are now taking advantage of this opportunity to improve their riding during quiet winter months. The classes are conducted by Capt. Gatchell of Fort Sheridan, who began the lessons with instructions in military maneuvers.

Later on they will get around to instructions in jumping, for although several of the class members are expert in the more daring forms of riding, some of them are beginners, so the entire membership is sensibly starting with the simpler equestrian stunts.

Classes are held on Mondays and Thursdays in the Onwentsia riding arena, and there is almost always a luncheon for the class before the lesson and a tea afterwards. Mrs. C. C. Smith, wife of Maj. Smith of Fort Sheridan fame, gave a luncheon before the opening lesson last week. After next Monday's lesson the class will have tea at Mrs. Randolph Owsley's house.

Besides Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Owsley, some of the regular riders include Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., Mrs. Keith Carpenter, Mrs. William Casselberry, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, Mrs. Robert Hixon, Mrs. Edward K. Wells, Mrs. Roy Sturtevant, Mrs. Stuart Templeton, and Mrs. Francis Manierre.

Miss Rosalind Mooney, daughter of Mrs. William Mooney of Los Angeles, and Thomas H. Beacom Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Beacom of 399 Fullerton parkway, were married yesterday morning in the Notre Dame log chapel, with Father Thomas Tobin, a classmate of the bridegroom, officiating. The bride, who wore a blue tweed traveling suit for the ceremony was attended by her sister, Mrs. Paul Conaghan, and the groom was served by his brother, Harold Beacom, as best man. The ceremony and the wedding breakfast, which followed at the Oliver hotel in South Bend, were attended only by a small group of relatives and intimate friends. The bride and groom are to spend their honeymoon in Bermuda.

The final performance of the Junior league's "Runaway Papoose" will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Blackstone theater.

Bohemians' Dinner Tomorrow to Aid Needy Musicians.

There'll be a brilliant gathering to hear a brilliant program at the Bohemians' annual dinner tomorrow evening at the Palmer house. John Alden Carpenter, who was to have been the guest of honor, has, of course, withdrawn because of his recent bereavement, but the committee is adhering to Mr. Carpenter's wishes by not canceling the dinner, but holding it without him. All proceeds of the affair will go to the organization's fund for needy musicians.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wrigley Jr. and the Philip K. Wrigleys, who are spending a month with them in Phoenix, Ariz., had a large house party over the New Year's week-end. Among the diversions the hosts planned for their guests were a rodeo, a golf tournament, and a large buffet supper on New Year's day.

Our Phoenix scout also writes that Jarvis Hunt has introduced the gentle sport of croquet to his friends down there and that his fine croquet court is a popular gathering place.

Some Palm Beach News; Plans for Theater There.

Our Palm Beach correspondent writes that Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Klotz of Winnetka have opened their villa there for the season and that their daughter, Mrs. Austin Pardue (Dorothy Klotz of golfing fame) is expected to visit her parents the latter part of this month; that the George A. McKinlocks gave a buffet luncheon last Monday for Maj. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard; that Mrs. Hubbard's (Muriel McCormick) Palm Beach Playhouse will open its season on Tuesday with "Let Us Be Gay," by Rachel Crothers; that tne Playhouse acting and executive staff attended, with Maj. and Mrs. Hubbard, an eggnog party given by Addison Mizner in his apartment on New Year's day.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Haven Windsor Jr., with their two children, will depart next Thursday to spend the remainder of the winter in the Palm Beach villa which they leased for the season. Mrs. Windsor Sr. is to be at the Breakers for several weeks.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

Here is a youthfully smart day dress with a gay note in its bright top. The design is smart, but simple and conservative. The new cut of the sleeves in raglan style will be liked by many. A light navy blue shade of sheer woolen combined with Persian red is a chic idea.

The pattern, 2536, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 2⅝ yards of 35 inch light material.

Gayety Reigns at 12th Night Costume Ball

THE Twelfth Night ball, perennially the merriest of the winter's large social affairs, got under way at a late hour last night in the Germania club. Because most of the several hundred guests attended a succession of cocktail, makeup, and dinner parties beforehand, it was close to midnight before anybody stepped out to dance on the floor of the Germania ballroom. At last reports the party gave every evidence of becoming the gayest, not to say the most hilarious affair, of the now waning season.

In line with the current vogue for simplicity, there were no elaborate decorations in the ballroom of the dignified, comfortable looking club where the early Twelfth Night balls were held in the days when they were called the Butchers' and Bakers' ball. Festoons of white crêpe paper bordered with red were draped from the four corners of the room and crossed under the large center crystal chandelier, which was swathed by the same crêpe paper and dressed up in holiday fashion with red and silver stars. Green Japanese lanters swinging from the high ceiling shone dimly on the dance floor.

The orchestra, dressed in clown costumes of white with black polka dots, sat under a tan and purple canopy on a balcony a few steps higher than the dance floor. All of the decorations had been put up by the Germania club a few weeks ago for its own holiday parties.

Two of the largest dinner parties before the ball were held across the street in the old Red Star inn, where the old-fashioned atmosphere is much the same as that of the Germania club. Knight Cowles, in an outlandish costume of green and white checked rompers and a tousled brown wig, was host to a group of 40 guests seated at long tables placed together in the shape of an L, and in the adjoining room Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Bartlett had a slightly smaller number of guests. An orchestra played for the intermingling parties while the genial restaurant proprietor hovered over the scene, highly pleased to play host to the men and women whose fathers and mothers he knew and entertained frequently in the days of the early Twelfth Night ball.

About 60 people, all in costume, dined in a private dining room at the Germania club. Most of these had come to the club from a makeup party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pyzel, where a professional in the art of theatrical cosmetics gave finishing touches of powder and grease paint to the complexions of the costumed Twelfth Nighters.

Mr. and Mrs. Pyzel, who arrived early with several of their guests, were being awarded figurative blue ribbons for their costumes. Dressed as the king and queen of spades, their outfits of batik-dyed crêpe were created so ingeniously as to make their wearers look exactly like animated, magnified playing cards.

Mrs. Edward L. Hershey, who, with Mr. Hershey, was in the same party, won much admiring comment for her costume, which was apparently rescued from an attic where it has lain since the early days of the war, and which she called "the spirit of 1914." It consisted of a white satin blouse with a high stiff neckline, a black velvet cutaway skirt and cutaway jacket, and a crinkled velvet turban with black aigrettes and a large rhinestone ornament. Among others who proceeded to the ballroom after dinner at the club were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hooper, the latter dressed as a Spanish lady in black satin and lace. Mr. Hooper wore a striped bathrobe and a matching turban. Also in the same group were Andrew Reborl, dressed as Gabriel minus his horn; Mrs. Harold C. Strotz and Mrs. William Boyden, who wore twin dancing dresses with skirts of white ribbon and straw, white crêpe bodices and lovely looking pink paper flower leis; Mrs. Howard Ellis, optimistically done up as the gold standard with dollar signs in her hair and gold dollars trimming the skirt of her pink chiffon dress; Mr. Ellis, who was a solemn looking religieux in a brown monk's gown and cowl; John Root, in black and silver, calling himself "the duke of Milan"; Mrs. Thomas Wheelock, looking like an exotic bird in a spangled costume and plumed headdress, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gowenlock, both in nautical outfits of blue and red.

Among the younger people whose costumes stood out in the kaleidoscopic panorama on the dance floor were Miss Hortense Henry in a vivid Harlequin costume of black ankle tights appliqué in brilliant colors, and her fiancé, Gordon Kelley, as Pierrot, in red and blue, both of whom arrived from the dinner party that the James R. Addingtons and Donald McLennan Jr. gave for them at the Casino. Mr. McLennan, dressed as a Scotch Highlander, arrived with a group of guests from the same dinner. His party included Miss Rossmond Moore, in a Juliet costume of American beauty colored velvet with a sequined front panel and a rich looking ermine bordered train and a pearl cap; her fiancé, Ezra Warner Jr., who was a black and white Pierrot; W. Irving Osborne Jr., who looked like a tramp character in a burlesque show, and Mrs. Osborne, who wore a green and red silk blouse, white duck overalls, and a green wig.

One of the most attractive groups was a "Student Prince sextette" composed of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Laflin, Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr., Miss Margaret Carr, and Daggett Harvey. The three young men wore Heidelberg student garb with black velvet jackets, and flat, severe looking caps, and the young women were German peasant girls with blond wigs, starched organdy blouses, and bright red woolen shirts.

Among others present were Miss Cornelia Fairbanks, in a bright red Russian cossack dress and high boots. She was accompanied by Walter Travvette, garbed as a parson in clerical black with a lady's stockings dangling from his vest pocket; Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Stearns Ober, garbed as Latin Quartier artists; Miss Eleanor Holden, in black tights, white blouse, and curly silver wig; Walter Frazier, who impersonated Laurel of Laurel and Hardy; John Cromelin, who called himself a "Tribune Add Suite;" Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Healy, Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, Waldo Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Durbin, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr., Prince and Princess Michael Cantacuzene, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Corson Ellis.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

In these days of depression few of us have any troubles that money wouldn't cure. Nevertheless, all the virtue triumphant books that we have read have taught us that all that glisters is not gold and that a man's happiness cannot be counted as riches. Be that as it may, it is certain that it is very foolish to count the strength of a bridge hand as a simple matter of aces and kings. While no one will deny that aces and kings are very nice cards to hold, they do not by any means tell the full story.

♠—None
♥—9,8,6,4
♦—Q,8,3

WEST
♠—A,J,10,5,4,3,2
♥—K,7
♦—J,10,9,7
♣—None

EAST
♦—K,6,5,4,2
♣—J,9,8,5

SOUTH (Dealer)
♠—K,Q,8,6

North and South made a game and yet they did not hold either the A or K of trumps. South did hold the ♠ K-Q and, instead of finding them a help, found them decidedly embarrassing.

South dealt and opened the bid with two hearts, holding 4½ high card tricks and 6½ probable. West overcalled with two spades. North bid three hearts, East passed, South bid four hearts, and all passed.

West opened the ♦ J, which South captured with the A. South now led the ♥ Q, which West captured with the K. West returned the ♦ 10 and South trumped it with the ♥ 2. South next led the ♥ J, East taking the trick with the ♥ A. East led the ♦ K and South again trumped, this time with the ♥ 3. South now led the ♣ A and was grieved to find that West held no clubs. South next led the ♣ K and followed by leading the ♣ 3, which dummy took with the Q. Dummy then led the ♣ 6, which South trumped with the ♥ 10.

Dummy's remaining clubs, the 10 and 7, were now good, but it was up to South to get the lead back in dummy's hand. Since the ♠ K was of no more use to South than the 2, unless West failed to cover with the A (West was placed with the A from his bid), South led the K. West put up his ace and dummy trumped with the ♥ 8. Dummy now led the ♣ 10, on which South discarded the ♠ 6 and then the ♣ 7, on which South discarded the ♠ 8. To the thirteenth trick dummy led the ♥ 9, on which South threw his ♠ Q for five odd, his game, and one extra trick.

Going back to our theme song of aces and kings, we find that North and South held two aces and two kings and West and East held two aces and two kings. Nevertheless, North and South made five odd. East and West taking but two tricks. Moreover, South deliberately trumped one of his two kings. It is only fair to admit, of course, that North and South held all the queens, though, on the other hand, we should credit East and West with three of the four jacks. So it goes and all of it proves nothing.

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer.

To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S. 3, H. K, etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Transparent woolen dresses aren't thin and delicate enough to please the Paris dressmakers. They have to make them more so by trimming them with lines and lines of hemstitching and drawnwork. The more openwork the dress has, the smarter it is.

The Lucien Lelong frock shown in our sketch today illustrates the rage for hemstitching on woolen dresses. This frock is made of woolen voile in a light, springlike green and the simple bodice and upper sleeves are circled with lines of double hemstitching below the armholes.

The coat Lelong has designed to wear with this frock is shown on the small figure of our sketch. It is in dark green diagonal woolen and has a vestee and collar of white ermine. The straight sleeves are flared below the elbows by set on triangles of ermine and the closing is achieved by ermine ties. A belt of dark green suede nips in the waistline.

One Mother Tells of Five Points Learned in Child Training

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

There's nothing that makes pleasanter reading than certain letters that come in. These letters are from mothers who, in some way, through intuition, or reading, or experience, or all three, have gained a clearer vision into the motives and behavior of childhood. One has a happy, comfortable feeling about the future of babies and little children whose mother perceives the vital elements in a situation and is not blinded by surface actions. What an interesting letter the following is:

"Now, whenever it happens that my little girl has a spell of being unmanageable I can usually trace its cause to some misstep of mine in handling the situation. I find I simply can't hurry her, which was a hard lesson for me to learn, as her little brother necessarily takes a great deal of time, to say nothing of all the work there is to do in a large house with no regular help and all the constant interruptions of phone and doorbell. But I have to suffer as well as she when I hurry her, or allow myself to become irritated or petty.

"The little girl is much easier to handle than she was when I wrote you, a few months ago, and I can see now it was largely her adjustment to her new little brother, although we thought we were doing everything to avoid her feeling neglected. But as you say, we expected her to adjust herself too rapidly and should have had more patience. She can, too, be reasoned with, but it rubs the fur the wrong way to force things to be done."

See what important truths this mother has realized: First, that she is usually responsible when things go wrong.

Fourth, that some children will only respond happily when they're treated as reasonable human beings, but not when they're forced.

And last, that additions to a family make changes in all the relationships, and that adjustments to these changes are often very slow. Nature is not sudden.

CARE OF TREES

Mistakes of the last year in shrub and tree treatment can now be summed up for an outline of different tactics this year. THE TRIBUNE has prepared three booklets called "The Care of City Trees," "Favorite Trees of Chicagoland," and "Shrubs for the Home Site." These can be obtained at Tribune public service offices for 10 cents each, or all three for 25 cents, or a request can be mailed to The Tribune Farm and Garden Department, accompanied by 12 cents in stamps for one, or 28 cents in stamps for all three.

Winter evenings spent poring over seed catalogs also can be spent in visualizing plantings for next spring. One of the most feasible of garden suggestions even for the amateur is the planting of perennial vegetables, which not only save time and future planning but offer tasty and highly productive home garden crops.

Rhubarb and asparagus are two of the vegetables found most useful in this class. For the average family three or four clumps of rhubarb furnish enough of the vegetable through spring and early summer months, while two dozen or more asparagus plants furnish enough of the tips for a small family.

A naturally rich soil as deep as possible is best for the asparagus. The National Garden bureau suggests planting no closer than two feet apart in the rows and laying out the rows three feet apart. One system of planting is to dig a wide hole a foot deep and form a mound six inches in depth in the center of this hole, setting the plant on this mound. The roots should be spread out like the spokes of a wheel.

WILSON REFUSES CARDS' $7,500 CONTRACT

TELLS HOW HE TOOK BOOKIES; LAUGHS LAST

Baron Long's $3,500 Pads Mutuels.

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—After a day spent in chuckles over his venture against those whom he calls "conniving big city bookmakers," Baron Long, vice president of the Agua Caliente race track, today admitted that he put over the coup on Linden Tree, winner of yesterday's first race at the Mexican track. It is estimated that bookies in Chicago, New York and other betting centers paid out close to $100,000 on the manipulation in which others apparently shared.

Bookmakers were thrown off their guard because the odds wired throughout the country on Linden Tree showed 4 to 5 on the first reading and 1 to 3 just before the horses went to the post. At this time Long, who stationed himself at the mutuel window which usually is the last to close, laid down a $3,500 wager, $500 on each horse in the race except Linden Tree.

Linden Tree's Odds Soar.

This maneuver immediately had a bullish effect on Linden Tree's mutuel figures and the board gave a final reading of 6 to 1, but the final calculations rewarded Linden Tree's backers with $21.40 on each $2 straight ticket.

Long previously had placed a $1,000 wager on Linden Tree with an eastern commissioner. The bet was made shortly before post time so that those holding the money could not wire a comeback wager to the track and drive down Linden Tree's odds.

In putting over the coup, Long won $9,700 on Linden Tree from the bookmakers and lost $3,500 at the track, but showed a $6,200 profit on the investment. Long did not say whether others shared his good fortune, but the cries of the bookmakers throughout the country indicated that he had let others in on the manipulation.

Explains His Motive.

"For years I have observed the bookmakers of the country sending money back to the race track," the baron said, "apparently for the purpose of cutting the prices of the horses their clients had bet on.

"Remembering the day when this 'come back' money forced me to take one to ten on a legitimate six to one shot, I got to wondering what would happen if conditions were reversed. From the furor caused by the Linden Tree incident in the first race yesterday, it seems to make a lot of difference whose ox is gored.

"For the benefit of those who may wish to follow suit and do a little worm-turning on their own account, I will give you the formula. I bet $1,000 to win on Linden Tree with an eastern commissioner. It was too late, of course, for him to send the money back to the track and set it in the mutuels.

Bets at Post Time.

"As the horses were going to the post I took a position near the mutuel window which closes last and when I saw the calculator jotting down the final figures I asked whether I could lay a bet. 'Yes,' he replied. So I handed him $3,500, split among all the horses in the race except Linden Tree, and including a $500 wager on my own entry."

BOOKIES PAY OFF

Chicago bookmakers paid off yesterday on Linden Tree, the horse which had won the first race at Agua Caliente on Thursday and whose price in the betting suddenly jumped from 1 to 3 at post time to nearly 10 to 1.

It was estimated that about $40,000 had been lost by the Chicago bookies who fell victims to the practice of "padding" the mutuel machines.

DEMPSEY PLANS ONE MAJOR BOUT NEXT SUMMER

Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, will fight at least once in a major bout and possibly twice next summer as part of his campaign to regain the title he lost to Gene Tunney in 1926.

This was revealed last night by Dempsey's manager, Leonard D. Sacks, in a statement discrediting a report from New York that James Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, had declared Dempsey would not be considered as an opponent for Champion Max Schmeling until he had fought a "tune-up" bout with an opponent of the caliber of Johnny Risko or Tom Heeney. Sacks said neither he nor Dempsey had initiated negotiations with the Garden but that William F. Carey, president of the Garden corporation, had implored him not to sign with any other promoter until the Garden could bid for Dempsey's services.

"I never knew that Johnston was the boxing czar and that Dempsey either had to do as he suggests or do without," Sacks said. "Dempsey will fight this summer once at least and perhaps twice for the promoter that satisfies me. I have offers tucked away from reliable and responsible people who are prepared, ready and willing to lay it on the line and Jack's end alone would be in excess of the entire gate drawn at the Schmeling-Stribling contest in Cleveland."

CALLS $25,500 CUT FROM CUB PAY TOO MUCH

Rickey Is Willing to Give Him Bonus.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Another of the big steps in the deflation of Hack Wilson, home run king of the majors in 1930 and present holder of the world record for runs batted in by a major league baseball player, has been taken, it was revealed here today.

The latest blow to the pudgy outfielder and slugging star, according to information made known by Wilson today was the receipt from the St. Louis Cardinals club, his new employer, of a 1932 contract calling for a salary of $7,500, a reduction from his 1931 Cub salary of a cool $25,500.

Sends Contract Back.

Hack, however, has not fallen in with the deflation program. He has fired back the contract to Branch Rickey of the world champions with the statement that he will not work for $7,500 "under any circumstances."

In discussing the terrible shock Wilson for the first time definitely revealed the amount of his last Cub salary. The amount had been variously reported to be from $30,000 to $37,500. Hack stated definitely today that the sum he was under contract to receive was $33,000. He fell several thousand dollars short of receiving this amount because of fines for misconduct and his suspension on Sept. 6 without pay for the remainder of the season.

Offer Him Bonus.

While Wilson, through returning his contract, becomes the first 1932 holdout, the Cardinals have opened the way for negotiations by offering Wilson a "substantial sum" as a bonus in the event he succeeds in his impending comeback attempt. Wilson said today, however, that Mr. Rickey had made no mention of just how much the Cardinals consider a "substantial sum." It is known now, however, that the Cardinals have a view widely in contrast with the perspective of the Cubs when it comes to money.

The aforementioned Wilson deflation previously had progressed to the point where Hack did not fly into a rage at the offer of $7,500. He simply declined with dignity and some soft though impressive words.

Among other things Wilson told friends here today was the following comment: "I was all set for a $16,500 jolt, but I didn't think they'd try to trim me $25,500 just because I had one bad year.

"In 1930, my biggest year, I got $21,000. A $12,000 boost was given me in 1931 on my showing of the previous season. I don't think it is fair to try to knock me down $25,500 just because I had one bad year.

"The Cardinals obtained me with full knowledge of my record and my past salary. If they don't want to pay me a fair salary I don't see why they won't trade me to some other club."

According to dispatches from St. Louis, Business Manager Rickey had the following to say in discussing the offer to Wilson:

"A man who expects a salary of $33,000 for his services, which are based chiefly upon physical skill, and does not keep himself in condition to earn that salary, ought to expect a reclassification as a ball player."

Mr. Rickey added that the Cardinals have been pleased with the winter efforts of Wilson to get into playing condition and that the club stood ready to dicker with Hack on the bonus opportunities for the coming season.

ROBINS ARE RECEPTIVE

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Frank B. York, president of the Brooklyn baseball club, said today he felt he was in no position to comment upon the report that the St. Louis Cardinals had sent Hack Wilson a contract calling for only $7,500, adding that he also saw no reason why this should affect any negotiations that might develop between the Robins and the world's champions for Wilson's services.

"Our position on Wilson," said President York, "is the same today that it was a month ago when the Cubs traded Hack to the Cardinals. In fact, I haven't heard from the Cardinals in weeks on the Wilson matter. All I can say now is that if the Cardinals mean to get rid of Hack we would be in a receptive mood to consider a trade, but it must be remembered that Wilson at the moment is very much of a problem and gamble and we therefore cannot be expected to give too much for him."

TALKING IT OVER

BY ARCH WARD.

It may be only Joe Jacobs' managerial shyness, but the Schmeling-Walker match is no nearer completion this morning than when Der Maxie arrived in New York last Monday. For a week previous to the champion's return to America, it was reported daily that final arrangements awaited only the signature of the Ferocious Frankfurter.

JOE JACOBS.

Complications in the way of Madison Square Garden's negotiations for the match have become so complex that nearly every lawyer in Manhattan has been called in to untangle the red tape. William V. Saxe, chief of the garden's legal battery, announced last night that it would take at least two days for all the attorneys to make their speeches and there would be no definite statement about the fight until Sunday.

Schmeling is under suspension in New York and Madison Square Garden can have no dealing with him under pain of suspension itself. So a subsidiary organization known as the Madison Square Garden corporation of Florida has been formed to put on the bout at Miami.

The Garden, with an inside track to Schmeling's services, is in the position of being all dressed up and nowhere to go. It can't put on a Schmeling-Walker bout in New York and it fears a robust financial wallop if the fight is moved to Miami.

Chicago Stadium, on the other hand, has the place to hold a big match, either indoors or outdoors. A Schmeling-Walker bout as a winter attraction would draw more money at Chicago Stadium than anywhere else. The same match outdoors could and probably would play to a larger crowd at Soldiers' field than anywhere in the land.

Some of my more backward readers probably are wondering what I am trying to say. Well, so am I. While an explanation really isn't necessary, as I always am frank, outspoken, and broke, I suggest that the two corporations—Madison Square Garden and Chicago Stadium—get together on the promotion of a heavyweight championship fight.

New York has the fighters, Chicago has the place. So why not simplify matters and announce that the bout will be held in Chicago under the joint auspices of Madison Square Garden and Chicago Stadium. The latter corporation could do the front office work, and the profits, if any, could be split according to terms agreed upon by William Carey, president of the Garden, and Sidney Strotz, head of the Stadium.

While the idea may never mature, it will be a consolation to realize that the real people of Chicago are sure to appreciate what I am trying to do.

Acceptance of this suggestion would mean another opportunity for Chicago to prove it is made up of liberty loving, give till it hurts patriots.

Games Tonight

Purdue at Illinois.
Minnesota at Chicago.
Michigan at Wisconsin.
Indiana at Northwestern.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Western conference basketball schedule tonight presents for the first time a five game program. Both Northwestern and Chicago are playing at home, with the Wildcats meeting their second foe of the year in Indiana and the Maroons opening their campaign against Minnesota. It is the initial Big Ten game for both Chicago and Minnesota.

Northwestern, victor over Wisconsin 31 to 30 in an overtime game last Monday night, is favored to whip the Hoosiers, who lost to Purdue on Monday, 49 to 30. Tonight's game is the first between the teams in two years, since the rotating schedule of the conference did not bring the quintets together in 1931.

Lonborg Rejoins Team.

Indiana's overwhelming defeat by the Boilermakers does not indicate that it is not a capable foe for Northwestern. Purdue is conceded to have the best squad in the Big Ten. In proof of Indiana's ability, it is pointed out that Indiana defeated Notre Dame this year while the Irish twice were victors over the Wildcats.

Indiana has a veteran team with the exception of one guard position, which is handled by Arnold Suddith, sophomore star from Martinsville, Ind. Other Indiana regulars are Hodson and Campbell, forwards; Dickey, center, and Zeller, guard.

Gopher Five Favored.

While Chicago divided its games with Minnesota last year, it is not considered equal to the task of defeating the Gophers tonight at the new fieldhouse on the Midway. Coach Nelson Norgren's team is not equal to its rivals, either in defense or ruggedness. The Maroons won only one of their five practice games, while Minnesota is undefeated in six pre-season contests.

Chicago has defeated Bradley, 32 to 29, but lost to Western State Teachers, 36 to 24; Carleton, 33 to 29; Carnegie Tech, 40 to 39, in an overtime period, and Marquette, 36 to 21. Minnesota has six lettermen. The Gophers lost Capt. Harry Schoening and Earl Loose, forwards, and Don Bundy, center. They depend this season on Capt. Mike Cielusak and Virgil Licht, a fine pair of guards. Glenn Bethel, 6 foot 3 inches tall, who alternated with Bundy in 1931, is at center; Wells, Wright, and Walter Sochacki, sophomores, are the forwards.

De Pauw Doubles Score on Ohio Conference Champs

Greencastle, Ind., Jan. 8.—(AP)—De Pauw university's basketball team tonight doubled the score, 30 to 15, on Ohio university, defending Buckeye conference champions. De Pauw led, 15 to 11, at half time.

Tales of Tattersall's

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Will o' the Wisp of the prize ring, Young Griffo of Australia, flitted in and out of old Tattersall's back in the nineties and helped make the history of those halcyon days.

Griffo was one of the cleverest fighters of all time. He was also one of the worst dissipaters of all time. He never trained. He was never in condition. He was usually inebriated. Yet of all the characters who played leading rôles in the drama of Tattersall's he will be remembered longest. Nothing he could do seemed to take from his popularity.

They called this little marvel of marvels from Australia "Will o' the Wisp" because of his uncanny ability to evade punches. He would dodge, twist, squirm and flit this way and that and the fighters of those days found it well nigh impossible to land a blow.

His Little Pleasantries Just Enrage His Foes.

Griffo did most of his training for the bout in the saloons, and in the back rooms of saloons, along Chicago's gay white way. An hour before the fight, with Tattersall's packed with customers, Griffo was discovered at Sim Tuckhorn's bar, still in hard training, having just put away a half dozen drinks of brandy.

He hadn't decided whether he could spare the time to fill his engagement with Gerard or not. But after some persuasion and a promise that he might have a good big drink of hard liquor at the end of each round he accompanied the nervous representatives of Tattersall's who had discovered him at Tuckhorn's place to the scene of the fight.

Gerard was noted for his punching ability. He had knocked Gans down. He had mustered a tremendous following in Chicago. It was no secret that Griffo had not trained. So Gerard's followers expected to see their hero make short work of Griffo.

In the first two rounds, to the amazement of the crowd, Griffo, who was actually unsteady on his feet when he entered the ring, piled up an enormous lead. Gerard could not hit him and the Will o' the Wisp was peppering the popular Chicagoan with blows. He continued to outfight Gerard in the third round.

No Drink, No Fight Is Griffo's Slogan.

Back in his corner at the end of the third round Griffo looked up at his second and asked, "Where's my drink?" The second told him the liquor was all gone.

"Then there will be no more fight," he shouted back at the second and he started to leave the ring.

His handlers detained him by force until the bell rang. Once more he turned to meet his foe.

Aware that Griffo had made him look bad in the early rounds and also knowing that something was wrong over in Griffo's corner, Gerard came out for the fourth round with murder in his eye.

"'Ere's me 'ead, Frank, 'it hit."

The thoroughly enraged Gerard let loose with everything he had. He threw every punch he knew in the direction of Griffo's head, but he, too, missed. For the full three minutes of the round Gerard did not land a blow.

There was no glass of encouragement in Griffo's corner at the end of the fourth round, either, and his handlers again had to hold him in the ring until the bell tapped. Griffo's showing in the fifth round was sorrowful to behold. Gerard gave him a terrific lacing. Still he had not overcome Griffo's early lead.

But at the end of the round there was liquor in Griffo's corner. He took an extra large swig. When he came out he was the "Will o' the Wisp" of old. He escaped Gerard's vicious punches. He was going well enough at the end to get the decision.

So it went with Griffo all the way down the trail he traveled to its tragic end. The body of the bum they picked up in a New York gutter not many months ago was all that was left of the Will o' the Wisp.

[Article 7 and the final in "Tales of Tattersall's" will appear in tomorrow's Tribune.]

PUT OFF TRIBUNE SKI MEET UNTIL SUNDAY, FEB. 7

The second annual ski meet sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and the northwest park commissioners, scheduled for Riis park tomorrow afternoon, has been postponed until Sunday, Feb. 7. It is not feasible to hold the meet next Sunday because of the Norge Ski club meet at Cary, Ill. The following week the sixteenth annual Silver Skates Derby will be held.

Announcement of entries and officials and the time of the meet will be made several days before the tournament.

With three sophomores in the lineup the Kalamazoo team appeared nervous as the game got under way, and Loyola gained a 7 to 0 lead. The Chicagoans were held to one more point in the first half which closed with Loyola ahead, 8 to 6.

As the second half started Loyola forged ahead, 12 to 6. Western State quickly tied it at 12 all, only to have Loyola lead again on a foul shot. Then Western State spurted and ran the count to 20 to 13.

With Western State leading, 29 to 16, Perigo, star center, was hurt. The second team went in with a minute and a half to play and Loyola scored again.

Battalino Loses Title for Being Overweight

New York, Jan. 8.—[Special.]—Bat Battalino failed to make the featherweight limit when he weighed in this afternoon to defend his title tonight against Lew Feldman at Madison Square Garden and automatically forfeited his championship. Benny Jacobs, manager of Feldman, refused to go through with the match, and the boxing program at the Garden tonight was canceled.

BAT BATTALINO.

Battalino weighed 135¾, nearly 10 pounds over his class weight and three-quarters of a pound over the lightweight limit. Feldman tipped the scales at 125¾, one-quarter of a pound under weight.

The boxers weighed in the presence of Gen. J. J. Phelan, member of the boxing commission, who declared the featherweight championship vacant when Battalino stepped off the scales. Jacobs, on behalf of Feldman, claimed the title for his man, but under the commission rules a title cannot change hands at the scales, but must be won in the ring.

HICKEY BREAKS 220 RECORD IN PREP SWIM TEST

Jim Hickey of Tilden Tech climbed out of the Bartlett gym pool last night at the conclusion of the preliminary heats in the University of Chicago's prep swimming tournament with a new meet record in one free style event, the best time in a second event and a tie for the best time in a third. The finals begin at 2:30 this afternoon.

Hickey smashed the old tournament mark of 2 minutes and 27 seconds in the 220 yard race set by Al Schwartz of Marshall in 1925 by covering the course in 2:25.4, and thus lowered the only record in the seven swimming events. He also led the qualifiers in the 100 yard dash with a time of :56, more than a second over the meet record, and, with Diamond of Senn, was clocked at :19.6 to lead the field in the 40 yard event.

220 YARD FREE STYLE—Hickey, Tilden; Pettigrew, Maine; Elwell, Senn; Brown, Hyde Park; Johns, Maine. Best time, 2:25.4, by Hickey, Tilden. [Breaks meet record, 2:27, made by Schwartz, Marshall, in 1925.]

100 YARD BREAST STROKE—Klein, Fenger; Larson, Lane; Walker, Deerfield-Shields; Gibson, Tilden. Best time, 1:14.6, by Klein.

40 YARD FREE STYLE—Diamond, Senn; Hickey, Tilden; Tischler and Strucka, Schurz. Best time, :19.6, by Diamond and Hickey.

FANCY DIVING—Schmidt, Maine; Himel, Maine; Borrowman, Evanston; Holland, Evanston; Hayes, Austin; Slanta, Morton. Best performance by Schmidt, 76.8 points.

100 YARD BACK STROKE—Spry, Evanston; Riecke, Schurz; Weckler, Senn; Pascoe, Maine. Best time, 1:06.5, by Spry and Riecke.

100 YARD FREE STYLE—Hickey, Tilden; Diamond, Senn; Ladof, Roosevelt; Seliski, Schurz. Best time, :56, by Hickey.

220 YARD MEDLEY RELAY [40 yard back stroke, 40 yard free style, 40 yard breast stroke, 100 yard free style]—Schurz [Strucka, Tischler, Riecke, Koch], Senn, Maine, Roosevelt. Best time, 2:06.2, by Schurz.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 8.—The annual midwinter going into training of Babe Ruth has become one of the fixed events of the American calendar, a hopeful incident along the dreary way between the close of the football season and ground hog day. A shrewd and tactful hero, Mr. Ruth annually retires into the shadows when the world series is over lest his public see and hear too much of him continuously and does not reappear until November and then only momentarily when he decides to go hunting somewhere.

By some method of thought transference, possibly the Bell Telephone, news of this is communicated to all the papers, as well as the A. P., the U. P., and all the picture services. His getaway is then briefly solemnized with amusing little pieces beginning, "'Momma," said the Big Bam yesterday, 'where the dickens did you put my hunting cap last year?'" and by syndicated glossy prints bearing the caption, "Nimrod Ruth goes gunning."

This, however, is only a reminder and the Babe reserves his official return to pure reading matter until that time beyond Christmas and the New Year when the public is pretty well gassed from the deadly ponderosities of the super-sportsmen at the meetings of obscure societies with names ending in A. A. A. A. A. A. There is a blank spot in the year along in there and the Babe, as wise as the press agents for Radio City and for the associations for and against prohibition, who always score well in the Monday morning papers, adjusts his annual going into training to occur just at the time when it will command the most attention and produce the most cheering effect.

The theory is that if Ruth goes into training spring cannot be far behind, and so when the Babe strips down to gym trunks and hair shirt and begins hurling a medicine ball at Arthur McGovern in the gym, the results in print actually outmeasure the current wars and local outrages and the plight of the United States treasury. Cartoonists draw his portrait again, all the sport page essayists welcome him as a happy theme in a world of faults, and the news reels immortalize his every wheeze and grunt as though they were the first robin's cheery chirps.

Best Loved Citizen.

I hope I do not seem to throw myself at him, but the Babe is on his way to become the best loved citizen of the U. S. A. and not the least of the qualities which command this affection is an optimism based on a courage which has been tested many a time in the last ten years. He has always been a money maker, it is true, but he has been broke several times, notwithstanding, and there have been times when it looked as though he never would last to make another stake.

Cautious and Honest.

He has been down with pneumonia twice. He has had a number of operations. He has had infected wounds. He has been in wrong with the management and with his public. His first marriage came to a shocking tragedy. He has been put in jail for speeding and there was one occasion, early in his career, when he might have become the fall guy for a gang of swindlers who wished to make him president of a Babe Ruth oil company and peddle dry hole stock to the baseball patrons.

The Babe at that time was not many years out of the reform school in Baltimore and his business knowledge did not go beyond the simple fact that if he checked out more money than he put in the bank the checks would begin to bounce. Still, it did not seem to his young intelligence that the promotor who wished to make him president of the oil company would be willing to sell the stock so cheap if it was worth all he said it was.

So the Babe referred him to Fred Ferguson, a young man of suspicious disposition, who had just contracted for the writings of Babe Ruth for that season and when the promoter appealed to Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Ferguson called him a number of army names, beginning with the word "dirty," and told him to be elsewhere at once.

Aside from the sense of caution shown here the Babe manifested a sort of honesty which was above and beyond that which could be reasonably expected of a male Topsy whose last home had been an orphanage for difficult cases. He was offered easy money for the mere use of his name and while he was not unwilling to lease his name to exploiters of many commodities, when a questionable proposal was put to him he was square enough to turn the offer down, even though, on his trial, he might have put in a successful plea of stupidity.

More Power to Babe.

There was a while some years ago when it seemed as if the wear and tear of his social and professional activities must use him up pretty soon, and in those days it was a kind of guessing game to predict that the Babe would be all through in one or two years more. There may even have been some hope that he would finish up just to vindicate such predictions.

But nowadays in the sport business I sense only a hope that the Babe will go on indefinitely. When the time of his midwinter going into training rolls around the country harks for the first faint chirp of spring frogs in the marsh, and it seems that everything is going to be all right again after all.

I seem to be an old silly about this, but I felt as though I would just have to let myself go this once.

Place cross in square opposite race you wish to enter. A skater may compete in only one division. Print name plainly in pencil. Entries close at midnight, Sunday, Jan. 17, with Wilfrid Smith, sports department, Chicago Tribune.

- ☐ Men's Senior, 18 and over.
- ☐ Boys' Intermediate, 16, 17.
- ☐ Boys' Junior, 14 and 15.
- ☐ Boys' Juvenile, 12 and 13.
- ☐ Girls' Senior, 16 and over.
- ☐ Girls' Junior, under 16.

The Sleipner Athletic club, which is one of the outstanding organizations in amateur sports, has entered 40 skaters in the sixteenth Silver Skates Derbies sponsored by THE TRIBUNE. The Derbies will be held Jan. 23 and 24 at Garfield park.

The Sleipner entries are distributed in six of seven age classifications, although the largest number will compete in the men's senior race. James Vlastnik, Walter Gohr, and S. A. Weaver head this group of twenty. Harry Lidstrom is rated one of the best in the boys' intermediate division. Sleipner will have seven boys in this Derby.

Five Enter Boys' Junior.

Five are entered in the boys' junior and as many more in the boys' juvenile Derby. Robert Beltz will compete in the boys' midget race, while Jeanne Maier and Florence Bloomhagen will seek the Silver Skates award in the girls' senior Derby.

C. S. Nicoll, athletic director of the Sleipner A. C. has submitted the list of entries and he reports that many of them already are practicing indoors.

The Mustang Athletic club also sent in its list of contestants for Silver Skates yesterday. Seven will compete in the first two races for men and boys. The entry list follows:

Entries Close Jan. 17.

With colder weather already here and prospects for some honest to goodness winter in the next two weeks interest in the tournament is increasing. Entries do not close until midnight Jan. 17 but it is advisable to send in individual and team entries as soon as possible. The daily blank in THE TRIBUNE will be discontinued after Jan. 17. Team entries may be made in a group if ages are certified by the club captain or other official.

The complete list of all contestants and their racing numbers will be printed Saturday and Sunday, Jan 23 and 24. The list of officials, many of whom have assisted at all of the previous derbies, will be published Jan. 17.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

Barrington, Ill.

Dear Sir: As I have now made Barrington my permanent home, I find myself looking for the winter birds that I was accustomed to seeing during my residence in Iowa. The black crested chicadee, the juncos, and other winter birds were constant visitors at our suet boxes, placed near the windows of the house.

I have seen none of these birds at Barrington, but there are plenty of sparrows, and I can hear the calls of pheasants. Is it possible that the sparrows drive away the winter birds? Or is it that they do not happen to appear in the immediate neighborhood of our farm?

Yours very sincerely,
ALBERT H. BYFIELD.

Answer: There may be several explanations as to why you have not seen many winter birds around your place. Assuming that you have one or more feeding stations it is possible that they haven't been located by winter birds other than the pestiferous sparrows.

There isn't any doubt but what there are juncos, chicadees, nuthatches, and possibly a few cardinals around Barrington. Several weeks ago when we visited an estate west of Barrington we saw several flocks of juncos from the road. The number of wooded tracts and extensive growth of natural and planted shrubbery must prove attractive to several species that stay with us through the winter. Although readers have not reported the variety of birds observed this winter around Barrington, we wouldn't be surprised if the red headed woodpecker were on the list.

We suggest that you establish around your place a number of suet lunch counters by simply fastening large chunks to the trunks of trees. Place these on trees some distance from the house as well as close in. If you have any stands of evergreens be sure to distribute a variety of bird foods among them or construct a regular food station there.

The junco is a seed eating bird, so wheat, canary seed, or similar items should be provided for this species. After decorating a number of tree trunks with suet [which you can tie to the trees] watch them, and we believe you will see both nuthatches and chicadees. As we recall your farm, there is plenty of timber near it, so there should be several tree climbing species of birds in the neighborhood.

Earlier Chicago.

DEAR Wake: Helper W. F. G. of Seattle, Wash., in a recent "Way Back When" stated that Clayton's "Drum" on Madison, just about where Thompson's lunchroom is now located, was the "hang out of the National Guard." It might have been the hangout of some guardsmen but never of the "Dandy First."

The "Drum" was a resort of sports, gamblers, etc., and became as well known as Mike McDonald's "Store." Charles Clayton's father was a police sergeant and had political influence.

As Col. Charles S. Diehl said about six weeks ago at a luncheon tendered him at the Hamilton club by veterans of the Dandy First, "The original members of the First regiment were of the best families of the city," and its record bears out this statement.

Col. Diehl is the acknowledged father of the First regiment. In 1874 when a cub reporter on the Times, under Storey and Snowden, he was a member of a debating club which held meetings in the Union Park church. He proposed at one of these meetings that a charter be applied for to form a regiment of infantry. All present signed the application.

The regiment has been in existence since Sept. 8, 1874. The veterans' corps was organized May 10, 1882, and chartered Nov. 24, 1882.

Col. Diehl now lives in San Antonio, Tex. He was Associated Press representative during the Spanish-American war in 1898. John E. Wilkie, formerly of THE TRIBUNE and United States secret service, was associated with him during the war.

Harrison Preps.

Harve: Before it's too late, let's give the championship Harrison Tech football eleven a rousing cheer. Many falls will pass before we see another prep team functioning as smoothly in every department as the Hornets did. They could run, plunge, pass, kick, block, tackle and charge with machinelike precision.

Undoubtedly they reached their peak when they downed the powerful unbeaten Miami, Fla., eleven with a previous record of 32 wins and three ties. Harrison scored 303 points to opponents' 43. National prep champions may be a mythical title but Harrison certainly has claim to any such honors.

Remember John [Pipes] Conley, who held forth as an umpire two and three decades ago? Conley was an arbiter in the old Chicago Baseball league of 1910 when the present Wake was president of that semi-pro organization. Holding franchises were Jimmy Callahan, later White Sox manager; Frank McNichols, now a contractor; William C. Niesen, still in semi-pro baseball; the late Capt. A. C. Anson, who had Anson's Colts in the league; John Schorling with the colored Leland or Chicago Giants, and the Rogers Park team.

Well, Pipes Conley still officiates at local baseball games. He recently was elected president of the Umpires Protective Association of Chicago.

Oster All Set to Swing Left, Then—Forgets

Firpo Known as Boxer.

Firpo is a boxer, and that is the reason Oster's handlers attempted to improve Willie's technique with left jabs. So it appears that Firpo merely will have to be on the alert against a vicious right swing Monday.

Oster contends that his right will be good enough to beat Firpo, for he argues that the lanky Pennsylvanian can't dodge his best punch all night.

Two preliminary bouts have been arranged. Al Ries of the north side will meet Johnny Lullo, west side Italian, and Red Bruce will clash with Jud Judkins. Three other fights will complete the card.

Six rounds of fighting were added to the King Levinsky-Paulino Uzcudun program of next Friday night at the Chicago Stadium yesterday when Gen. John V. Clinnin, N. B. A. president, ordered the three light heavyweight bouts, originally scheduled for eight rounds, to go the full distance of ten.

These bouts involving Dave Majer against Abie Bain, Baxter Calmes against Bob Olin and Charley Belanger against Georgie Nichols, are semi-final matches in the light heavyweight championship elimination series. Gen. Clinnin ruled that all matches after the first round eliminations must be at ten rounds.

The general's order now means that there will be 48 rounds of boxing, four bouts of the full ten rounds and the opener between Tony Cancela and Yale Okun at eight.

Charley Retzlaff, Duluth, Minn., heavyweight, was signed last night to fight in the semi-final bout of the King Levinsky-Max Baer feature at Madison Square Garden of New York on Jan. 29. Retzlaff is training here. The Levinsky-Baer match was closed yesterday by the Garden matchmaker, Jimmy Johnston.

Jack Dempsey will start training today at Reno, Nev., for the resumption of his comeback campaign. He said he will work at least six rounds a day until Feb. 1, when a schedule of bouts against real opponents would be started. He expects to fight here next month, but will have to get a Mississippi suspension lifted. Both Mississippi and Illinois are members of the National Boxing association.

BIFF JONES WILL COACH LOUISIANA STATE GRID TEAM

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Louisiana State university today reached into the ranks of big time football and definitely landed Capt. Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones, former head coach at the Army, as chief coach for the school's eleven.

Going out after a gridiron comeback in a big way, L. S. U. is still angling for Burt Ingwersen, head coach at the University of Iowa for seven years, to act as Jones' assistant.

BUSINESS SIGNS GIVE PROPHECY OF BETTER DAYS

Retail Shelves Seen as Almost Bare.

BY O. A. MATHER.

If a person suffers partial paralysis, he must first learn to walk again before he can run. That is the situation of business today, but there are signs that the patient is learning to hobble along and there is hope that he may go with firmer stride in the not distant future.

Thus, the weekly mercantile reviews report some improvement in trade, although many lines still remain comparatively inert. In the retail field there is less than the usual results from clearance sales. But the wholesale trade is hopeful that salesmen, who are back on the road following the holidays, will pick up an increasing number of orders because retail shelves are almost bare. And in the steel and automobile industries hope is expressed for a marked improvement in the next two months.

Source of Hope.

"The undoubtedly low retail stocks are a source of encouragement to wholesalers and offer hope that considerable replenishment will have to be done in the near future, even though the orders are of a hand-to-mouth variety," Bradstreet's review says. "Many lines, of course, are still in the quiet of the between season.

"As noted last week, business men are not expressing any great amount of optimism for the year just beginning. Here and there is mention of better sentiment, but, on the whole, business seems to be thoroughly instilled with the idea that there must be yet a long fight before better times will be gained.

On Conservative Schedules.

"In the heavy industries many plants are continuing their holiday shutdowns, and those that are opened are operating on conservative schedules.

"There seems to be considerable confidence expressed, however, that the steel and automobile industries especially, will begin to show some pick-up this month and next. Slow collections are still the order of the day, and this factor has retarded many lines.

"Resumption of activity in a limited way was noted in leading lines of trade this week," Dun's Review says. "A somewhat stronger tone appeared in certain leading lines.

"Commitments for spring are at the lowest level in many years, trading now being largely of a filling-in description. Country stocks are unusually incomplete, dealers adhering to the policy of buying only for a very limited period, preferring to await developments before estimating spring needs. Coats and suits received some attention, but interest was centered on winter models for special sales. Spring buying of dresses is under way, but in better lines for current demand the market is quiet.

Men's Wear Orders.

"Orders received for men's wear gave some stimulus to the wholesale textile division. Retailers in nearly all parts of the country are interested in merchandise for special sales, including a wide variety of clothing and furnishings in the popular-priced divisions.

"Current sales volume in the hardware trade is about on a par with that of a year ago, when allowance is made for price reductions that have become effective in the interim. Orders embrace a wide variety of assorted hardware lines of a staple and seasonal character."

Auto Sales Gain.

Some basis for expectation of better days for the automobile industry was afforded in the monthly sales report of the General Motors corporation. World sales in December totaled 79,529 units, which was a sharp gain over the 29,359 sold in November and compares favorably with December, 1930, when 80,008 units were sold. In fact, last month's sales were the second highest on record for any December.

Sales to dealers in the United States last month were 68,650 units, compared with 23,716 in November and 68,252 in December, 1930. Dealers' sales to consumers were 53,588 units last month, compared with 34,673 in November, and 57,989 in December, 1930. Total sales of the corporation for 1931 were 1,074,709 units, the lowest level since 1925 and 99,400 below 1930.

Lake Shore Trust Earns 16.25% on Capital Stock

The Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank yesterday reported that earnings for 1931 were equivalent to 16.25 per cent on the capital stock and to 8.86 per cent on invested capital. The number of accounts increased 15.8 per cent over what they were at the peak of deposits in 1929. All directors and officers were reelected at the annual meeting.

Samuel Mindel and Frank Seiden were elected directors of the Main State bank. L. Shirley Tark and William Rusnak were elected vice presidents and Emil Selten and W. B. Thomas were elected cashiers. William G. Dooley was elected vice president and cashier of the Liberty Trust and Savings bank, and E. N. Granquist was elected assistant cashier.

State Senator Thomas J. Courtney was elected director and trust officer of the Prairie State bank of Oak Park. He has been attorney for the institution for a number of years.

Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Covers 1931 Dividends

'Frisco Takes No Action on Pfd. Dividend

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 8.—Directors of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway company today took no action on the preferred dividend, the next quarterly installment of which is due to be paid Feb. 1. Omission of the dividend was expected in Wall street in view of the large deficit shown by the Frisco for the eleven months of last year.

The board had previously met last month and although it was scheduled to act on the dividend, no consideration was given to the matter. In December, 1930, directors voted four quarterly payments of $1.50 each for the entire year 1931.

Preferred dividends had been paid since the final quarter of 1924. The dividend on the common stock was passed last March.

Allis Chalmers Payment.

The Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company declared a quarterly dividend of 12½ cents. The previous quarterly rate was 25 cents.

Concerning the change in the rate, Otto H. Falk, president of the company, said "the reduction was to conserve our strong cash position and also because we have acquired two companies for cash. Under the circumstances we considered it wise to reduce the dividend payment."

F. W. Woolworth & Co., Ltd., the British company in which control is owned by F. W. Woolworth company, has declared a final dividend of sixpence for the year 1931, bringing the total paid since recapitalization of the company to 2 shillings per ordinary share, or 3s 6d for the year.

Equivalent to Extra.

An initial dividend of 1s 6d was declared in October. At the offices of the American company it was stated that this dividend was equivalent to an extra on the stock and brought the total return from the British property in 1931 to a higher level than in 1930. No estimate of the amount of this final dividend in dollars for the American company was available.

Holders of the stock here may receive payment of the dividend in sterling or in dollars. If payment in sterling is desired the holders must notify the Guaranty Trust company at least one week in advance of the payment date, otherwise the payment will be in dollars.

Regarded as Satisfactory.

In its preliminary statement the English company reports for the year ended Dec. 31 a profit of £4,211,366 after charges but before taxes, compared with £3,684,161 before taxes in the preceding year. The directors recommended the writing off of £96,965 total expenses in connection with the capital increase. The balance carried forward to the next account was £2,279,420. Officials here regarded the statement as highly satisfactory.

Directors of the Truscon Steel company omitted the dividend on the common stock due Jan. 15. A payment of 15 cents a share was made in the preceding quarter.

Announce Consolidation of Two Radio Corp. Units

Consolidation of RCA Photophone, Inc., with the RCA Victor company, two units of the Radio Corporation of America, has been announced by David Sarnoff, president. The unification, he said, "will mean a closer association of sound motion picture recording and reproducing with the radio laboratory." The staff and operations of the Photophone company are being transferred from New York to the RCA-Victor plant at Camden, N. J.

RAILROAD LIENS LEAD ADVANCE OF BOND MARKET

Federal Obligations Hit New Lows.

New York, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Railroad bonds again took the lead in a vigorous upswing of prices which carried the securities market to new high levels for 1932. The only cloud on an otherwise bright sky was in the United States government list. Both Liberties and Treasurys declined throughout the day, most of them finally reaching new lows.

The depression in federal obligations was attributed to a report that debentures of the proposed Reconstruction Finance corporation, now before congress, might be issued at 4 per cent for 5 years, tax free. There was no confirmation of this report, however.

Rails Attract Buying.

Low priced rail liens attracted most of the buying today. From 1 to 9 points advance was registered by some bonds of Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Chicago and North Western, Rock Island, Denver and Rio Grande, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, St. Louis and San Francisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, and Wabash.

Industrial loans advanced prices along with the rails, but trading was in smaller volume. The utilities also sold higher.

Foreign bonds were firm, Japanese government 6½s advancing in the face of the resignation of the cabinet following an attempt to bomb the emperor. German 7s lost nearly 4 points at one time, but rallied to close unchanged. The 5½s gained 1¼ points under the heaviest trading of the session.

Decline Over 9 Billion.

The New York Stock exchange made public today a tabulation showing that the market or quoted value of all bonds listed on the exchange declined $9,536,317,083 during the last year.

The par value of 1,607 issues listed on Jan. 1, 1931, aggregated $50,072,879,897 with a market value of $47,384,805,889. On Jan. 1, this year, there were 1,601 listed issues with a par value of $52,360,023,801, with a market value of $37,848,488,806.

NEW HAVEN RAILROAD AND WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REDUCE PAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 8.—Wage cuts, ranging from 10 to 30 per cent, were announced today by the New York, New Haven, and Hartford railroad and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

The New Haven cut of 10 per cent affects men in the mechanical department, who voluntarily accepted the reduction. It was announced that officials of the railroad are now negotiating with members of the clerical staff for a similar cut.

The mechanical department includes men engaged in inspection and maintenance of rolling stock. The two largest shops affected are in Readville, Mass., and the Bronx.

In announcing the Westinghouse reductions of from 10 to 30 per cent, depending on earnings, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, said the cuts were in addition to other measures leading to greater efficiency and economy.

"For salaries over $200 a month," Mr. Robertson said, "there will be a minimum reduction of 10 per cent and a maximum of 30 per cent. Such reductions will be graduated with the earnings of the company. The effect of this plan is twofold: It reduces expenses and, at the same time, makes it apparent to all salaried employés that improved earnings of the company will increase their own pay."

A five day week in the executive headquarters, the division headquarters offices and all district superintendents' offices, effective tomorrow was announced by the Western Union Telegraph company. This action, taken with the approval of the employés, will be equivalent to an 81-3 per cent reduction in present salaries. The five day week and the reduction will not apply to employés who handle messages and who constitute the majority of Western Union employés.

THOMAS POTTER MADE PRESIDENT OF ELGIN WATCH

Mr. Potter has been associated with the Quaker Oats company during his entire business career, having entered its service on his graduation from Princeton twenty-five years ago. He supervised and operated the Quaker Oats company plant at Hamburg, Germany, and later its plant at Saskatoon, Canada, as general manager for western Canada. He joined the executive staff of the Quaker Oats company at Chicago in 1918, supervising costs of all manufacture and distribution, and became vice president in charge of purchases in 1929.

Mr. Potter succeeds as president of the watch company De Forest Hulburd, who retired from the presidency in December, but who continues to be a director of the company.

Lake Superior Shipments of Iron Ore Increase

Shipments of Lake Superior iron ores from Lake Erie ports in December totaled 174,885 tons, against 137,199 in December, 1930. For the season 11,188,153 tons were shipped, against 23,273,204 in the preceding year.

Zenith Radio.

Please give me information and your opinion on Zenith Radio corporation stock.—D. R. M.

Zenith Radio corporation was incorporated in 1923. It has important patents covering the automatic tuning of radio receiving sets. Like those of other companies in the same industry, earnings in the last two years have not been satisfactory.

For the six months ended October 31, 1931, net loss, after all charges, was $127,609, against loss of $272,900 for the corresponding 1930 period. Loss for the October 31, 1931, quarter was $69,100.

On December 18, 1931, a press dispatch stated that the company had no surplus stock on hand.

On Dec. 12, 1931, current assets were $1,670,000, and current liabilities were $227,000. Cash and government securities alone were $827,500. Working capital was $1,443,000, against $1,766,000 on Dec. 18, 1930.

On April 30, 1931, profit and loss deficit was $155,800.

There were outstanding 500,000 shares of no par common stock on which no dividend has been paid since the 50 cent disbursement on Nov. 1, 1929.

Western United Gas and Electric.

Please give me information on Western United Gas and Electric company first 5½s due 1955.—E. F. J.

Western United Gas and Electric company is controlled by Western United corporation. It is an Insull company. It supplies electric, gas and transportation service to a population of more than 420,000 in 89 communities in Illinois.

Gross revenues increased steadily for the five years through 1930. In the latter year they were $8,474,000, against $8,414,000 for 1929, $7,652,000 for 1928 and $6,813,000 for 1927.

Fixed charges were earned 2.18 times in 1930, 2.01 times in 1929, 2.00 times in 1928, 1.66 times in 1927, and 1.81 times in 1926.

The $24,300,000 first 5½s, series A, due Dec. 1, 1955, are secured equally with the $1,500,000 series B bonds due March 1, 1957, by a first mortgage on all properties owned by the company and by pledge of all capital stock and funded debt of Coal Products Manufacturing company and Aurora, Elgin and Fox River Electric company.

The bonds are a business man's investment.

WARNS AGAINST REALTY BOND RACKETEERING

Watch Some Groups, Says Erickson.

BY AL CHASE.

Legalized racketeers in the real estate mortgage bond field who are operating self-constituted committees which prey on the bonholders need careful watching, warned Samuel E. Erickson, president of the Cook county real estate board, in his inaugural address to that body. The new head of the real estators also urged the installment of a definite program of relief program for relief of real estate mortgage bond holders and also suggested the conservation of public funds and public property, both real and personal.

"We should use our best efforts toward restoring confidence in real property securities," he said, "and should sponsor plans to coöperate in the protection of first mortgages. Bondholders of the defaulted issues represent thousands of investors.

"Since the early part of 1929 more than 15,000 mortgages have found their way into the courts for foreclosure. The larger portion of these have been of the speculative promotional type, overfinanced at the outset. The aggregate sum involved will come close to the billion dollar mark.

Washout Nearing End.

"Fortunately, this washout now gradually is nearing an end. During this period sixty-five banks in the metropolitan area have closed, nearly all of them having important real estate loan departments.

"In addition, ten to fifteen of the largest loop real estate loan concerns have gone into voluntary or forced liquidation. As a consequence of these unfortunate conditions, the market for the refunding of many sound offerings has become narrowed and restricted to such a degree that the home owner, with whom our membership comes in closer contact, is placed in a position where refunding difficulties have become multiplied, oftentimes followed by hasty and unwarranted foreclosure proceedings.

"I am strongly of the opinion that through the constructive efforts of a well organized mortgage loan committee coöperative aid can be offered in worthy cases, to bring about temporary one or two year extensions, at the end of which time, no doubt, refunding will be much less difficult.

Income Can Be Increased.

"This committee should assist in the orderly liquidation of defaulted securities and bank assets, taxes and principal and should coöperate with the bank receivers to the end that the expense of liquidation be reduced to a minimum. In this maner the income of the properties easily can be increased and the net return improved.

"Under many of the larger bond foreclosures competent committees are in charge, rendering constructive service at a reasonable cost. There are, however, a few self-constituted committees, organized for personal profit only, without the slightest thought of economic service in the interest either of the bondholder or equity owner. These comprise, to a degree, a system of legalized racketeers that need careful watching."

Joseph T. Ryerson Board Takes No Dividend Action

Directors of Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, Inc., took no action yesterday on the quarterly dividend on the capital stock which would ordinarily be payable on Feb. 1.

"The company is in very strong financial condition," said Donald M. Ryerson, chairman of the board, "but it was felt to be the part of wisdom and conservatism to postpone action relative to this dividend until the trend of conditions is more definitely indicated."

Washing Machine Business Gains Despite Depression

BY SCRUTATOR.

The twenty-seven manufacturers of household washers who belong to the American Washing Machine Manufacturers' association report that their combined sales last year exceeded those of 1930 and they are looking to 1932 for further growth. This organization claims more than 85 per cent of the country's total production.

This showing, made in the face of rapidly changing markets, is attributed to resourcefulness on the part of managements in finding new outlets.

In previous years electrical household washers were sold largely to workers' homes where wives were doing the laundry by hand. The labor saving appeal was stressed.

But last year the buying power of such homes fell off sharply. Many women could not be converted from hand washing methods by any array of arguments for the very good reason that they lacked the money to buy.

Find New Buyers.

A search for more productive markets revealed a large number of potential buyers among people who hitherto had not done their own washing.

A necessary change was made in the sales argument. Economy, instead of saving labor, was urged upon this new army of buyers. Householders whose incomes had been bigger were curtailing expenses but were able to buy machines without difficulty. They proved to be sufficiently responsive to the printed and spoken word to enable the makers to maintain their sales volume.

But the manufacturers did more than spread through this field and develop new users in it. Salesmen, hard pressed by executives, determined to take the sag out of sales graphs, displayed ingenuity in selling machines to many persons who never had considered themselves washer prospects.

The devices were placed in garages to cleanse cloths and chamois skins. Many salesmen made their quotas by selling more washers to clubs, cafeterias and restaurants.

Hunting Green Pastures.

Other drives were made on domestic science departments of schools and on hospitals and sanitariums with special washing problems. The success of these onslaughts in comparatively new fields has convinced the manufacturers that when one selling field withers it is no sign that there are not numerous green pastures to be found if one only looks for them.

"The association's sales in 1931 were produced in the face of such difficulties as never before had confronted most of the members," says J. R. Bohnen, secretary of the organization.

The market for electrical household devices in cities is by no means saturated and in the country districts it has only begun to be developed.

Opens New Outlets.

The rapid extension of high lines down country roads is steadily opening new outlets for such accessories. It is estimated that about half the farm homes have washers, but the majority of them are not electrically propelled. Central station power at present reaches only a little more than 10 per cent of the nation's farms.

The success of the makers of mechanical refrigerators in bucking the trend of general business has been attributed to natural demand for a new product. But the electric washing machine is not a new product. Its record in 1931 seems to be due largely to the fact that the industry met changed markets and discouraging business conditions with resourcefulness rather than resignation.

LACK AGREEMENT ON NEW ENGLAND RAIL SYSTEMS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Already agreed that four systems in the east are enough, railroad executives disagree on extending these systems into New England.

J. J. Bernet, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, and Patrick E. Crowley, until recently president of the New York Central, today spoke the final word on behalf of the executives of the four major trunk lines seeking to have the interstate commerce commission revise its five system eastern consolidation plan in favor of the railroad sponsored four systems.

Bernet, on cross-examination by representatives of New England and eastern and New York communities, asserted his company hoped eventually to enter New England with a main line. In this he differed from Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, and W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania. The former had said he did not want to go into New England with his lines, while Atterbury expressed satisfaction with his present New England connections.

O'NEILL RESIGNS AS OFFICIAL OF DAVIS COMPANY

J. F. O'Neill, after many years on State street, first as manager of a large group of departments in Marshall Field & Co.'s retail store and for the last eight years as general merchandise manager and vice president of the Davis company, announced his resignation yesterday. Although Mr. O'Neill's future plans have not yet been definitely decided, it is understood that he is considering several propositions from large retail organizations.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 8.—Really, this astonishing young 1932 stock market rally is beginning to look like the real thing. It has been in strong hands certainly—the way in which it absorbs punishment in the way of profit taking and bear selling leaves no room for doubt on that score. Its sponsors seem willing to do things in a big way for it and it might conceivably make its mark in spite of the sneers and gibes from the bear camp.

It has been going strong for three days now. Each day, the diehards have been guessing that the "flash in the pan," as they have chosen to call it, was through and each succeeding day has seen fresh price runups of from 1 to 5 points or more. And each day's success has converted new believers to the probability of a repetition of the long unbroken line of January price recoveries on the exchange.

Plows Steadily Ahead.

Today's performance was no exception to the rule. The list took the customary first hour flurry of speculative selling by those convinced the advance had run its course without a bobble and plowed steadily ahead in unbroken formation. Net gains were as good on the average as any of the current movement and final prices were around the best of the day.

Moreover, buying converged in the highest class stocks of the list, such as United States Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, Atchison and the like—so-called "rich men's stocks"—showing that the orders were coming largely from strong financial sources.

U. S. Steel Leads Again.

U. S. Steel once again was the leader. After some hesitation around the opening the old bellwether got started around midafternoon and went bounding to a new high for the recovery of 43¾, up nearly 3 points from yesterday's close. Allied Chemical and Dye, which lagged behind in yesterday's session owing to uncertainties over its dividends, came to life at last and did itself proud with a runup of more than 4 points. American Telephone scored a gain of 5 points; a host of other some time pacemakers, such as Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak, Western Union, Case Threshing Machine and People's Gas, recovered from 1 to 3 points.

Even the tobacco stocks which have been unable to get themselves wound up so far owing to devastating talk of impending state cigaret taxes at last counted themselves in on the forward movement, American Tobacco B jumping ahead 3 points and Liggett & Myers nearly 2.

Rails on Good Behavior.

The railroad shares continued on their good behavior, with gains of 1 to 2 points the rule for the group. Central Railroad of New Jersey, true to its reputation of never doing things by halves in a stock market way, jumped ahead 6 points on a single sale. Delaware and Hudson advanced about 4. Interest in the progress of this section was keyed up somewhat by the action of the mechanics of the New York, New Haven and Hartford in accepting a 10 per cent wage cut without objection.

Auto Shares Improve.

The motors perked up quite encouragingly. Possibly they couldn't find it on the cards to do otherwise with the big national automobile show due to open tomorrow. General Motors rose more than a point and Chrysler did almost as well. Auburn provided a sputter of fireworks by shooting up 10¼.

Merchandise shares did well as a rule in spite of a disappointing tone in some of the earnings reports now coming to hand. Safeway Stores, with a 6 per cent drop in sales for the year ended Dec. 31 last, managed to advance nearly 2 points.

SAYS TREASURY DEPT. ABANDONS SALES TAX IDEA

Assistant Secretary Tells of Difficulties.

New York, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Arthur A. Ballantine, assistant secretary of the United States treasury, tonight told a large gathering of the New York bankers that the treasury department had rejected proposals for a general merchandise sales tax as a means of raising government revenues.

In answer to the claim that such a tax would solve the revenue problem without hardship to any one, the assistant secretary said the proposal had been rejected "not only because a general sales tax bears no relation to ability to pay, but also because of the enormous administrative difficulties of applying such a tax in this country, and the almost inevitable pyramiding of the tax in successive sales."

Mr. Ballantine was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the New York State Bankers' association. He said the "administration stands firm for the protection of the public credit as the very foundation of our whole financial structure." He urged every individual, whether he enjoyed a large income or a moderate income, to support the government in its campaign to balance the national budget.

"The issue here," he said, "is not between taxing the rich and not taxing them; it is whether, with large incomes subjected to very sharp absolute increases and still paying most of the tax, moderate incomes should be called on for moderate contributions. To believe that such contributions will be opposed is to place little faith in the character of our citizenship. This is a time for all citizens to join in response to the financial need of their government."

An Emergency Measure.

In supporting the administration's proposals for increasing tax rates, he said, "the treasury fully recognizes that under normal conditions the rates proposed are excessive, and that lower rates would be more productive. But these are not normal times and increased contributions during the emergency ought willingly to be made by those still fortunate enough to have substantial incomes. Those best able to respond to the need of the country should not fail in their support."

Immense receipts of hogs at some of the leading markets west of Chicago enabled the buying side to rub out more of the recent price gains. Yesterday's peak was cut down to $4.45, showing a 15c loss, while the general average slumped 10c at $4.10.

Buying on eastern account was brisk and receipts here were only moderate for Friday, but Omaha and Sioux City reported 32,000 and 30,000 respectively, both totals being within 2,000 of the records at those points. Some advanced the theory that the increase in receipts in the west was due partly to the fact that snowstorms earlier in the week retarded the movement of supplies.

Direct Buying Ebbs.

Direct buying in the country is reported much smaller because of the low level of bids made by packers lately. Little action was noted in the hog futures market yesterday. March contracts were offered at $5.25 and carried bids of $4.75 at the close. May light weights were bid $5.00. All January and February hogs were bid $4.00.

Receipts of cattle during the week have been largest since early last month, so packers were not anxious to take on the 3,500 head of medium grades offered here yesterday, resulting in a draggy "catch as catch can" trade with some loads going over for next Monday's trade. The bulk were the kinds that are selling at $5.50@6.50 and only occasional lots were good enough to pass $7.00.

One load of 1,134 lb averages topped the list at $9.00. Best grades of cattle are closing 25@50c higher than a week ago, while medium grades are off that much. Poorer grades have been in better demand and are closing higher than a week ago.

Sheep Receipts Large.

Sheep receipts were above normal yesterday and buyers were eager to reduce the initial costs of lambs. Prices were pounded down mostly 50c and the bulk of the supply did not sell until late afternoon rounds. Sellers strived to recover part of the loss near the close, but buyers were equally determined and some bands went over unsold.

A scattering of the best sorted lambs reached $6.40@6.50, while the bulk sold at $5.75@6.25, only the medium grades lacking finish selling below the $6.00 line. Receipts at the seven leading markets yesterday totaled 56,000 against 23,000 a week ago and were above any corresponding Friday on record.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 60,000 to 80,000. R. B. Ellis marked 80,000; W. T. Reneker, 78,000; A. G. Welhener, 77,009; F. M. Sherwood, 75,000; J. M. Waters and F. Knutzen, 71,000; G. W. Chandler, 70,000; J. T. Brown, 65,000; G. Dunlap, 63,000; F. B. Orb, 62,000, and L. Vining, 60,000.

BUTTER AND EGGS LOWER

Butter, egg and potato futures were weak on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange yesterday, butter dropping ½c and eggs ⅝@¾c while potatoes closed unchanged to 4c lower. Statistical news in eggs continued bearish, the four markets again reporting a lower movement than last year, receipts fairly heavy and the spot market weak. Fresh graded first eggs, January, sold at 18¾c, off 1¾c from the previous close. Sales: butter, 111 cars; eggs, 34 cars; potatoes, 10 cars. Deliveries: butter, 1 car. Prices follow:

SMALL GAINS IN COTTON

A strong finish, with prices around the top following a slow but firm market during the early part of the day, featured trading in cotton yesterday. Buying by Wall street and Japanese interests, combined with the strength and advance in the stock market, brought a better feeling, with covering by shorts in the last hour which carried prices up to the best of the day and closed them at the top. Net gains on futures in Chicago were 5@10 points, with New York up 9@12 points on futures and 10 points on spots, the price there being 6.55c. Galveston was 6.35c and Houston 6.30c. New Orleans was closed to celebrate the victory at the battle of New Orleans. Liverpool closed 5@6 points lower.

A distinct improvement was reported in business in Worth street for forward and prompt shipment with prices firmer. New Orleans reported an increased demand from spinners in central Europe, where stocks of cotton are very low. Exports since Aug. 1 aggregate 4,196,262 bales, compared with 4,145,599 bales a year ago. Prices follow:
